4. Norton Mezvinsky: Chelsea Clinton's LaRouchite Uncle

Norton Mezvinsky told the New York Daily News this week that he wasn't invited to the wedding because of a family feud with his nephew that stemmed from his support for his disgraced brother, former Iowa Representative Edward Mezvinsky, whose plans to move to New York and write a book after his release from prison were opposed by nephew Marc.

But there's another reason the Clintons might want to keep the Mezvinsky -- who says he's the "senior male member of the family, and Marc's only uncle" -- well away from Rhinebeck on Saturday: Mezvinsky's ties to the conspiracy mongering anti-Semite Lyndon LaRouche.

Just last year, Mezvinsky shelled out his own cash to bring LaRouche to speak at Central Connecticut State University, where he taught for 42 years. In February 2009, Mezvinsky spoke to assembled LaRouchites at the Schiller Institute in Rüsselsheim, Germany, which was founded by LaRouche's wife Helga Zepp-LaRouche.

That Mezvinsky would invite such a man to campus -- much less pay his expenses -- could be reason enough for the former First Family to treat him like a stranger. LaRouche, after all, has charged Queen Elizabeth II with running a drug cartel and sponsoring the Oklahoma City bombing in 1995.

LaRouche has a long history of Israel-bashing. Writing in the August 22, 1978 issue of New Solidarity, he deployed a tactic later used by Holocaust denier David Irving to declare that, "the Nazis did not kill six million Jews, but they did kill upwards of a million and a half." Thus, while not denying the fact of the Holocaust, LaRouche did seek to deny the uniqueness of its horror. In such a scheme, Jews are portrayed as just another victim of the War in a group that includes Poles, Russians, and Gypsies.

In the same piece, LaRouche shows himself decades ahead of Stephen Walt and John Mearsheimer's own conspiracy-theory-mongering work, The Israel Lobby. He offers an early example of the "linkage theory," which holds that Israel is a strategic burden to the U.S., by claiming that the Zionist lobby is:

[T]he most visible of the internal enemies of the United States--and of the human race--at this specific moment. Every policy it is currently pushing is pure evil....

These rants weren't lost on the late New York senator Daniel Patrick Moynihan, whose imprimatur gave then-New York senate candidate Hillary Rodham Clinton the boost she needed to succeed him in the Senate in 2000. In 1986, Moynihan called LaRouche a "fascist" and an "anti-Semite."

Would the mother of the bride forget her esteemed predecessor's words about LaRouche and then publicly associate with his supporter?

LaRouche, who spent five years of a 15-year federal prison sentence behind bars for tax code violations and conspiracy to commit mail fraud, claims he was subjected to a "surgical procedure" to torture him while incarcerated. He claimed at the time that with his sentencing, "the vital interests of the United States have been put in jeopardy."

Yet Mezvinsky's public statements reveal a high opinion for LaRouche. According to the Executive Intelligence Review, the house organ for LaRouche's conspiracies, during Mezvinsky's introductory remarks at the May 4, 2009 event at Connecticut State, he praised EIR as:

[A] weekly magazine he founded in the mid-1970s, which is, I have personally discovered, must reading [emphasis original] for numerous members of the United States Congress, United States State Department officials, other politicos in Washington and around the world, and many academics.

And:

At major Middle-East-oriented think-tanks in Washington and elsewhere, factual information, supplied by the LaRouche group, at least some of his views, are regularly studied and considered. During the past year, especially, when I have been in Washington starting a new Middle East political think-tank, I have witnessed this personally.

Projection, perhaps, or wishful thinking? Mezvinsky's think tank, the International Council for Middle East Studies (ICMES), is, according to its web site, "located on the premises of the International Law Institute, with office space provided by Professor Don Wallace (Georgetown University), Chair of the ICMES Board of Directors."

Given Mezvinsky's potentially embarrassing past support for LaRouche, and his fawning words for the rant-filled Executive Intelligence Review, perhaps he was the family member whose presence just couldn't be tolerated. People may pretend not to notice a crazy old aunt in the attic. But even a $3 million wedding can't hide a LaRouche-supporting uncle in the receiving line.

Winfield Myers is director of Campus Watch. Asaf Romirowsky is an adjunct scholar at the Middle East Forum.

Chelsea Clinton's husband, Marc Mezvinsky, is the son of Edward Mezvinsky [who is son of Jewish grocery store owner Abe Mezvinsky] who served as a Democrat congressman from the first district in Iowa from 1973 to 1979. In 2003, he was convicted of fraud for allegedly scamming over $10 million from banks and individuals using e-mail fraud methods.

I purrdict electric cars will not catch on big time, in America.Engines are Engines, Motors are Motors.People who buy electric (Motors) cars, most of those people will not be satisfied with the short driving range of electric cars, especially in the Winter time.Hybrid cars cost too much money.Too much money for the amount of bread.Many, many years ago, there were a lot of electric cars in the big cities.

Band allocations and time zone conversions for the USA. Includes broadcast bands used outside the USA. For multi-use bands, primary usage is shown.
Some stations operate outside official bands. Information is from Oct 2008

Frequencies are in kHz. Usual spacing in shortwave broadcast bands is 5 kHz. Frequencies above 10000 kHz tend to propagate better during the day; frequencies below 10000 kHz tend to propagate better at night.

Phone line as SW antenna

WARNINGS AND DISCLAIMERS

Connecting unapproved devices to phone lines may be illegal in your area. Telephone lines present a potential shock hazard. Do not use this antenna for transmitting. Use at your own risk.

INTRODUCTION

This article describes how to use a phone line as a shortwave receiving antenna. Performance will vary depending on the kind of phone line you have. Overhead lines usually make okay antennas, while underground lines | usually don't. Phone lines carrying DSL service may be unsuitable because | DSL operates over a wide spectrum. A phone line antenna will generally pick up more power line noise than a dedicated antenna, so don't expect to | use it for DX work. Nevertheless, I found that it outperformed the
| telescopic whip antennas built into many portables.

A reader sent in this suggestion: If you're concerned about connecting the phone line directly to the receiver, try wrapping the phone cord several times around the receiver's telescopic whip antenna instead. Performance may not be as good as a direct connection, but it will probably be better than the whip antenna by itself.

Someone else wrote asking about lightning protection. I haven't thought much about it because thunderstorms are rare in my area. Most phone lines have lightning arrestors on them where they enter the house, but the lightning arrestors may pass enough energy during a lightning strike damage a receiver. My suggestion is to disconnect the antenna when not in use if you experience frequent thunderstorms.

HOW TO DO IT

The simplest connection is a single capacitor between the phone line and receiver. The capacitor eliminates all phone line voltages, including | ringing, so that they will not harm the receiver. The capacitor should | be rated 250 volts or higher.

Phone line RF connector
red .01 uF center cond. / \ or o--------||-----------------------------|-o | To receiver
green \ /
50 ohm coax |
ground |
or o-----------------------------------------+ N.C. shield

N.C. = no connect. I originally connected the phone line ground (yellow wire) to this terminal, but reception was better without it (if you do this, play it safe and put a .01 uF capacitor in series). If another ground is available, you can connect it to this terminal.

If you are picking up local AM or FM radio stations on the shortwave bands, it is likely that your receiver is overloaded. Inexpensive and portable receivers usually lack the filtering needed to eliminate this interference, but you can make your own filters. Filters can also be | purchased from shortwave dealers (see below for recommendations).

A high-pass filter can be used to remove signals below the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from local AM stations and presents a high impedance to the phone line at audio frequencies so that the phone line remains balanced.

A low-pass filter can be used to remove signals above the shortwave bands. It rejects interference from FM and TV stations, as well as VHF 2-way radio transmitters. If you use both filters, connect the output of the first filter to the input of the second (don't forget to connect their ground terminals together). It doesn't matter which filter is connected first.

These filters also work well with random wire antennas. Just connect the antenna in place of the phone line.

The filter(s) should be connected to the phone line in this manner:

Phone line RF connector
red -------- center cond. / \
or o----| |-------------------------|-o | To receiver
green | | \ /
| FILTER | 50 ohm coax |
ground | | |
or o----| |----------------------------+
N.C. -------- shield

| terminal):

FILTER PLANS

The original credit for the high-pass and low-pass filters goes to Paul Blumstein and John Shalamskas, respectively. Edited versions of their articles are included here:

Date: 09 Jan 91 00:54:08 GMT
From: paulb@harley.TTI.COM (Paul Blumstein)
Subject: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

The following ascii-schematic diagram is a high pass filter that will filter out Broadcast Band (MW) stations. I found it a great boon to my shortwave listening since local MW stations overload my ATS-803A front end & appear in SW, especially with a long antenna.

If you remember my antenna saga, I went from 50 feet to 150 feet & had overload problems causing me to cut back to 50 feet. (Even at 50 feet, I still have some MW interference). I took the advice of Gary Coffman and looked up filters in the ARRL Handbook. With the filter in place, I intend to try to increase my antenna length again.

Anywho, here is the filter, for interested parties.

--------||---+----||-----+----||-----------
} }
{ {
} }
-------------+-----------+-----------------

The outer capacitors are 1500 pf ceramic disks.
The inner capacitor is 820 pf ceramic disk.
The squiggly things are coils (two total). Each one is 2.7 uh.
(a close value will do).

Subject: Re: BC Band Hi-Pass Filter

I built the filter that Paul Blumstein posted recently and measured it on a gain-phase analyzer. Here are its characteristics:

100 kHz -120dB
500 kHz -68dB

1000 kHz -38dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2100 kHz -3dB

The source and load impedances were 50 ohms. Because the filter has five elements, the attenuation is 30dB per octave. The measurements confirmed this.

This filter seems to be a good compromise between interference attenuation and passband response. There is very little attenuation in the 120m band and above. It could use a little more attenuation at the upper end of MW, which could be done with more stages or a higher cutoff frequency. Alternatively, you could build two of these filters and put them in series. (Since two 1500pF capacitors in series are really 750pF, you could eliminate one cap.)

Just for fun, I put 470 ohms in series with the input to see how the filter performed with an antenna mismatch. The response was:

100 kHz -105dB
500 kHz -60dB
1000 kHz -35dB
1600 kHz -15dB
2300 kHz -3dB

These figures are normalized to the passband response of -15dB, which is due to the impedance mismatch between the source and load and would have been there without the filter. Hence, the filter works almost as well in spite of the mismatch, which is good news to those who use long-wire antennas.

Subject: Construction of filters for SW reception

Several people have asked for construction details of the filters I built for my DX-440.

The high-pass filter helped some, but in my location the VHF/UHF broadcasters are also causing problems. So, I dug out the ARRL handbook and chose a 7-element Chebyshev low-pass design that is -3 dB at 35 MHz, -20 dB at 43 MHz, and -50 dB at 64 MHz (all calculated; it works well in practice!)

LOW-PASS FILTER (Rejects FM, TV, etc.)

chassis ground

I had to do a little more improvising at this point. I used .33 uH instead of .36, and .66 uH instead of .42, but it works fine.

The 5-lug terminal strips were perfect for these circuits, since there are 4 lugs plus a grounded lug. All "ground" connections go to the lug that is mounted to the chassis, and the other 4 lugs are used for each of the connections on the signal line. One terminal strip is used per filter. Since both filters were necessary to clean up the hash, I am going to put them both into one box when I get the time.

The proper way to connect them is in series, i.e.

signal in ------- filter 1 -------- filter 2 -------- signal out

There is no difference between ends. They are "bilateral" which means you can't possibly hook them up backwards. (In the above schematics,

COIL WINDING

You can make the coils yourself using this formula:

L = 0.2 * B^2 * N^2 / (3B + 9A + 10C)

L is the inductance, in uH
A is the length of the coil, in inches
B is the mean diameter of the coil, in inches
C is the diameter of the wire, in inches
N is the number of turns

For small wire, you can assume C = 0.

That's absolute crap Bob! The problem lies with you and the rest of your trolls and that obsession with Steve Kramer! You think every poster is a Kramer sock puppet! How the hell can you tell who is who? You even think I'm a Steve Kramer sock puppet! How wrong can you be! Are you afraid of Steve Kramer? Do you blame him for your pickle business being closed down? Hate to tell you Bob but that was your own ineptitude, nothing more, nothing less!

Anyway, you trolls have more than your fair share of sock puppets! For all we know, you might be creating the Steve Kramer sock puppets yourselves just to satiate your Steve Kramer fetish.

If I recall correctly, their night time pattern is to the west, to protect the channel(s) shared by others to the east. So copying them at your location shouldn't be much of a problem.

You will have to tell this to Scott Koplin. He posts as;
nurk_fred2000 and as kop. He brought the trolls to the scuba newsgroup.

He is, or at least was, one of the rec.scuba posters, famous for threatening people, getting fired from every job he ever held, and for posting photos of himself IN REC.SCUBA holding silenced machineguns.
This photo was taken from JOR's scuba archive;

Some people think it's an effort to make up for the fact that he was kicked out of the Marine Corps.
I think it's his effort to make up for having a tiny dick. :o)

Well, so much for the trolls talking about deportation. According to the ThaiVisa message forum, Kramer had lunch in Chiang Mai yesterday with the owner of the largest bookstore in town and a group of friends. Appearently they ate at a place called The Empress Hotel and had the buffet lunch.

This is hard core proof that you lied, Larbgai.
Don't you even have enough respect for yourself to feel embarrassed by the fact? I realize that no one else respects you, but I'd hope that you might at least have some shred of self respect.

I guess not.

 HUH???? Have I missed something?

A sock puppet puts a post on usenet saying that Kramer dined with friends in Chiang Mai yesterday and you want me to believe this is true?

Are you really for real?

One thing for sure, Kramer would'nt be there because (a) he was deported for pornography and will NEVER set foot in Thailand again legally and (b) he's too tight to stump up for a feed anywhere.

You really are going to do better than this Steve.

- I can get KXNT and KDWN every night.

Dave both are in Las Vegas, NV and only about 200 Air Miles away from you in SoCal

Here KXNT-AM on 840 kHz is blocked http://www.radio-locator.com/cgi-bin/finder?call=KXNT&x=17&y=2&sr=Y&s=C by KMPH in Modesto, CA {Oakdale} which is only about 30 Air Miles away.
http://www.radio-locator.com/cgi-bin/finder?sr=Y&s=C&call=KMPH&x=0&y=0

But KDWN-AM is strong here on 720 kHz just about every night.
http://www.radio-locator.com/cgi-bin/finder?sr=Y&s=C&call=KDWN&x=0&y=0
as is KKOH-AM on 780 kHz from Reno, NV

YES - The great Coast-to-Coast AM Radio Broadcast

In RHF's Radio World :
I have always thought that all 50KW Nighttime AM/MW Radio Stations should be required to Air Original 'Local' Programming at Night as a condition of having their 50KW Power; or scale them all back to 25KW from Sunset-to-Dawn.

Where is the 'Middle of the Night' Mystery of Radio when you can hear Coast-to-Coast AM across the AM/MW Radio Band and NYC, CHI, STL, KC, DEN, DAL, SLC, LVN SEA, & LA all sound the same. This is about 100 AM/MW Radio Stations

Hi Bob.

Your asking a lot from a single receiver. from the lists i have followed, over the years, there is really no one best receiver. some like the Icoms- R-9000 and the 8500. myself, i didn't care for the R-9K. runs way too hot, just fries itself over a short time. you need the double fan rear panel from Sherwood to help it live. i like the 8500, works well on HF, and just OK on the higher bands. the real stand-out is the AOR R-5000 +3. it handles most of the spectrum well. some don't like it because of the small front panel and knobs. i run it with the SDU, or a computer set-up. for me it's a keeper, can be had for not too bad prices. my opinions here. you are better off with a good HF receiver, and a second for the higher bands. no one receiver, does it all, well. there are a few Gov/Mil receivers coming on the markets, as they are replaced by SDR types. ebay is not a good rule of thumb. you might want to read the EHam listings for some ideas. another good place to watch are the Canadian salvage listing's. use a good search engine. just watch out for the DE-mils, some Gov's remove parts before they put them up for sale. a lot of these receivers are one-off's, meaning repair and parts are hard to find. and keep away from the so called spy receivers, mostly crap, some one puts a radio in a suite-case and rips off a buyer. YMMV.

Good luck
Drifter...

Yeah, plenty of decent stuff out there. I'd never get a 'full spectrum' RX. To many compromises.

Get basic dedicated units.

The 545 should certainly be able to handle HF, though I've never been a fan of the JVC offerings.

I'm with Ace on this, lots of good stuff out there. the 545 is a super receiver on HF. above that, i can't help you.

I mention the Icons, because i have owned both. i didn't list the IC-R9500, because i haven't owned one. i did play with one at Universal last year. but, not long enough to really get a grip on it. another Icom i do have is the r-7100. it starts at the 25 meg band tho. but, it hears vary good on the upper bands, and prices are not too bad. if i haven't owned it, i can't recommend it. ya gotta live with a good receiver for awhile. as they say in the "Premium RX group", you gotta drive it for awhile. BTW, don't forget about the yahoo groups, there is a group for most any receiver ever made. and, as always, a good antenna can make all the difference.

Starting in late 1996, Mezvinsky solicited $365,000 from a Maryland urologist. A year later he got $1 million from a certified financial planner in Florida. Between January 1998 and January 1999, he received $1.2 million from an Italian businessman. In 1999 he got yet another $1 million from a retired Pennsylvania business executive and $500,000 from a Virginia investor. Each got a different story, but the general pitch was that if they would give Mezvinsky their money--which he promised to hold in trust at a U.S. bank, risk-free--he would guarantee a hefty and quick profit.

But even as Mezvinsky was scamming people, he was letting himself get scammed by West Africans--apparently hoping that the big score would help him pay off the large debts he was accumulating."

Nah, it's Takin (who is a pom!) doing what he does best, creating sock

You'll have seen how he took note of my observation of the pommy accent and his rather lame attempt to modifiy it. Of course, you need brains to All those stories about the Clintons taking and breaking on their way out of the White House were pure Karl Rove fantasy. Never happened.

Your logic escapes me.

China proves that capitalism trumps any other ideal. They went straight from Communist totalitarian to corporatist fascism without blinking an eye. And they don't employ near everyone. There are hundreds of millions of unemployed Chinese.

Nah, it's called "rec.radio.SHORTWAVE", and there is lots o' stuff on shortwave, some of it even DX, that depend on ears or eyes. A few examples:

voice [AM, FM, SSB], CW...(and yes, there is FM voice in the 3-30 MHz range!) Shortwave radio using ears.

>> - If you see it with your eyes, it's not DX?

How forgetful of you to overlook the 3-30 MHz ("shortwave") visual modes:

RTTY,PSK, SSTV...Shortwave radio using eyes.

Try broadening your horizons...there is a lot to hear -- and SEE on the shortwave bands!

but they do not function to employ people. i agree with the rest. but capitalism is not a political system, it does not insure freedom. it

Most likely, it was of course not the Clintons themselves but rather disgruntled employees whose jobs went 'poof'.

Well, the poor, (I'm one of them) pay no income tax, so therefore the money that keeps things running comes from somewhere.

I recall hearing something about 44,000 folks in NYC that pay over 50% of the taxes there.

And of course, as we all know well, there is no such thing as an orderly transfer of power when it comes to the Liberal/Democrat/Marxist/Socialists.

"Socialism with Chinese Characteristics" http://english.peopledaily.com.cn/90002/92169/92211/6275043.html

The Chinese planning system has encountered the same problems of inflexibility and inadequate responsiveness that have emerged in other centrally planned economies [which all have failed]. The basic difficulty has been that it is impossible for planners to foresee all the needs of the economy and to specify adequately the characteristics of planned inputs and products [Mises, Hayek, Friedman- http://mises.org]. Beginning in 1979 and 1980, the first reforms were introduced on an experimental basis. Nearly all of these policies increased the autonomy and decision-making power of the various economic units and reduced the direct role of central planning. [Uh oh!]

In the 1980s, rural China gained the upper hand, and the result was rapid as well as broad-based growth. China’s rural economy took off in the 1980s, led by ‘township and village enterprises’ that were essentially private, only to be ignored in the 1990s by state-led development that focused on urban regions such as Shanghai. The ‘Shanghai miracle’ – as any businessman who has worked there knows – was not the simple triumph of capitalism, but of a stronger and more intrusive (and effective) state. If one wants to understand the policy origins of China’s growing divide between rich and poor, urban and rural, one need look no further.

In the 1990s, urban China triumphed. In the 1990s, the Chinese state reversed many of its productive [private capitalist] rural experiments, with long-lasting damage to the economy and society. [China's post-Mao Tse Dung leaders were well aware of the dangers of rural power. That is how, afterall, Mao Tse Dung and Communism came to power]. A weak financial sector, income disparity, rising illiteracy, productivity slowdowns, and reduced personal income growth are the product of the Socialism with Chinese characteristics of the 1990s and beyond. While GDP grew quickly in both decades, the welfare implications of growth differed substantially. The single biggest obstacle to sustainable growth and financial stability in China today is its poor political governance. China faces some of its toughest economic challenges and substantial vulnerabilities that require fundamental institutional reforms.

When I say “capitalism,” I mean a full, pure, uncontrolled, unregulated laissez-faire capitalism—with a separation of state and economics, in the same way and for the same reasons as the separation of state and church.

The best example of Freedom is the full, pure, uncontrolled, unregulated laissez-faire capitalism that was pre-1989 Hong Kong:

It is no wonder that Communist China was intent on snuffing out Hong Kong laissez-faire capitalism.

Capitalism is a social system based on the recognition of individual rights, including property rights, in which all property is privately owned.

The recognition of individual rights entails the banishment of physical force from human relationships: basically, rights can be violated only by means of force. In a capitalist society, no man or group may initiate the use of physical force against others. The only function of the government, in such a society, is the task of protecting man’s rights, i.e., the task of protecting him from physical force; the government acts as the agent of man’s right of self-defense, and may use force only in retaliation and only against those who initiate its use; thus the government is the means of placing the retaliatory use of force under objective control.

A capitalist marketplace is a sort of Darwinian organism, evolved through natural selection as the fittest way to satisfy our needs. It is Human Nature. Itis natural. It is natural to be free - Born Free! And nothing you think or say will ever change that fact. It is normal.

Liberal Fascism, Progessivism, Socialism, Communism are abnormal. They are a mental disease.

This income disparity of which you point to is not a result of Capitalism.
On the contrary! It is the result of ever increasing government interference in free market capitalism.
If this interference is allowed to continue, and God forbid increase, it will result in far more disastrous consequences which are not so far off on the economic horizon.
Detroit and Chicago are well on this path.

Here is what is happening thanks to an ever increasing Socialist Creep of government influence and regulations of the U.S. economy.

I post the following for study as an example of the increasing rate of Socialism's detrimental creep into our economy.

As one had recently posted elsewhere with all emphasis mine:

It is a fact that governement officials are influenced by corporate wealth and thus increase regulations which snuffs out competition for this wealth.

If unregulated, free-market, laissez-faire capitalism were allowed to prosper, without any government interference, there would no way, no how, never be what you describe as "social and economic disasters". Certainly no where near as disasterous as the result of government interference.

Well, don't forget, every single slave owner in the old South was a Capitalist. Slavery seems to be the ideal Capitalist system. The owners of capital, whether it's farmland or factories, banks or baseball stadiums, bonds or interest bearing bank accounts, can get along much better if they don't have to pay their workers anything at all.

As we know from our textbooks, the aim of the capitalist is to acquire even more capital. The capitalists compete with other capitalists to accumulate as much additional capital as possible.

Labor, talent, skill, and other individual qualities can be traded for capital, but the value of labor is determined by the capitalists who are reluctant to part with their capital. Therefore, workers without any capital to start with are usually only capable of acquiring just enough for the individual to get by.

By contrast, since under a capitalist system, capital must be allowed to accumulate more capital, the more capital an individual has, the greater his ability to acquire more capital--the potential is endless. Sooner or later, all the available capital accumulates into fewer and fewer hands. Capitalism is a great system for capitalists.

what a load of steamy dung. hong kong never practiced lazy fair(i friedman over looked. same with singapore.

china is a hybrid of communism and capitalism. some call it fascism.
in my eyes a free market economy(fascism), and a communistic economy(marxism)have much in common and are almost identical. in either system almost all wealth and power ends up in the hands of a few.

a interventionist economy ran from 1933-1981, no hard recession, no depressions. as we slowly peeled away the new deal since 1981, every recession has become deeper, and the new norm since 1991 is the jobless recovery, and every uptick is fueled by debt and excessive bubbles, and the recovery time is taking longer to the point of near depression, or we may already be in one. and you call that success?

Interesting. I can tell you from my vantage point that the 'few' busted their butts trying to make a buck.

Meanwhile, those on real welfare, sit around and smoke crack, wear $300 + outfits every day, live in subsidized housing, where many can't even (or merely don't want to) come up with a sometimes $25 dollar a month rent payment, where clown 'tard homeys try to latch on to a white woman (who is in the subsidized housing, has a child, and also drives a late model car), and then scream 'racism' when the authorities boot said 'clown 'tard' leach out on the street for 'squatting'.

I listen to the scanner, and you'd be amazed, and I live in what might be considered a 'small town.

Thanks, Liberals!

Do a Google on 'The Four Chaplains'.

Heard the story a few weeks ago, and I know I heard it before, but did some further checking, made some calls, and found that Clark V. Poling, one of 'the four chaplains' had attended Hope College, here in Holland, Michigan.

A stamp was issued in 1948 in honour of the four brave men, who sacrificed their lives, so that others might live.

While doing my research, I rounded a corner, and encountered some German soldaten from WWII !

Seems as though a movie was being filmed about the holocaust.

Agreed. IMO keep your 545 for HF, it's a great rx. Get a decent SCANNER and antenna for receiving above 30 mhz. Most of those Jap full-spectrum radios fall short as far as scanning options go and can be a real pain in the ass to program, especially the AORs.

UAE to ban BlackBerry services, Saudi follows suit
By ADAM SCHRECK , 08.01.10, 04:43 PM EDT

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates -- The United Arab Emirates outlined plans Sunday to block BlackBerry e-mail, messaging and Web browsing services in a crackdown that could jeopardize efforts to establish the country as an international business hub.

The government cited a potential security threat because encrypted data sent on the devices is moved abroad, where it cannot be monitored for illegal activity. But the decision - quickly followed by a similar move in Saudi Arabia - raises questions about whether the conservative Gulf nations are trying to further control content they deem politically or morally objectionable.

Indeed. I do find it interesting to walk around town, and the campus, and remember that Mr. Poling was here. Now that I know exactly where a marker is that remembers both him, and others that served during WWII, which I'll visit tomorrow.

I plan to place a single rose there with a simple card. Maybe, some student, will stop to read it and hopefully remember.

What is interesting is that some staff members at the college were not aware of the story of Mr. Poling and the other Chaplains.

Another individual you might look at is Matt Urban.

One thing I do know, and that is that one never knows what lies within us, until we are called upon to produce it.

What I'm saying is that no one gets up on any given day hoping/expecting to be a 'hero' or do heroic things. They, and the circumstances, simply converge.

Pause, remember, and you'll put magic in the air.

And, Larry, thanks for your service to Our Country.

Why don't you just ask Robert Johnson? You KNOW he's been there several times asking the same question. Like you, his sole reason for living is wrapped around Kramer. It fills his thoughts 24/7... just like it fills yours. It's your obsession, your sickness, your master. You have no control over it. Kramer owns your soul. And to make things worse... you know it.

One further comment:

What I do find strange is that when I was trying to discover whether or not there was some plaque on the campus honouring Mr. Poling, it was mentioned to me that they (the college staff, I suppose) did not wish to turn the campus into a cemetery.

Yet, when I ponder a bit, so many buildings on the campus seem to be named after past college presidents and/or large donors to the college.

I think an SDR still delivers the best bang for the buck. What type of computer were you using with your SDR? I have a Perseus SDR and I can't remember the last time I had a "glitch" or any other problem with it. It always outperforms my amateur transceiver on the MW band and any AM signals using the sych detector. Plus the noise blanker is more effective and the filters are really "brick wall".

I believe the top 5% actually control something like 99% of the nation's wealth, some of which they use to fund outfits like The Heritage Foundation, which constantly laments what a tough time the rich are having.

Yeah. A lot of the "thefts" and damage was simply broken chairs and stuff that breaks in any office. We have a whole room of "dead chairs" where I work at. We lose about one every other month. They're leased, so we don't care.

You should actually try to get Mr. Limbaughs' quotes correct if you're going to bash him, especially since you could have clicked on one link in your own cite to get to the actual transcript, which is quite different from what USA Today is claiming he said.

Or do you even care?
What became of Larry Nicholson? I used to listen to him talking on my

Milton Friedman’s Hong Kong Misconceptions

Written by Our Correspondent
MONDAY, 27 NOVEMBER 2006
The late economist saw what he wanted to see and ignored some fundamental accommodations in Hong Kong’s laisser-faire economy
Milton Friedman was without doubt a great economist and, more important, one who, for good or ill, influenced politicians including Ronald Reagan, Margaret Thatcher and Augusto Pinochet. But his much quoted praise for Hong Kong was based on brief visits and a tendency, the norm among economists as most other humans, to see only what he wanted to see.

So Friedman saw low taxes, private ownership of most utilities, no tariffs, no foreign exchange controls, no government intervention in industry. The low ratio of government spending to GDP in Hong Kong contrasted with that of its then-sovereign power, Britain, and explained much about the divergent economic performances of "socialist" Britain and "free" Hong Kong.
So determined was Friedman to defend his rosy version of Hong Kong's economy, which he attributed to its 1960s Financial Secretary John Cowperthwaite, that just weeks before his death he claimed to be seeing state intervention that it "would no longer be such a shining example of economic freedom".
What Friedman cared not to notice about the Hong Kong of the era of Cowperthwaite and later was that in three key areas of policy affecting the people the government was more socialist than its UK counterpart.
At one time 60 percent of the people lived in subsidized housing, mostly rented cheaply from the government, and some in Home Ownership Scheme flats, provided with cheap land and sold to lower-middle-income households. Even now that public housing has low priority and the home ownership scheme has ended, some 50 percent of the people still benefit from this massive intervention in the marketplace.
The intervention also partly accounts for the low apparent ratio of spending to gross domestic product. If the cost of the subsidized housing land were accounted for at market prices in the government budget, the ratio would be significantly higher.
Hong Kong people have also enjoyed almost free medical treatment at government clinics and hospitals. Friedman was against "free" medicine elsewhere but failed to notice it in Hong Kong. Likewise, education, at least up to the secondary level has long been almost entirely funded by the government.
In the days when Friedman was writing his praises for Hong Kong, the territory also had a relatively youthful workforce compared with western countries and thus less need for spending on pensions and help for the aged. Nor did Hong Kong have to spend anything significant on external security, the responsibility of London and now Beijing.
Friedman could actually have helped Hong Kong if he had criticized rather than ignored the excesses of these interventions in the marketplace. They had originally been spurred by fears of social unrest as the then-colony attempted to absorb waves of migrants from the mainland with nowhere but squatter huts to live.
It was necessary intervention in the marketplace. The government's lack of ideological commitment to laisser faire was summed up by Cowperthaite's successor, Philip Haddon-Cave, as "positive non-interventionism." This bit of semantic gobbledegook essentially meant that it preferred not to intervene but had a paternal duty to do so on occasion.
Hong Kong's problem now is that policy change has not kept pace with changing economic and social circumstances. It is hooked on high land prices for the private sector as a revenue-raising measure, which leaves a large proportion of the public trapped in the subsidized housing sector.

Likewise the free if basic medical system is stretching the government as the population ages, drug and equipment costs rise and public expectations rise. But it is difficult to push people back to the private sector because that thrives on providing very expensive services to the top 15% or so of the population. Indeed, private medicine in Hong Kong is so expensive that instead of being a money earner for Hong Kong, as it is for Singapore, it is often cheaper to fly to Sydney or Singapore, let alone Bangkok, and get better treatment.

Nor did Friedman pay any attention to the lack of competition in many areas of the domestic economy and the high returns given to competition-free utility companies. Presumably it was oversight rather than a belief in freedom to extort was behind this lapse.

So, Dr Friedman, Hong Kong mourns your passing and appreciates the praise you heaped upon it. But it would be well if warped notions of its realties do not become future textbook examples.

So, his staff corrected the quote on the transcript website to cover up his ignorance. I know what I heard and it appears to be the same thing everybody else heard.

Score? I don't think you deserve a point for falling for the same old lies this hatefull drug crazed fat man spews each day. Infact, he should loose his radio show for covering up his shear stupidity over the years and the destruction he caused to the republican party.

the farther south or more rural you go, the more introverted and refute it then. because its a historical fact. OBTW, a liberal cannot be a fascist. fascism is the final decay of conservatism. hitler was a conservative, so was mussolini. they were bankrolled, supported, and conservatives served in high places in their governments right up to the last day of the war.

hitler hated jews, because most jews are liberal. he also hated socialists, communists, trade unionists, minorities, homosexuality, abortion, the mentally ill, the ones with physical defects, these are all conservative values.
so you are merely projecting:)

More crazy ass nonsense? Like the Johnson, Nixon, Carter, Reagan, Bush, etc, death lists? People die all the time. Nothing all that mysterious. Shit, a bunch of women I went to school with have died over the last 5 or so years. No evil conspiracy there, just cancer, Hep C, aneurysms, heart trouble, etc.

No, I don't care about the "tainted blood scandal".

I have no idea who Larry Nicholson is/was.

I don't care about him, either.

Loose? I listen to Mr. Limbaugh most every day. If I hear him say something out of the ordinary, I take the time to check out his statements. So many times, I've heard him misquoted in other media outlets.

I KNOW what the truth is, as I was ACTUALLY LISTENING.

Amazing thing is that here, on my home turf, I've heard numerous folks rail against Rush Limbaugh, and do you know, each and every one of them, I'll repeat, each and every one of them, when asked specifically whether they EVER, even once, listened to Rush, each and every one of them said NO.

Yet, they felt compelled to flap their fat lips against him.

Clown 'tards, what is one to do with them?

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Hired by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine. The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
The proof is right here in this web page...

Bob I agree that you should look for two radio's:
one a scanner for VHF/UHF and another to upgrade your 545 first generation DSP receiver.

I would look to a ham transceiver for an excellent third generation DSP receiver.
In my own case I have an Icom IC-7600 which is outstanding and a great upgrade on your old 545.
It has a wonderful scope display and has outstanding filters that are razor sharp and cuts through the mud like a surgeons knife.
It's DSP noise reduction and noise blanker are also first class.
The Icom 7600 came on the market in late 2009

I also have a Perseus SDR which has been trouble free, but like you, I prefer a conventional radio with outstanding performance and lots of bell's and whistls.

Because Kramer doesn't post to Usenet, and hasn't for years. Only you trolls seem to think he does, and claim that anyone and everyone, regardless of what countries they are posting from, are him. You claim that someone in Australia is him. You claim someone posting from Thailand is him (despite the fact that you say he can't be IN Thailand. You insist that he's posting from all over, all on the same day. But you don't seem to realize how foolish that makes you look to anyone reading your posts.

Kramer posts regularly in moderated groups and has for the past two years. Knife newsgroups, cooking newsgroups, Thai culture newsgroups. Trolls are not permited in those groups. Robert Johnson has been banned from the Thai culture group under half a dozen different names.

> Why is he relying on an anonymouse sock puppet to defend him?

I'm not defending him. That's just a by-product of proving that you trolls have been lying all along. Not only lying, but having make-believe parties for events that never took place. Having parties in your castles-in-the-air. It's one thing to have castles-in-the-air. It's quite another to live in them.

If you look at the archives, Kramer tried to meet with Johnson many, many times. Offered a dozen different meeting places, anything to try to coax Johnson out of his fortress. Johnson never showed up.

Would you like to try again, troll?

It's not insider knowledge. It's all posted to the Internet. Everything I've posted can be found and corroborated. Nothing the trolls post cross-reference anything but other troll posts.

Here's the proof...
The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Hired by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

* The question remains..... WHY??

IF your are not Kramer (as you insist) why do you bother researching all this stuff and loyally defend him against all the compelling evidence to the contrary?

Why is Kramer too frightened to ring an old man in Chiang Mai and invite him out for a cup of coffee in a public place???

How much time have you wasted defending this pornographer that you say you don't know???

The coffee is on me, want one??

Actually that is NOT a 'fact' : That is a 'perception'.

The Ship 'exists' before the Horizon Transition Event

The Fact is {Reality} that : We Can Not See Over the Horizon.

It ain't 'Liberal' -and- It ain't 'Fascist'
-nor- Is it the two words 'Liberal' 'Fascism'

21st Century Thinking One Hyphenated Word
"Liberal-Fascist" and- "Liberal-Fascism"
-aka- Uber-Progressives {Socialist Elitists}

Hence the use of the 'Hyphen' between the Two Words Linking Them and Uniting Them into One Compound Word with a New Meaning and Usage.
"Liberal-Fascism" & "Liberal-Fascist"
-aka- Uber-Progressives {Socialist Elitists}

The Validity of the Term "Liberal-Fascist"

Denying the potential existence of 'Liberal-Fascism' does not change the fact that 'Liberal-Fascism' may and can exist in the 21st Century World Today.

Liberal-Fascist : -aka- Uber-Progressives {Socialist Elitists} Employing the Justification, Means and Tactics of Fascism {National Socialism} to Achieve the Ends of a One Party Liberal {Socialist} Agenda is what has morphed into "Liberal-Fascism" and those who are the Agents-of-One-Party-Socialist-Change are in-fact Liberal-Fascist.
* Classically Fascism had one reasoned definition in the early 1900s. -but- Time Changes Words and their Meanings . . .

Time often changes Words and the Meaning of Words;
and that is part of the Evolution of Language with the Passage of Time.

Liberal & Fascist have now become One Newly 'Hyphenated' {Combination} Word "Liberal-Fascist" with it's own new unique 21st Century meaning.

- I thought the concentration of stations carrying C2C was a bit to high.
- However, one night I tuned the entire AM BCB, 530 to 1710 and copied

- stations carrying C2C. That works out to "every 131 kHz". I'm sure others
- have different results to to location, antennas, etc.
- VegasNightOwl

Some where here on RRS is a Post where I Listened to the AM/MW Radio Band all night long and heard Coast-to-Coast AM on more than 50 ?80+? different Radio Stations with re-runs in several time slots from Dusk to Dawn.

Maybe 'Syndicated' Radio Programming itself needs to be limited to 250 Re-Broadcasters versus the unlimited 500 or more now common 24&7 :
That would bring about more Individual Unique Content and More Diversity on the Air too ~ RHF

I guess the 9 times I copied it wasn't too bad considering it was a car radio driving home. I'm sure with a better setup, many more could be copied.

DSP is the future. Better specs; less money.

My K3 has an I+Q quadrature (binaural?) audio output for computer speakers. There is a panadapter available, but I'd probably just use something crude and home made at the first IF (8 MHz) into a Winbox Netbook running Power SDR.

Since I'm exclusively PSK31 right now, and not contesting, I'm happy to use my ears and the waterfall. I have 2.4K, 400, and 250 HZ filters at the first i.f. Then of course continuously variable width at baseband (aka 15 kHz final i.f.). This doesn't aid desense, but can make audio more bearable.

I am an Anarchist Socialist. We don't care about the "financial well-being" of America.

Until the Civil War, import duties largely covered the cost of government.

Obviously a plant by the plasmoids.

I got the TV because it was a 50" hi def for under $1,000

Because it is 720p it is perfect for sports, especially football.

I run my lamp on 120 Watts (vs 150). I expect to get many more years of service, as I only run it Thursdays, Sundays, and Monday nights (except during playoffs when I add Saturdays).

Two separate issues here... First, I do for the same reason you do. :o)
There is need to show the world just what you trolls really are.

Second, there is ABSOLUTELY NO EVIDENCE TO THE CONTRARY regardless of how many times you wish to say there is. If there is, post it just as I have posted proof to show your lies.

From now on, that is all I will do. I will keep re-posting this proof of your lies. Every time you post the world will see for themselves that you are lying.

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Hired by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.

Get it right Bob! YOU are the clown prince of Chiang Mai, hated by expats and locals equally! I'm not surprised they hate you Bob, knowing what sort of "business" you've been running behind those walls! Has David Leonard Arthur (aka Larbgai) been sampling your wares of late?

Heck, even Michelle (my belle) referred to his 'home country' as Kenya.

this was during the recovery of the great free market blowout known as the great depression. once fdr jettisoned the austerity idiots in government, growth soared again in 1938. today is growth soaring, no.

again, these were not a great recession. most economic records going back to the depression are falling right now. all recessions since 1933 have been mild, till 1981, then they got ever worse, including the new norm, the jobless recovery that started in 1991.

most records set by recessions since 1933 are falling. what does the great recession mean? it means its worse than all others have been since the great depression. and i am not convinced yet that this is a recession, and its over with. in 1930 the conservative idiots running america thought all was well again. and yes, obama and his advisers are idiots.

What Fascism Is & Isn't

No other word causes so much misunderstanding, confusion, and heated debate in politics than fascism. The term has been applied to many individuals such as McCarthy, Hoover, and others. It is frequently used to describe government policies and government themselves, often incorrectly. What then is fascism exactly? Webster's Dictionary defines it as: "A government system marked by a centralized dictatorship, stringent socioeconomic controls and belligerent nationalism." But the author takes exception with that definition. At best, the definition is vague and abstract. Nor does the definition seem capable of taking into all forms of fascism.
There is a resurgent, widespread attempt by the far right to label fascism as a form of socialism. Fredrick von Hayek was the first to attempt labeling the Nazis as socialists in his book The Road to Serfdom published in 1944.70 The hard right quickly adopted it, as it allowed the hard right to escape the charges that they had much in common with the Nazis.2 Such endeavors are not only silly, but dishonest as well and represent an attempt by the far right to distance themselves for their earlier support of Hitler.
Hayek's book is based on two erroneous assumptions from the very beginning. He first assumes that fascism and communism are one and the same, as they are both totalitarian systems. This makes about as much sense as calling a maple tree a pine tree because both are trees. His second erroneous assumption lays in his belief that only socialism or liberalism leads to totalitarian systems. In fact, all political systems can lead to totalitarian systems and all political systems are inherently unstable, as is any system created by man.
From there, Hayek takes severe liberties with history. For instance, he goes on to claim that by deliberate policy the United States by allowed the growth of cartels and syndicates after 1878.71 Indeed this date and time period is significant, but not for a move towards socialism or liberalism. Rather, it's the opposite a move towards fascism and corporate rule. Even a reader with a rudimentary knowledge of American history would recognize this time frame as the beginning of the robber baron era and laissez faire economics, precisely the type of economic policy Hayek holds in utmost esteem.

Hayek offers little proof to support his conclusions; in fact the book is devoid of any proof or even examples to support his findings. The book degenerates into an argument based upon unsubstantiated assertion. He argues against the nation state and proposes a supernational authority or world federation made up of the financial elite. In essence, Hayek proposes a world made up of sovereign corporations accountable to no one. Not only did Hayek take severe liberties with American history, he ignored the very nature of fascism in Germany and Italy.
In various speeches made shortly after the March on Rome, Mussolini stated, "We must take from state authority those functions for which it is incompetent and which it performs badly... I believe the state should renounce its economic functions, especially those carried out through monopolies, because the state is incompetent in such matters... We must put an end to state railways, state postal service and state insurance." The state returned large monopolies to the private sector after returning them to profitability such as the Consortium of Match Manufactures, privatized the insurance system in 1923, the telephone system in 1925, and many of the public works.
In Germany the Nazis announced they would end nationalization of private industries when they seized power. In 1932, Hitler returned control of the Gelsenkirhen company to private hands and in 1936 returned the stock of "United Steel" to private hands. Throughout 1933-1936, the Nazi returned to private hands the control of several banks: Dresdner, Danat, Commerz and Privatbank, the Deutsche Bank, and several others. In 1936, the steamship company Deutcher Schiff and Maschinenbau was returned to the private sector. In 1934, Dr. Schacht, the Nazi Minister of Economy, gave instructions to hasten the privatization of municipal enterprises. These enterprises were especially coveted by the rich industrialists, as they had been prosperous even during the depression.
Both in fascist Italy and Nazi Germany, the tax system was changed to one favoring business and the wealthy. The Nazis allowed industries to deduct from their taxable income all sums used to purchase new equipment. Rich families employing a maid were allowed to count the maid as a dependent child and reap the tax benefit. In Italy, the Minister of Finance stated: "We have broken with the practice of persecuting capital."73
Such programs, catering to big business and the rich elite, are more akin to the policies of the Reagan Administration than it is to any liberal administration including FDR's. Likewise, it was the rich industrialists that were behind the fascist movement in the United States during the 1930s. Thus it is no surprise that the right wing attempts to try and label fascism as socialism in trying to distance themselves from their previous support of fascism.

Perhaps the only redeeming feature in Hayek's book is his acknowledgement of environmental problems.72 Indeed this is significant, considering the book was first published in the 1940s, long before the birth of the environmental movement. Hayek readily acknowledges the problem of industrial pollution and the harmful effects of deforestation, yet he stops short of any meaningful solution. Instead of offering a viable solution Hayek condemns government regulation and would allow market forces to provide the solution. However, it was these same market forces that produced the problem. We have plenty of proof of such a fool hearty approach both here and globally. As late as the 1970s rivers caught fire in the United States, cities were smog stricken and harmful pollutants were damaging the environment world wide. Today we face the problems of global warming and ozone depletion, and the problem of environmental estrogens, which has the potential of being even more threatening than both global warming and ozone depletion.

But perhaps the most damning of all evidence that Hayek was dead wrong comes from the implementation of an economic system based on his beliefs. Hayek later taught at the University of Chicago, the same university that trained the "Boys from Chicago" who were the economic brains behind the fascist regime of Pinochet in Chile. There is no question in the matter that under Pinochet, Chile was indeed fascist. More alarming, Hayek is an idol to several top-level officials in the George W. Bush administration. They are dangerous close to imposing a fascist style economy on the United States.

In order to dispel the myth of the Nazis being socialists we need to first define socialism. Socialism is rigidly defined as an economic system in which the workers own the means of production and distribution of goods. A more relaxed definition would be simply that the workers maintain political control over the production and distribution of goods. Even using the more relaxed definition of socialism, the Nazis can not be labeled as socialists as there simply was no worker control over the production or distribution of goods in Nazi Germany. In fact, the Nazis outlawed legitimate labor unions. In place of the original unions, the Nazis implemented quasi-like unions that were controlled by the industrialists. In a déjà vu manner, the Republican Party has recently tried to enact a similar measure, conferring legal status on worker groups controlled by corporations. Some writers and historians have argued that you cannot have fascism without corporatism, as the corporate power structure has much in common with fascism. During the period preceding the outbreak of WWII it was common to refer to fascism as corporatism in polite English society.

More recently others have tried to define fascism as the "Third Way", in the sense that it borrowed ideas from both capitalism and socialism. The basic philosophy behind the "Third Way" incorrectly labels any regulations or government controls over businesses as socialism; essentially it's just a restatement of syndicalism. Such nonsense should be rejected whole heartily. It again represents an attempt to distance the right from their support of Hitler in the 1930s and ignores that the basis of the German economy under Hitler was a capitalist system where the means of production remained in private hands. Further, following the logic of the "Third Way," one would have to label all capitalistic systems as "Third Way," for throughout history there has never been a pure capitalistic system. A pure capitalist economy is so inherently and fatally flawed that it's never even been tried. But that is to be expected for any system that awards the winner with all the eggs. Nor has there been a pure socialistic system. Human greed simply prevents it.

The dangers of such nonsense can be illustrated with the following quote taken from a Baptists fundamentalist's web page in their labeling of the Japanese economy as fascist: However, Fascism is an economic term, denoting the type of economy where the Means of Production [factories, companies] and the ownership of raw materials [mines, oil wells] remains in the hands of private individuals, but where the government intervenes to determine how many competitors will be allowed to produce the same thing, how much is produced, and what prices may be charged.1
Here it can be seen that the term fascism has been clearly misapplied. This description could past for the economic theory of the fascist philosopher George Sorel. This is a description of syndicalism; it was the economic model of fascist Italy and Nazi Germany to a large extent. Syndicalism does draw some aspects from socialism, but the system is still a capitalistic system as ownership of the means of production and distribution of goods remain in private hands. It is no more socialism than the conclusion of the Robber Barons and the corrupt politicians of Tammy Hall. The only difference between this example of syndicalism is that the government participation is open versus the backroom corruption of politicians in Tammy Hall.
Not only Japan invoke syndicalism, but almost all the Pacific Rim nations do, to some extent. These are the same nations that the hard right has held up in the past as darlings of capitalism and free enterprise. Yet these are precisely the same economic policies of the Nazis that they have tried to foist off as socialism. The key distinction here is the means of production still remains in private hands, just as it did in Nazi Germany. No capitalistic society has ever existed without some form of syndicalism or government control over the economy. The closest America came to an entirely capitalistic system was either the 1890s and the Robber Barons or the laissez faire policies of Herbert Hoover, and as we all know, that didn't end too well in the Great Depression of the 1930s.
No where does the quote above refer to totalitarian control or extreme nationalism. In fact, they have tried to define fascism in strictly economic terms for their own purposes. But it does serve to point out the dangers of inventing the "Third Way" or the use of syndicalism in an attempt to label the Nazis. The problem here is determining where syndicalism ends and capitalism begins. Is the trading of pollution credits a form of syndicalism or is it free enterprise? In America today, the hard right would attempt to label it as socialism, as they try to do with any laws or regulations of business. In fact, the past laws regulating corporations were much more severe and restrictive in the 1800s than today. One could argue that it was through syndicalism that the power elite and corporations gradually eroded those laws until corporations now enjoy more freedoms than what an individual enjoys. This is precisely what has happened in America.

But environmental and labor laws are not socialism. They are in fact nothing more than an attempt to bring an out of control system hell bent on exploitation of the environment and labor back to order. No labor law or environment law was ever passed in a vacuum. All of these laws were brought about by a need to correct an unhealthy or unsafe situation. While there are some corporations that strive to provide a clean and safe workplace, there are many whose only concern is the bottom line and they turn a blind eye towards safety and view their employees as expendable commodities.
Regulation of businesses or corporations by itself is not socialism. A business entity such as a corporation has no rights other than what privileges a society wishes to grant it. People have rights; a paper creation of a society such as a corporation has no inherent rights. Business entities such as corporations only have conditional privileges based upon providing for the common good of the society, which granted the charter. All such paper creations have an obligation to serve the society, which created it. Failing to perform that obligation, it loses any right for its continuing existence. It the obligation of that society to restrict the rights of such entities to promote equality for all and to prevent a ruling aristocracy from developing. This view is hardly socialism or even radical, unless one wishes to label Thomas Jefferson as a radical socialist as he more eloquently stated it:
"I hope we shall take warning from the example of England and crush in its birth the aristocracy of our moneyed corporations which dare already to challenge our Government to trial, and bid defiance to the laws of our country."3 Perhaps one of the better definitions of fascism comes from Heywood Broun, a noted American columnist in the 1930s:
"Fascism, is a dictatorship from the extreme right or to put it a little more closely into our local idiom, a government which is run by a small group of large industrialists and financial lords...I think it is not unfair to say that any businessman in America, or public leader, who goes out to break unions is laying the foundations for fascism"75

A definitive definition of fascism is a totalitarian government with extreme nationalist tendencies in which the government is controlled and operated for the benefit of a few elite. However, it should be noted that an all-encompassing definition of a complex system can not be simply stated. Such simple definitions undoubtedly fail in time. A caveat to the above definition would be anytime the government places the rights of corporations or the elite above the rights of the citizens, it represents a step towards fascism. A better insight into what fascism is can be obtained by listing the traits that are common to the classical fascist states of Franco's Spain, Nazi Germany and fascist Italy. A list of traits of fascism is presented below. Note that the first two are the two most defining traits, obviously many of the others can be applied to many other social-political systems as one moves down the list.

1. Totalitarian
2. Extreme nationalism
3. Top down revolution or movement
4. Destructive divisionism such as racism and class warfare
5. Extreme anti-communism, anti socialism, and anti-liberal views
6. Extreme exploitation
7. Opportunistic ideology lacking in consistency as a means to grab power
8. Unbridled Corporatism
9. Reactionary
10. The use of violence and terror to attain and maintain power
11. Cult-like figurehead
12. The expounding of mysticism or religious beliefs

Not all fascists need exhibit all of the traits once again it should be emphasized that all fascist states will exhibit a totalitarian view. Most fascist states will have an extreme nationalism policy. However, extreme nationalism is not mandatory. States such as Spain under Franco and Chile under Pinochet were indeed fascist states, but they could hardly be described as having a policy of extreme nationalism.

A brief look at the above traits and how they relate to fascism will convey a better understanding of what fascism really is, using Nazi Germany as an example. First, because it was undisputedly fascist and secondly because there is more literature available on the Nazis than on either fascist Italy or Franco's Spain. Moreover, the use of the Nazi's as an example is closer to the focus of this book, which is creeping fascism in America.

Creeping fascism is the gradual lost of freedoms of the masses to the power elite. Full-blown fascism has never appeared all at once. The Nazis took several years to reach the final state of full-blown fascism. It took the Nazis five years before Kristallnacht, which marks the beginning of the "Final Solution." The Nazis gradually took away the freedoms of the citizens of Germany until they were able to launch the Holocaust. This was the reason for including the caveat in the definition of fascism above, "Any action taken by the government that places the rights of the elites and corporations above the citizens is a step towards fascism."

Such actions will not look like fascism some may even appear to be reasonable. Its only when the summation of many such actions ends in a fascist state that such actions can be seen as a step towards fascism. Make no mistake in understanding that the power elite, those that own and run America's corporations, are fascist. They have forced war on this country to protect their assets, they have over-exploited their employees, they have used violence to bust unions, and they rely on divisionist policies such as racism and class warfare to maintain their power.

The erosion of our freedoms in the United States was prolonged by our constitution. Nevertheless, over time the lost of freedoms has left America at the edge of a chasm. Any further loss of freedoms and America will begin an irreversible slide into the deep abyss of fascism.
Before looking at the traits of fascism a brief review of the history of fascism and its roots in modern philosophy is needed. By looking at the roots of fascism in philosophy, we can gain an understanding why fascism is often described as reactionary. By looking at the various philosophers that have come to be associated with fascism, we will be able to see that many of these traits come directly from fascism's roots in philosophy. In that way, we can then see how some of these traits that can be applied to other social-political system are central to fascism.
Many writers have assumed that fascism has no intellectual or philosophical roots due to its lack of a consistent ideology. But such views are incorrect; the roots of fascism extend back to the French Revolution. The French Revolution is one of those landmark events in the history of Europe marking the beginning of a major shift in European culture and governments. In essence, fascism was a reaction to the French revolution. It was a reaction particularly to the slogan of the revolution of "Liberty, Equality, Fraternity" that was hated the most.
The concept of liberty from oppressive regimes in the daily lives of the citizens, including forced religious values, and the concept of voting and majority rule where the minority still retained a set of inalienable rights, incensed the early philosophers of fascism. Such a concept was a direct threat to the kings and nobles of the time, as well as to the church. Remember this was a time for debtor's prisons, indentured servants, and vassal states.
Equality, in the eyes of the law, was unspeakable. How could a mere peasant have the same rights under the law as the kings, nobles, and merchants? This was the time when the king's word was the law. Rights were based on the social standing of one's birth. The only rights a person had at the time were the rights that the king was willing to extend, and they could be withdrawn at any moment.
Fraternity, in the sense that all men and women shared humanity was considered heresy. It was a time when slaves were still considered and treated as animals and women were considered property, and not part of a greater humanity that needed to be shared.
All three terms meant a loss in power and control by those in power. But, this is exactly what the philosophers that have come to be associated with fascism were reacting to and rejecting. The period following the French Revolution produced a virtual intellectual stew of various philosophies, including those of Marx and Engels. A brief look at some of the major philosophers of fascism will show how they relate to the traits listed early, and how they were a reaction to the French Revolution. This list of philosophers is by no means complete, but it will suffice to show that many of the traits attributed to fascism above have roots going back as far as the French Revolution.

Arthur Schopenhauer (1788-1860) was a German philosopher perhaps best known for his The World as Will and Representation.4 His beliefs held that the will is the underlying and ultimate reality. The whole phenomenal world was only the expression of will. Individuals have free will only in the sense that everyone is an expression of a will. Thus we are not authors of our own destiny, character, or behavior, according to Schopenhauer. His views parallel the development of relativistic physics that came a century later. His views were influential on Nietzche, among others.
Georg Hegel (1770-1831), a German philosopher held pantheism as the heart of his beliefs. The Phenomenology of Spirit and Science of Logic are two of his better-known works. He viewed that all existence and all history was divine and that nature was sacred. He viewed God as an absolute spirit that also manifested itself in material things and individuals. He believed God acted through humans and embodied himself first in nature, then in the rising stages of human consciousness and civilization. He also had an ethnocentric and egocentric view. He maintained that the German nation was the highest carrier of the wave of God's development. He believed that the bureaucratic monarchy of Prussia was the highest form of state. These later views were certainly manifested in the Nazi's view of the Aryan race, as shown in the following quote.
"Thus the highest purpose of the folkish state is concern for the preservation of those original racial elements which bestow culture and create the beauty and dignity of a higher mankind. We, as Aryans, can conceive of the state only as the living organism of a nationality which not only assures the preservation of this nationality, but by the development of its spiritual and ideal abilities leads it to the highest freedoms."8 Fredrich Nietzche (1844-1900), also a German philosopher was best known for his work Thus Spake Zarathustra.5 Hitler liked to be photographed staring at a bust of Nietzche. Nietzche theorized two sets of morals, one for the ruling class and another for the slave class. Nietzche viewed that ancient empires grew out of the ruling class and that religions arose out of the slave classes, (which denigrates the rich, the powerful, rationalism, and sexuality.) He developed a concept of an "overman," a superhuman, which symbolized man at his most creative and highest intellectual development. Obviously, the "overman" was manifested in the Nazi's view of the Aryan race. He suffered a mental break down, most likely from the advances of syphilis, and was cared for by his mother and later his sister, Elisabeth. His sister painstakingly gathered his notes to publish his latter works. However, she was active in the rising anti-Semitic movement at the time and may have tainted his later work with her views. From time to time, Nietzsche enjoys a rebirth of popularity. Today is one such rebirth, fitting in well with the unmitigated greed and corporatism of today's hard right. Nietzsche's connection to the Nazis is obvious, as shown by the following quotation.

"with satanic joy in his face, the black haired Jewish youth lurks in wait for the unsuspecting girl whom he defiles with his blood, thus stealing her from her people. With every means he tries to destroy the racial foundations of the people he has set out to subjugate. Just as he himself systematically ruins women and girls, he does not shrink back from pulling down the blood barriers for others, even on a large scale. It was and it is Jews who bring Negroes into the Rhineland, always with the same secret thought and clear aim of ruining the hated white race by necessarily resulting bastardization, throwing it down from its culture and political height, and himself rising to be master."9
Notice the similarity in this passage and the Council of Conservative Citizens that Senator Lott and representative Barr supported before becoming embroiled in the resulting scandal in late 1998.10 The web site for this white supremacist group described interracial marriage to the mixing of chocolate milk with plain milk, and labeled it as a path to racial extinction. They also described Lincoln as a communist. 11
Henri Bergson (1859-1941) was a French philosopher with a Jewish father and an English mother. He was the winner of the Nobel Prize for literature in 1927. He rejected the idea that scientific principles could explain all existence. He was a promoter of what has become known as Social Darwinism.6 Perhaps one of his better known works was Time and Free Will. He was also a believer in pantheism. Once again, we see the obvious connection with the Nazis of a master race in the following quote concerning the Nazi's euthanasia program:
"...a secret circular went out from the Reich interior Ministry which marked the beginning of a programme of euthanasia for mentally ill or deformed children up to three years old. Doctors would be required to report all such cases to the health authority on special forms; the forms would then be forwarded to a panel of three medical assessors who would adjucate over life or death by appending "-" or "+." Should all three place a "+", a euthanasia warrant would be issued, signed by the Reichsleiter Philipp Bouhler of the Fuhrer's Chancellery or SS_Oberfuhrer Dr Viktor Brack, head of the Chancellery's Euthanasia Department II. And so it happened: infants marked for death were transferred to what were referred to as Children's Special Departments in political reliable clinics, there to be given a "mercy death" by injection or in one institution at Eglfing-Haar simply starved by a progressive reduction of diet."7
Geroge Sorel (1847-1922) was a French philosopher who had considerable influence on Mussolini. His writings promoted an economic model based on syndicalism. He also believed in the degeneration of societies and believed that social decay could only be delayed by idealists who were willing to use violence to obtain power. His views were extremely anti-democratic and anti-liberal.
With this very brief review of philosophy has shown that the fascist traits of nationalism, totalitarian, racist, violence, unbridled corporatism, reactionary, and the top down nature of fascism all are grounded in the works of past philosophers.

A totalitarian government is one that seeks to maintain control over all aspects of public and private life by using propaganda, terror, and technology. Totalitarian regimes seek control over political, social, and the culture. However, economic control is left in the hands of a few elites in the fascist state. While the means of economic control is left in the private hands of a few elites, this same group controls the government. In essence the government becomes the tool by which the rich and the corporations maintain control. The distinction is important to note as it separates communism from fascism. In a communist state the control over the economy moves to the inside of government, while in the fascist state it remains in private hands. Dictatorships differ in seeking only limited control over the political environment of a society.
There was only limited government ownership under the Nazis. Prior to the Nazi take over, the German governments took over failing businesses and continued to operate them. When the Nazis took over the government already owned a large number of enterprises. When the Nazis took over they began to privatize many of these businesses, especially the ones that had remained profitable during the depression like the electric utilities.
Once Hitler assured big business that they would be free to continue to operate, they failed to raise any further objections to the Nazis. The large German steel and coal industries especially welcomed the Nazis. Hitler's plans for rearmament meant large contracts for new ships, tanks, etc. Later during the war when a labor shortage appeared, it was Krupp from the German steel industry that first raised the question of using slave labor from the concentration camps. At first the Nazis were reluctant to allow the inmates to be used as slaves as it would slow the progress of the "final solution." However, once Krupp offered to pay for the slaves the Nazis readily agreed and soon there was no shortage of companies seeking slaves.

What is less understood about the totalitarian power Hitler achieved was the path he took to obtain that power. There never has been totalitarian regime that gained instant total control. Such a sudden change would spawn sudden revolutions. Mussolini took three years before consolidating his power in Italy. In case of the Nazis, it took even longer. Nor did the path to totalitarian Nazi state start with the elevation of Hitler to the position of chancellor. Some historians trace the roots of the path all the way back into the 1800s. A complete analysis of German history from the time of the monarchy to the seating of Hitler is beyond the scope of this book, if not beyond the scope of any single book, as volumes could be written. What follows is a very brief look at the slow erosion of freedom and the concentration of power as it relates to the final totalitarian state.
For the most part, the period following WWI was a period dominated by raucous politics and a series of crisis in Germany. The two periods in which the Nazis gained the most strength was the early 1920s, during the hyper inflationary period, culminating with the Beer Hall Putsch and the depression of 1929-1931. There is little need to examine the raucous politics of that period, everyone is well aware of Hitler's SA thugs breaking up political rallies of other parties which also resorted to the same tactics. It would not be untrue to describe many political rallies of the time as ending in brawls.

Hitler and the Nazis were extremists, and mostly rejected by the German voters during the good economic times of the 1920s. For example, in 1928 they only polled 2.6 percent of the vote, gaining just 14 seats out of the 491 seats in the Reichstag by virtue of the republic's proportional representation. By 1930 and the start of the depression, the Nazis had increased their seats to 107 out of 577 seats in the Reichstag. In the July 1932 election, at the height of the depression, the Nazis polled 37.4 percent of the vote winning 230 seats in the Reichstag, becoming Germany's largest party.13 In the Nov 1932 election, they only won 196 seats as an anemic economic recovery was already underway, the people began rejecting the Nazis and their radical views and actions.

Germany's plunge into a totalitarian state began before the Nazis took over. It was as much a result of a lack of a strong leadership as anything else. For the first eleven years of the German Republic there had been seventeen cabinets headed by nine different chancellors.12 Undoubtedly, the country faced grave crisis in this period such as hyperinflation, but the lack of strong leadership and an increased polarization was readily apparent. The Nazis were the most notorious radicals unwilling to compromise, but the other parties have to share some of the blame for this polarization as well. The blame can be extended beyond the parties to the vested interests behind each party, including that of big businesses. Fracturing the electorate by polarization was playing right into the divisionist character of the Nazis, whose radical program lacked a broad base of support as the election results from 1928 showed.

The policies of the German governments during the 1920s inadvertently aided the rise of the Nazis. Throughout the 1920s the government arrested many of the leaders from the left. It would not be unfair to term these arrests as purges. The arrest of any strong leaders emerging from the left only served to further polarize the country by creating a vacuum on the left that was only filled with the more radical communists. A similar situation is emerging in the United States, throughout this century the United States has conducted purges of the left: the Great Red Scare of 1919, McCartyism of the 1950s, and COINTELPRO operations during the sixties. Without the voices from the left to moderate policy, the political center in the United States has shifted to the hard right.

The immediate result in the lack of strong leadership is frequent chances in government, which only lead to more instability and chaos. An ideal parallel is the long string one term Presidents ending with Lincoln and the Civil War. The polarization of the Unite States gradually increased from about 1820 on resulting in one term presidents. Another string of one term Presidents ended with the election of Roosevelt in the middle of the Great Depression. In both U.S. case the ending result was not pleasant: a civil war and a depression.

Such frequent change in government does not allow businesses to make long range plans, nor does it allow for enough to time for programs enacted by a government to work. These effects then act as negative feedback, further increasing the polarization and the resulting chaos.
Additionally, the German constitution was flawed and did not account for a negative parliament. Power in Germany was concentrated in the office of the president, headed by Hindenburg, who initially had been elected by conservatives and reactionary rightists. He was a member of the aristocratics from the Junker class and had been a war hero; he likewise held sentiments for the monarchy. The president had the power to appoint cabinets and chancellors. Beginning in 1930, Hindenburg began the practice of appointing chancellors of his choice that were not beholding to the parliament. To allow the chancellors to circumvent parliament, he granted these chancellors emergency powers that had been given to the president by the constitution. Starting in 1930, almost all national laws, including the power to tax, were enacted by presidential decrees and not by the parliament. Such presidential decrees would be similar to the executive orders in the United States.
Hence, even before Hitler was appointed to the chancellor position, power was being concentrated into the two offices of the chancellor and the president. At least twice before appointing Hitler as chancellor, Hindenburg entertained ideas of violating the constitution by not holding elections within the sixty days as required by the constitution.
Hindenburg had also avoided appoint Hitler as chancellor twice before January 1933. Even with the support of big business Hindeburg failed to appoint Hitler when the Nazis held more seats in the Reichstag than any other party.
It wasn't until after Hitler met in secret with von Pappen at the Cologne home of Baron Kurt von Schroder that Hindenburg would relent and appoint Hitler chancellor. The baron was the head of the international Schroder banking empire and had previously raised funds to pay off the Nazi's debt.
The secret meeting on January 4, 1933 allowed Hitler and von Pappen to work out their differences and to agree to a new cabinet under the direction of both. This secret meeting was the birthplace of the Third Reich.
However, there were two Americans that also were in attendance: John Foster Dulles and his brother Allen. The Dulles brothers were there as legal representatives for Kuhn Loeb Company, which had extended large short term credits to Germany. Their presence was to secure a guarantee of repayment from Hitler.
Moreover, Kurt von Schroder had extensive financial contacts in New York and London. He was a co-director of Thyssen foundry along with Johann Groeninger, Prescott Bush's New York bank partner. Schroeder was also the vice president and director of the Hamburg-Amerika Line, the same shipping line seized from Prescott Bush for trading with the enemy.

Throughout 1932, actions taken by the Bush-Harriman shipping line were directly responsible for bringing Hitler to power. The constitutional government tried to disarm the Nazi Brown Shirts to stop the mad election melees and murders. The U.S. embassy in Berlin reported:

" Hamburg-Amerika Line was purchasing and distributing propaganda attacks against the German government, for attempting this last-minute crackdown on Hitler's forces."

During 1932, Hitler's thugs murdered thousands of Germans. Arms for Hitler were shipped to Germany aboard Hamburg-Amerika Line. They were transferred to river barges before reaching Antwerp and then transported across Holland freely. Samuel Pryor, founder of Union Bank and a partner in the Hamburg-America Line was also executive committee chairman of Remington Arms. Hitler's Brown Shirts were armed primarily with Remington arms and Thompson submachine guns. A Senate investigation of Remington concluded that all of the political factions in Germany were armed with mostly American made guns.

Once Hitler and von Pappen had reached an agreement on their future course of actions. Pappen pressured Hindenburg to appoint Hitler as chancellor. The success of the meeting was recorded in Goebbels. On January 5, 1933 Goebbels wrote in his diary "If this coup succeeds, we are not far from power. . . . Our finances have suddenly improved." Hindenburg appointed Hitler, as chancellor with the understanding Hitler would be a parliamentary rather than a presidential chancellor. Hitler immediately set about sabotaging the efforts to from a parliamentary majority. Here is one of the first examples of fascism and divisionism.

On February 1, 1933 the German parliament was dissolved and new elections were scheduled for early March. Using his henchmen, Hilter had the Reichstag building burnt. The fire was blamed on the communist, his main revivals. Using the fire as an excuse, Hitler banned the communist from the upcoming election. Additionally, Goring deputized his storm troopers to harass any political opposition from his position in the cabinet; even then the Nazis could not achieve a majority in parliament as they polled only 43.9 votes.14 By summer, all political parties except the Nazis had been dissolved. On the death of Hindenburg in 1934, Hitler assumed the office of president and further consolidated his gripe on power, but it would take a couple of additional years before Hitler was a true totalitarian. He purged the justice system of judges with adverse views, appointing rabid Nazis in their place, and the storm troopers were given police powers. Justice was now the Nazi party line.

One does not need to expound upon the extreme nationalism of the fascist. The history of their invasion in a quest for world dominion is well known. Mussolini turned his attention to Ethiopia and North Africa; Hitler first to Austria, then Czechoslovakia, followed by Western Europe and later to Norway and the east.

Hilter had left a blueprint for his extreme nationalism and the quest for lebensraum in Mien Kampf as shown by the quote below.

"If the National Socialist movement really wants to be consecrated by history with a great mission for our nation, it must be permeated by knowledge and filled with pain at our true situation in this world; boldly and conscious of its goal, it must take up the struggle against the aimlessness and incompetence which have hitherto guided our German nation in the line of foreign affairs. Then without consideration of traditions and prejudices it must find the courage to gather our people and their strength for an advance along the road that will lead this people from its present restricted living space to new land and soil; and hence also free it from danger of vanishing from the earth or of serving others as a slave nation.

The Nationalist Socialist movement must strive to eliminate the disproportion between our population and our area-viewing this later as a source of food as well as a basis for power politics---between our historical past and the helplessness of our present impotence."15

The third trait of fascism is that it consists of a top down revolution or movement. It is becoming more accepted today that the Nazis drew support from all classes. Indeed, this seems a reasonable assumption when looking at all of the evidence. The storm troopers for the most part drew their numbers from the lower and middle classes. They were typically were unemployed laborers, inept middle management, or failed businessmen. Likewise, given the vote tally of over thirty percent in the 1932 elections, the Nazis had to have drawn votes from all social classes. But this has no bearing on who controlled the direction of the party. Control of the party rested solely with Hitler and whom he allied with. He chose to ally with the upper class and big business as borne out by his policies after gaining power. There is little controversy over the considerable support Hitler drew from the aristocrats, the military, or the Junkers.

Telltale signs forewarning of the elite control was evident from the very formation of the party until the final days before gaining power. A brief look at those that financed the Nazis rise to power will reveal the real support behind Hitler. This is becoming an increasing issue of contention as American hard right tries to distance themselves from the similarities of their policies with fascism.

Hitler himself did not form the Nazi party initially. He joined an existing party and then molded it according to his wishes. In fact, his company commander had ordered him to attend a meeting of what was the German Workers Party. Here was Hitler's initial reaction to the party.

>"My impression was neither good or bad; a new organization like so many others. This was the time in which anyone who was not satisfied with developments and no longer had confidence in the existing parties felt called upon to found a new party. Everywhere these organizations sprang from the ground, only to vanish silently after a time. The founders for the most part had no idea what it means to make a party---let alone a movement---out of a club. And so these organizations nearly always stifle automatically in their absurd phillistinism."16

The order from his company commander provides the first evidence that the elite backed Hitler from the very beginning. At any point from this date the German military could have withdrawn its support of Hitler and disbanded the Nazi party Hitler was a good orator by all reports, as well as an astute political observer. He knew how to motivate the masses in his name and how to sustain a movement. Someone once remarked recently that you needed only gain control of the 3Ms to gain power. The three "Ms" are the military, media, and money. Hitler had all three behind him. As shown by the passage from Mein Kampf, Hitler started with the blessing of the military. The military, as well as big business, played a behind the scenes role in the appointment of Hitler as chancellor.

It's the last of the 3Ms where much confusion and debate arise, Hitler's source of funds or money.
Big business likewise had a large hand in bringing down Bruning in 1930. In a large part, it was the constant bickering by special interest groups that led to the falling of Bruning's cabinet. Big business was urging the following demands on the Bruning government:
>1. The government must take steps to lower the cost of production and widen the profit margin.
2. Lower taxes
3. Reduce the size of government.
4. Lower unemployment insurance benefit
5. The government must allow wages to progress to lower levels, by voiding labor contracts and binding arbitration.26
If these demands from the business community seem familiar to the reader, it's because in a large part they are the same policies that the Republican Party has been advocating for the last twenty years.
Throughout the 1920s and up until Hitler was appointed chancellor the Nazi party was plagued with a shortage of money. After release for prison for the failed Beer Hall Putsch, Hitler's only known source of income was from the sale of Mein Kampf and fees for newspaper articles he would write. The first edition of Mein Kampf was published July 18, 1925 in an edition of 10,000 copies selling for 12 marks. By the end of the year almost all copies had been sold. A new edition was printed but sales in the following year plummeted.
Nevertheless, almost immediately after being pardoned he bought a new super-charged Mercedes-Benz for 28,000 marks.17 Additionally, Hitler did not drive, so he had the additional expense of a chauffeur.
Likewise, from 1925 until his appointment as chancellor in 1933, Hitler lived in increasing comforts, if not outright lavishness for the times. Certainly, the royalties from Mein Kampf and fees for his other writings were insufficient to cover even his living expenses, not to mention the party's expenses.
Also, the funding for an ever-increasing number of SA troopers (many of which were unemployed) had to be secured. Turner has suggested that the Nazis were self sufficient from dues, speaker's fees, and donations at rallies. However, this seems almost improbable looking at the numbers from 1930. In 1930 there were about 100,000 storm troopers that had to be fed, housed and otherwise supported. Additionally there were 15,000 in the SS. Nazi membership at the beginning of 1931 was only 389,000.18 Thus it seems very reasonable that outside sources of funding was needed to maintain the SA and SS, as well as the ever increasing lifestyle of Hitler. Membership fees in the Nazi party started at a mark per month, non-paying members were quickly dropped from the party.

From the very beginning of the Nazi party Hitler showed a knack for obtaining funding from the more privileged members of German society. For instance, everyone is well aware of the trial following the Beer Hall Putsch, but less well known was a secondary trial following the putsch. In the secondary trial, several businessmen that had donated money or other support for Hitler were put on trial. Some have attributed much of this early funding of the Nazis to the secret Thule Society.19 Another early source of funds in the early 20s came from the efforts of Scheubner-Richter, who was adept at gaining funds from Bavarian aristocrats, big businessmen, bankers, and leaders of heavy industry.20 Another source of early funds came indirectly from Fritz Thyssen. Henry Ford also exerted a considerable influence over Hitler in the early 1920s, as well as money. Some passages from Ford's International Jew are nearly identical to passages in Mein Kampf. Ford's book is reported to have had a large effect on many of the school children of the time that were suffering through hyperinflation and economic hard times while reading a book written by the world's foremost capitalist.

> The extent of Ford's financial donations to Hitler still remains a mystery. The U. S. ambassador to Germany, William Dodd, was quoted saying "certain American industrialists had a great deal to do with bringing fascist regimes into being in both Germany and Italy."21 The extent of corporate America's collaboration with the Nazis before the war and even during the war, in some cases, is not fully known. However, as time goes by and more information becomes available, the collaboration begins to appear significant, as shown in the following article.
"Bernd Greiner said 26 of the top 100 US companies in the 1930s collaborated to some degree with the Nazis before, and in some cases after, Hitler declared war on the United States in December 1941. Company headquarters in the US have denied they knew what was going on in Germany, but there is evidence to suggest they knew their German subsidiaries used slave labor, tolerated it and in some cases were actively involved, Greiner said.
Greiner confirmed a report in the newspaper Die Zeit, based on his findings of US corporate involvement in Nazi Germany. The findings went beyond allegations of US lawyers and historians last year that automakers General Motors and Ford collaborated with the Nazi regime."22
One of the more historically accurate, but shamefully apologetic to big business sources is the book, German Big Business and the Rise of Hitler by Turner.23 Turner does a good job in detailing the extensive participation of the leaders of business with the Nazis. However, he reaches the conclusion that big business did not support Hitler with a rather contrived definition of what big business is. He based his definition on the value of the float of stock on the market. His definition limited the number of companies that he would classify as big business to only 14 companies in the Ruhr industrial area and a smattering of companies located elsewhere. Essentially, his definition would be the equivalent of saying that only the Dow 30 companies in the U. S. could truly be called big business. This of course is nonsense. The majority of people would certainly consider Chrysler, Texas Instruments, Hewitt Packard, John Deere and Chase Manhattan Bank to be big business, but according to Turner's book they are not. It is from this group of second and third tier businesses (in keeping with Turner's definition) that provided the most help and support for Hitler. Furthermore, Turner neglects the effect of cartel agreements as well as subsidiaries in his analysis. Many of these second and third tier corporations were owned and controlled by the 14 corporations, he considered to be big business.

Secondly, Turner focuses much of his attention on the period of 1920-1928, when the Nazis were at best a minor noisy party. During this time, the Nazis were lucky to poll more than three percent of the vote. Yet Turner tries to use this as proof that big business did not support Hitler's rise to power, although he does admit that Fritz Thyssen and Kirdolf were supporters of the Nazis during this time. An equivalent situation would be today's Libertarian Party, a party that draws support from Koch, head of Koch refinery (a second tier company by Turner's reasoning). But no one is rushing to fund the Libertarians today when they cannot even poll five percent of the vote.

Finally, when the source of funds were unquestionably from big business Turner attempts to discredit them by claiming the source of the funds was a junior level executive that couldn't be responsible for overall company policy. Or he attempts to say they were given to an individual Nazi. In one shameful passage Turner attempts to discredit the funds given to Nazi fund-raiser Walther Funk by claiming they were not a donation to the party as they may have been spent by Funk for entertainment. Turner describes a particular drunken binge across town by Funk in which he passed out some rather large tips and then draws the conclusion that perhaps none of the funds given Funk ever reached the Nazis.24 This is not the work of a historian, as Turner claims to be. This is nothing more than conjecture by a propagandist. There is also one other speculative conclusion one could draw from this passage, and that is that the amount of money Funk was receiving was so enormous that it permitted such behavior.

Turner does a good job in showing that it was those second and third tier businesses that supported the Nazis. In Duren, a Rhenish manufacturing town, the Nazis received considerable support from local industrialists such as the millionaire dynasties (a term in use from the 1820s in describing these two families) of the Schoellers and the Schulls. Another area in which the Nazis received broad support from businesses was Solingen, an industrial town.25 Overall, Turner documents the participation of business leaders and their support for the Nazis, leaving no question in the reader's mind that business leaders exerted a considerable influence on the Nazis. Unfortunately, he ends his study just as the Nazis seize power.

Many businesses chose to align with and support the Nazis after they gained power. Krupp and I.G. Faben were both executors' of Goring's Four-Year Plan to make Germany militarily self-sufficient by 1940. One can view the details of Krupp's involvement and support for the Nazis after March 1933 in the documents from the War Crimes Tribunal at Nuremberg.31 The full set of available documents from Nuremberg is also available on the Internet.32 By 1939, I.G. Faben provided the Nazis with 90 percent of their foreign exchange, 95 percent of imports, and 85 percent of all military and commercial goods. In 1932, Hermann Schmitz Faben's joint chairman joined forces with Kurt von Schroder, director of a wealthy private bank. Schroder was a fanatical Nazi, often times dressed in his black SS uniform. Schroder is the man that is closely linked with Chase Bank, Standard Oil and William Teagle, and ITT. In 1932, Schroder and Wilhelm Keppler formed the group known as "The Fraternity." This group guaranteed a source of money to the Gestapo. Members agreed to contribute an average of one million marks a year to Himmler's personally marked "S" account and the transferable secret "R" account of the Gestapo.27

In April of 1933, Gustav Krupp sought out a private meeting with Hitler. Krupp agreed to become Hitler's chief fundraiser and chairman of the Adolf Hitler Fund. In return Hitler promised to appoint Krupp as the fuehrer of Germany industry. Over the years, Krupp contributed over six million marks of his own money to the Nazis, and his correspondence shows that he truly enjoyed his job as chairman.28 Likewise, it is common knowledge that after Hitler was appointed chancellor Krupp greeted people cheerfully with the Heil Hitler salutation.

Schirer writes that in 1931, when Hitler decided to cultivate relationships between influential industrial leaders, he kept their identity a secret.

"The party still had to play both sides of the tracks. The party had to allow Strasser, Goebbels and Feder to beguile the masses with socialist talk and denigrating the industrial magnates."

Some of the meetings were so secretive that they were held in forest glades."29

Further proof of the industrialist involvement and support of the Nazis comes from the testimony of Funk at Nuremberg. The entire list implicated by Funk is far too long to reproduce here, but besides Thyssen and Krupp it included Georg von Schnitzler-I.G. Farben, August Rosterg and August Diehn of the potash industry, Cuno of the Hamburg Amerika Line, Otto Wolf, Kurt von Schroder, and many other wealthy industrialists30

On May 2, 1933, the Nazis raided and occupied all trade union headquarters. The leaders were beaten and arrested; some were placed in the concentration camps. Union funds were confiscated and the unions were dissolved. Members of the communist party and the social democrats had already been arrested. On June 20, 1934, in what has become known as the Night of Long Knifes, Hitler purged the socialists within the Nazi party, chief among them Roehm.

With the broad financial support from the leaders of the business community as well as from the military leaders and aristocrats, the Nazis were truly a top down organization, while the Nazis used the lower class as foot soldiers to gain power. They did so in a deceiving manner, and once in power, immediately set about betraying the lower classes

We have already shown one example of divisionism by the Nazis in their rise to power. But what sets fascist divisionism apart from the ordinary divisionism of any other political ideology? Certainly any politician in a democracy appeals to some sort of divisionism, as he is fully aware that he can not possibly appeal to the entire electorate. The difference lies in the fact that divisionism is always destructive in fascism and serves only as a means to gain and maintain power. Even after gaining power, Hitler went to great pains in dividing power, playing one follower against another, creating rivalries in the party in the process. In short, Hitler kept the Nazi party divided as if it was a set of small fiefdoms. One of the biggest myths about the Nazis is that they were a single unit, when in fact they were a conglomeration of various fractured parts. Eatwell states the paradox within Hitler's power structure as: "because the party was so divided that he had power and in turn the party was divided from other key centers of power such as the army." 47 In other ideologies, the divisionism is not inherently destructive. Rather, it's based on differing approaches coming together to reach an equable solution to a problem. In his rise to power, Hitler had no intention of compromising with the other parties to form a parliamentary president. His moves were calculated to destroy any chance of that.

A couple of examples from the present can further delineate the difference between the two. Certainly many of the tax proposals coming from the Republican party today could be classed as divisionism as they favor the upper income earners over the lower income groups. While the measures are divisive they can hardly be labeled as destructive divisionism. They are more a reflection of difference in opinion.

However, an example of an act that could be termed a fascist divisionism was the Republican caused shut down of the government in November 1995 after Clinton vetoed the budget bill. Clinton had previously warned Congress that unless changes were made in the budget he would veto the bill. Members of the hard right Council for National Policy and many of their Republican members openly had declared they would shut down the government. In essence, the Republicans adopted the same policy that Hitler had in his bid to dismiss parliament; they refused to negotiate honorably.

Just as Hitler had taken a position to subvert democracy, so had the Republicans, led by Gingrich. The constitution defines the passing of the budget in detail. The spending bills originate in the House after passage by both the House and the Senate. It is then sent to the President, who may either veto it or sign it. If the bill is vetoed, it is up to Congress and the President to reach a compromise bill. Otherwise, Congress must pass a bill with a two-thirds majority. The failure of Congress to pass a bill to advert a government shutdown was a dereliction of their constitutional duty. Fortunately, the outrage coming from the general public forced the Republicans back to the negotiation table. The point to be made is the only difference between the two events---the Republicans feared the wrath of the people and capitulated, Hitler had no such fear and parliament was dismissed.

The Republican shut down of the government also serves to point out a flaw in our constitution, just as there was a flaw in the German constitution. In the case of the U. S. constitution there is no other mechanism other than shutting down the government if Congress fails to pass a budget. If the fascists in America can be successful in polarizing American politics to such an extent that the public, or at least a considerable portion of it, tolerates a government shut down, then the entire budget process becomes a fracas. And after observing the behavior of the Republicans in their ill fated attempt to impeach Clinton such a possibility does not appear so remote.
Another example of divisionism that is solely destructive that is not based on racism or class warfare was the impeachment of Bill Clinton. It served no purpose other than to smear the president, the articles of impeachment fell far short of what the founding fathers had defined in the phrase "high crimes and misdemeanors." That phrase refers back to the misuse of offices in England under the king. Additionally, the investigation of Ken Starr has been plagued by civil rights abuse and possible criminal action by Starr himself. It resembles a coup headed by the multi millionaire Scaife with the aid of the religious right, more than it resembled a justified impeachment.
But perhaps, the greatest illustration of the divisionism was seeing support for the impeachment evaporate like rain on hot pavement in the Senate following the State of the Union address and a thorough defense of the charges by Clinton's legal team. The House prosecutors with the conclusion of Ken Starr questioned Monica Lewinsky further in secret. This single action by the House Republicans invoked criticism from even members of their own party in the Senate. It was conducted against the agreed upon rules, and it was unconstitutional in that the power of investigation is delegated to the Senate. Likewise, it is against the statute of the Independent Council. It served no purpose other than to further divide and disgust the country. In short, it is nothing but an attempt at a power play.

Often times, this divisionism takes the form of racism or class warfare. It is often stated that Mussolini tried to eliminate class distinctions in fascist Italy. But the reality is that he only reinforced those distinctions. Certainly the Nazis practiced racism in an outrageous manner, ending in the Holocaust. On the other hand, fascist Italy was not racist in nature until after Mussolini adopted Hitler's Jewish solution. Fascism doesn't necessary have to be racist in nature, but racism is often used to divide the citizens, as their radical platform isn't appealing to the broad masses. In addition, racism is violent in nature and the resulting chaos from the violence serves to further divide the masses. Whether or not a fascist state is racist seems to depend more upon the culture of the society in which it arises. Before fascism, Italy had a long history of generally equable racial relationships, going all the way back to the old Roman Empire. For instance, even the slaves were eventually given full rights in Rome. However, the roots of anti-Semitism goes back much further in Germany as shown in the following quote.

"This is a good month to reflect on the toxicity of words meant to kill. Nov. 9 marks the 60th anniversary of Kristallnacht, the 1938 'Night of Shattered Glass' unleashed by the Nazis to terrorize Germany's Jews. The date was chosen specially by Josef Goebbels, Hitler's propagandist, to honor the birthday of Martin Luther, the 16th century monk who was a father of the protestant Reformation and the founder of what became the Lutheran church.

Hitler greatly admired Luther: "He saw the Jew as we are only beginning to see him today." Indeed. Luther saw the Jews as 'hopeless, wicked, venomous, and devilish... our pest, torment, and misfortune.' Initially, certain that his version of Christianity would appeal to Jews, he expected large numbers of them to covert. When that failed to happen, he turned violently against them. In 1543, Luther Published "On the Jews and Their Lies," a work that would become known throughout Germany, perhaps the most widely disseminated work of anti-Semitism by a German until the rise of the Nazis 400, years later.

"What then shall we Christians do with this damned, rejected race of Jews?" Luther asked.

"First, their synagogues should be set on fire, and whatever does not burn up should be covered or spread over with dirt, so that no one may ever be able to see a cinder or stone of it...

Secondly, their homes should likewise be broken down and destroyed...

Thirdly, they should be deprived of their prayer books and Talmuds, in which such idolatry, lies, cursing, and blasphemy are taught.

Fourthly, their rabbis must be forbidden under threat of death to teach any more...

Fifthly, passports and traveling privileges should be absolutely forbidden to the Jews...

Sixthly, I advise that...all cash and treasure of silver and gold be taken from them...

Burn down their synagogues, forbid all that I enumerated earlier, force them to work, and deal harshly with them... If this does not help we must drive them out like mad dogs, so we do not become partakers of their abominable blasphemy and all their other vices. I have done my duty. Now let everyone see to his."

This is hate speech.

< Sixty years ago next Monday on the night of Luther's birthday, Nazi gangs rampaged across Germany. In every Jewish neighborhood, windows were smashed and buildings were torched. All told, 101 synagogues were destroyed, and nearly 7,500 Jewish-owned businesses were demolished. On that night, 91 Jews were murdered; 26,000 were rounded up and sent to concentration camps. It was the greatest pogrom in history. And it was nothing compared with what was to come."33

The question then remains whether the fascism in America can be considered racist or not. The past history of racism in the United States would tend to support such. As a nation, we was one of the last industrial nations to allow slavery, and it took the Civil War to end slavery. It has been less than fifty years since "separate but equal" was the rule of the land. It's only been sixty years since Japanese citizens and immigrants were interred in camps following the bombing of Pearl Harbor. The Rosewood incident happened less than a hundred years ago, and lynching of blacks was common well into the 20th century. This country has had a long, incredulous history of bigotry and even genocide. There is no question of the genocide of Native Americans in the efforts of the U. S. Army in passing out blankets infected with small pox, or the slaughter of the Plains Indian's primary source of food, the buffalo. Then there was the Trail of Tears, as well. The Irish immigrants, following the potato famine, were greeted by the Know Nothings, a party that based its support on the hate of Catholics.
All of the hard right groups are racist, although more than one tries to play their racism down or to hide it, such as the John Birch Society and some of the various militia groups. Others are openly racists, such as the Klan, the Nazis and the skinheads. The great unifier of the far right, the Identity religion, links many of the hard right groups. The Identity religion is based on anti-Semitic belief that the true followers of Jesus immigrated to Britain and northern Europe, that today's Jews are the descendents of Satan. It's the mainstay religion among the militias, the Posse Comitatus, and even among some of the Klan groups.
Besides the normal hate groups based on racism or anti-Semitism. the religious right has emerged in the 1990s as a venomous hate group basing their hate on gays and abortion. Abortion clinics increasingly are becoming targets of bombings, arson, and vandalism. Late in 1998, Matthew Shepard was murdered in Wyoming after being tie to a fence and then pistol whipped, for being gay. Below are some quotes about gays from one of the leaders of the religious right, Pat Robertson.
"This conduct [homosexuality] is anti-social, and it is a pathology. It is a sickness, and it needs to be treated. It doesn't need to be taught in the classroom as a preferred way of life..." - 700 Club, 3-7-90
"...the acceptance of homosexuality is the last step in the decline of Gentile civilization." --Pat Robertson, of the Christian Broadcasting Network, warned that hurricanes could hit Orlando, Fla., because of gay events there. Time magazine, Oct 26, 1998
"If the world accepts homosexuality as its norm and if it moves the entire world in that regard, the whole world is then going to be sitting like Sodom and Gomorrah before a Holy God. And when the wrath of God comes on this earth, we will all be guilty and we will all suffer for it." - 700 Club, 9-6-9534
Compare that last quote of Robertson's to the following quote of Hitler on syphilis.

"...they speak of this whole field as if it were a great sin, and above all express their profound indignation against every sinner caught in the act, then close their eyes in pious horror to this godless plague and pray God to let sulfur and brimstone preferably after their own death rain down on this Sodom and Gomorrah, thus once making an instructive example of this shameless humanity."39
Such evidence, as Robertson's words, abounds that they would persecute gays, it abounds in the numerous ballot measures in various states that would deny gays their civil rights. Such a measure passed in Colorado, only to be overturned by the Supreme Court. Another measure, led by Lon Mabon in Oregon failed state wide, but was reintroduced on local ballots in the following election. Mabon has also led ballot measures to limit the concept of a family and limiting abortions to only the first trimester. The first was another attempt to limit the rights of gays.
In June 1998, near Jasper, Texas a black man named James Byrd was dragged behind a pickup. Body parts were found over a two mile length of the roadway.35 It is too early for trends in hate crimes to emerge, as the FBI only began tracking hate crimes in 1991. The one trend that does seem to be emerging is the hate crimes are becoming increasingly violent as evident from the murders of Shepard and Byrd. The real danger of these two murders is they serve to desensitize us, leading to more numerous and increasing levels of violence, just as the Nazis used increasing levels of violence against the Jews.
Racism is reemerging in various forms in the 1990s in political issues and in the Republican Party. "English only" laws are being promoted with increasing frequency by various Republican candidates, including Robert Dole, and have even appeared on some ballot measures such as California Prop 187. The obvious targets are immigrants from Mexico. In effect, its nothing more than the reemergence of nativism. Other forms of nativism have appeared, such as denying immigrants access to welfare and the school system for children of immigrants. Nativism is also behind various immigration bills and the increasing efforts directed at illegals.
Perhaps the most dangerous form of racism to emerge has been the Republican efforts to 'monitor' the polls. And videotape those leaving. Cases have arisen in the 1998 election in North Carolina, Georgia, Michigan, Maryland, Kentucky, Texas and Maine. The efforts are directed primarily at districts in which have a high percentage of minorities. Such efforts serve no useful purpose and do constitute a violation of the Voting Rights Act.36 More disturbing is the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, William Rehnquist, served as the director of Republican 'ballot security' in the poor areas of Phoenix, Arizona between 1958-1962.37 He likewise wrote a pro separate but equal memo as a law clerk for Justice Robert Jackson. All of which was brought out in his confirmation hearings.
An even more subtle effort on the part of Republicans in denying votes to the minorities and the poor is centered on the debate to allow a statistical correction to the 2000 census. Such effort on the part of the Republicans goes far beyond the election of 2000. The census will be used to reapportionment of the congressional districts for the decade. Thus, by denying the correction, they in effect are perpetuating their power to 2010 by undercounting groups that historically vote for Democrats n Dec 1998, Republican House member Bob Barr and Senator Trent Lott were exposed as keynote speakers before the Council of Conservative Citizens, a racist organization. Lott was later determined to have been an honorary member and had written several articles for their paper dating back to the early 1990s. In January, Republican National Chairman, Jim Nicholson asked members to dissociate themselves from this group and directly appealed to national committee member Buddy Witherspoon from South Carolina to resign. The request was refused.38

Once before, the Republicans were asked to denounce the radical John Birch Society at their National Convention in the early 1960s. Moderate members such as the former President Jerry Ford, did so. However the measure failed.

>Another Republican that deserves mention here is Pat Buchanan and his anti-Semitic views. Buchanan has opposed virtually all civil rights bills and favorable court decisions; he has supported apartheid in South Africa; he has spewed forth views of Holocaust denial; he has called fascists such as Franco and Pinochet soldier-patriots. And Buchanan was a key figure in urging Reagan to visit the SS cemetery in Bitburg.40

Thus as we prepare to enter a new century, the Republican Party has adopted racism as a divisionist tool to divide the electorate in an attempt to maintain power and enact their extremist agenda. Not all members of the Republican Party are racist, but many of the members from the hard right that controls the party are racists. There are honorable members of the party, but they are being forced into lesser and lesser roles. The extremists have gained control. It is the burden of those honorable members to take back control of their party and denounce the extremist before it becomes too late.

Perhaps the best assessment of the use of destructive divisionism by fascist in the United States comes from a 1945 War department publication:

"Three Ways to Spot U.S. Fascists.

Fascists in America may differ slightly from fascists in other countries, but there are a number of attitudes and practices that they have in common. Following are three. Every person who has one of them is not necessarily a fascist. But he is in a mental state that lends itself to the acceptance of fascist aims.

1.Pitting religion, racial, and economic groups against one another in order to break down the national unity is a device of the divide and conquer technique used by Hitler to gain power in Germany and in other countries. With slight variations, to suit local conditions, fascists everywhere have used this Hitler method. In many countries, anti-Semitism is a dominant devise of fascism. In the United States native fascists have often been anti-Catholic, anti-Jew, anti-Negro, anti-Labor and anti-foreign born. In South America native fascists use the same scapegoats except that they substitute anti-Protestantism for anti-Catholicism.

Interwoven with the master race theory of fascism is a well planned hate campaign against minority races, religions, and other groups. To suit their particular needs and aims, fascists will use any one or a combination of such groups as a convenient scapegoat.
2. Fascism cannot tolerate such religious and ethical concepts as the brotherhood of man. Fascists deny the need for international cooperation. These ideas contradict the fascist theory of the master race. The color, race, creed or nationality-have rights. International cooperation, as expressed in the Dumbarton Oaks proposals, run counter to the fascist program of war and world domination. Right now our native fascists are spreading anti-British, anti-Soviet, anti-French and anti-United nations propaganda.
3. It is accurate to call a member of a communist party a communist. For short, he is often called a Red. Indiscriminate pinning of the label Red on people and proposals which one opposes is a common political device. It is a favorite trick of native as well as foreign fascists.
Many fascists make the spurious claim that the world has but two choices---either fascism or communism and they label as communist everyone who refuses to support them. By attacking our free enterprise, capitalist democracy and by deny the effectiveness of our way of life they hope to trap many people."74

The extreme anti-communism and anti-socialism stance of the fascist is beyond dispute among honest historians. Both communists and socialists were the first to enter the concentration camps in Nazi Germany. Both Mussolini and Franco fought against communist influence. From the brief survey of the fascist philosophers and extreme anti-liberal stance has been a factor in fascism from the beginning. The Nazi used socialism as a ruse to gain power, but once in power they purged the socialists within their party. The following quotes taken from Mein Kampf will illuminate the anti-communism, anti-parliamentary democracy, and the social darwinism of Hitler.
"Just as in 1918 we paid with our blood for the fact that in 1914 and 1915 we did not proceed to trample the head of Marxist serpent once and for all, we would have to pay most catastrophically if in the spring of 1923 we did not avail ourselves of the opportunity to halt the activity of the Marist traitors and murders of the nation for good"41 >
"As regards the possibility of putting these ideas into practice, I beg you not to forget that the parliamentary principle of democratic majority rule has by no means always dominated mankind, but to the contrary is to be found only in brief periods of history, which are always epochs of decay of peoples and states."42
"The best state constitution and state form is that which, with the most unquestioned certainty, raises the best minds in the national community to leading position and leading influence.
But as in economic life, the able men cannot be appointed from above, but must struggle through for themselves,..."43

The second quote certainly is anti-liberal as it shows Hitler's contempt for the democratic process. The last quote reveals Hitler as a social Darwinist of which Turner makes the point in several places in his book.44 Social Darwinism runs counter to the aims of socialism. In fact it is the antithesis. It allows the elite to gain further power, it willingly discards the poor and the weak as expendables. With the anti-communism stance and social Darwinism character of Hitler, it is not surprising that the fascist in America would come from the extreme right. The United States was right in opposing communism. But to what links? As with anything else moderation is an admirable quality, excesses of any nature are damaging. Truman or Eisenhower were not fascists for their anti-communism actions. However, Tail Gunner Joe was either a fascist or a willing dupe of fascists. The type of anti-communism of McCarthy served no other purpose than to further his political career. He openly violated the right to free speech and assembly of his victims. His aim was to destroy them with out any regard to the evidence.
The social Darwinism as initiated by Reagan and his attacks on the poor, and the dismantling of the welfare program led by Newt Gingrich will also be labeled as examples of creeping fascism. Throwing people into the streets arbitrarily to fend for themselves is destructive; it is social Darwinism at its worst. Forcing them to except wages below the minimum wage law is denying them their equal rights. But it was precisely the economic woes of Germany that allowed the Nazis to rise to power. Currently America is enjoying good economic times, but when the economy takes a turn to the south the full impact of the lack of a social safety net is going to be felt hard.
The next trait of fascism, extreme exploitation, is a direct result of one of the primary traits of fascism, extreme nationalism. The form of nationalism promoted by fascism not only concerns the standing in the world but also applies to the sacrifices that are expected of citizens. In short, the fascist state reigns supreme while the individuals are subordinate to the state. The subordination of individuals to the state is the antithesis of liberalism. Once again some quotes from Mein Kampf will suffice.
"Since for us the state as such is the only form, but the essential is its content, the nation, the people, it is clear that everything else must be subordinated to its sovereign interests."45
"a peace, supported not by the palm branches of tearful, pacifist female mourners, but based on the victorious sword of a master people, putting the world into the service of a higher culture."46
Certainly from those two quotes there can be no question of the subordination of individuals as practiced under the Nazis or to any limits short of world domination by the Nazis. It is often stated that Hitler left a road map to his future goals in Mein Kampf. There is no greater evidence of that than in the last quote. How then did he rise to power? The problem was nobody was listening. Nobody challenged his aggressive views toward war, or at best they believed that they could control or contain him. Only later did they find out the errors of that false assumption.

This writer can find only two instances of this extreme exploitation in America. Thanks to the efforts of CBS 60 Minutes and Evening News, the story broke about the Tomb of the Unknown and how the Reagan White House pressured the military to find an unknown to bury on Memorial Day 1984. Turns out that in their haste to respond to the pressure coming from the White House, they deliberately buried a fallen soldier that wasn't so unknown. The unknown was Michael Bassie. This man had given everything to his country except for his name. And the lowlife filth occupying the White House had that stripped from him so he could have a photo op on Memorial Day in an election year. This writer can think of no other action that is more despicable; it's unforgivable.

Of course Reagan made sure he was the star of this photo op and used it to promote and build support for his extremist military agenda.

The second instance comes at the hands of Newt Gingrich and the Republicans of the 104th and 105th Congress. They have stripped the rights of welfare recipients and required that they participate in workfare. The problem comes in that these poor souls are not even entitled to be paid the minimum wage or the right to unionize in some cases. In other words, the Republican's answer to the poor is to force the to work in perpetual slavery with no chance of ever breaking out of poverty.

But this event is much more dangerous and goes much further than it appears. The danger here lies in the suspension of the constitutional equality under the eyes of the law. The Republicans have in effect created a sub-class in which one of the very fundamental tenets of our constitution, equality under the eyes of the law was ignored and thrown out the window. Nor is this the only example of unequal treatment of the poor at the hands of the Republicans. They also have advocated cut backs in the budget for the public defender's office.

The Republicans have been very successful in their propaganda in demonizing the poor. There seems to be an almost gutter level hatred of the poor and any aid to assist them. Instead of reaching out a compassionate helping hand towards the poor, the Republicans have adopted a mean spirited social Darwinist view.

This brings us to the trait of opportunistic ideology of fascism. It is perhaps one of the more confusing aspects of fascism. Mussolini appears to have been indeed a socialist before founding the fascist party. Mussolini likewise went from a pacifist to a rabid warmonger. Clearly such dramatic changes in ideology could only be based in an opportunistic grab for power. Mussolini started supporting a syndicalism economy, but by 1923, with clear objections from business leaders, he concluded the Palazzo Chigi Pact. This pact's main intent was to simplify business relations by making the fascist the sole representative of labor. In 1925, the Plazzo Vidoni agreement was signed. This agreement made Rossoni's union the sole representative of labor. It likewise prohibited the challenging of factory management.

By the close of the year, the grateful employer's federation publicly announced adherence to the fascist regime.48 Such transformations illistrate the opportunistic ideology present in fascism or is it a lack of ideology, as well as further dispeling the myth that fascism is another form of socialism.

Part of the problem with the ever-changing ideology of fascism arises from the divisionism. Strasser was a socialist and it seems that Goebbels was a Marxist. Both were allowed almost free reign in promoting their own economic views as long as it gathered more support of serve Hitler's purpose. But once their views failed to serve Hitler, they were then brow beaten severely. An example of such reversal in party ideology of the Nazis occurred on February 14,1926. Prior to this date, both Strasser and Goebbels had approved of a plebiscite campaign to deprive former royalty of their possessions, a measure, that was popular with the common citizens. On the given date, Hitler summoned both men to a meeting in Bamberg. Before those gathered, Hitler forced both to capitulate and abandon the program.49 Similar events have already been given, in which various Nazis were initially allowed to promote socialism in efforts to appease the lower classes in an effort to gain their support.

Examples abound throughout the history of the Nazis where they adopted their ideology to suit the audience. In October 1932, Strasser announced a new program that was a stark reversal of the program the Nazis had advocated in July. Higher taxes on the rich had been replaced with a general reduction of taxes, instead of price controls it centered on freeing prices. Instead of protectionism trade policy, export and global trade was now promoted. Likewise, much of the inflammatory rhetoric had been dropped.50

Hitler seems to have sensed the explosive nature of economics and tried to avoid the subject both publicly and within the party. From all indications, he was dissatisfied with the party planks on economic matters. The only official stance on economic matters was the 1920 twenty-five point program. However, he only referred to this policy document disparagingly in Mein Kampf and distanced himself from the document.51 Likewise Hitler would never take an aggressive stance on minor issues, he played to his audience to win their support.

Perhaps the most dramatic evidence of the opportunistic character of the Nazis is illustrated by the actions of thirty-nine businessmen in November 1932. The group contained such notables as Krupp, Thyssen, Bosch, Siemens, and others. In a signed letter to Hindenburg they urged him to appoint Hitler as chancellor. In essence they were placing a bet that the socialism ideology was a fraud and that once in power he would be a tool of capitalist.52

The only other reversal in policy that could rival the bet that the leaders of big business made was Hitler's writings. In the first part of Mein Kampf he argued that France was the sworn and greater enemy of Germany. However, the second part to Mein Kampf he reversed course and argued that Russia was the enemy as opposed to the first book in which he proposed an alliance with Russia.53 This was a complete change in his foreign policy. One can only speculate as to the reasons behind such a switch.

Many writers have tried to label the Nazis as socialists in a folly to distance themselves from fascist theory. They are quick to point to the syndicalism policy as proof of socialist regulation of business. They are in error, of course. Syndicalism is neither left nor right in itself. It can be either, depending upon the political structure. Syndicalism with labor groups or consumers dominating the issues would indeed be socialistic in nature. On the other hand, syndicalism with only industry or business groups dominating is certainly from the right wing of the political spectrum. The issuing of controls or goals over the production of war material by the government in a syndicalism system is neither left nor right, it's simply self-preservation. The goals and controls, including the 4-Year Plan issued by Goring, were nothing more than gearing the economy up for war time production. In essence, they were merely self-preservation measures. >

Secondly, they will point toward many of the public works projects that were implemented under the Nazis as examples of socialism. An example of this is the construction of the autobahn, a project that had been planned by previous governments, as were many of the public work projects. They likewise forget that the Nazis took over at the bottom of an economic depression, public work projects were enacted not only in Germany, but in the U. S. as well as a means to end the depression. Many of those projects in the U. S. were the construction of useful infrastructure, such as the building of the high school in New Ulm, Minnesota. Others had a definite commercialism bent to them, such as the construction of Timberline Lodge on Mount Hood in Oregon. Labeling the construction of a facility for a commercial business as socialism is simply fools folly. The same applies to many of the public works projects that were implemented under the Nazis. Labeling such programs as socialism would be the same as labeling the construction of the interstate highway system as socialism. If the Eisenhower administration had one shinning moment, it was his support for the construction of the freeway system. For those that are silly enough to label such work as socialism, let them be reminded that no other single event, other than the construction of the cross continental railroad aided the development of business. Besides the obvious advantage to shippers, the interstate highway system has spawned many new businesses. Think of the number of motels/hotels as well as the tourist traps, service stations, and others that have grown up along the freeway system. The same applies to Germany and the autobahn.
Finally, the same writers that label fascism as socialism would like their readers to believe that these government regulations and bureaucratic offices held ultimate power. Failure to comply would result in the owners being shot. Nothing could be further from the truth. The Nazis for a large part lived in fear of the leaders of big business. They were aware that they had no comprehensive economic plan and would defer to the judgement of the business leaders.

This point can be driven home with one simple example. Goering was one of the Nazis that had little economic knowledge, but harbored some of the more radical economic ideas and was fond of using regulatory offices. Goering tried first to persuade the steel industry, both the smelters and miners, to use low-grade German ore as opposed to the high-grade Swedish ore. Importation of ore from Sweden would use up precious foreign currency, as well as being a less reliable source in the event of war. The invasions of Denmark and Norway were conducted solely to protect the Nazis shipping routes for the Swedish ore. Most of the industrialists politely refused Goering's request; even under threats of arrest for sabotage, they still declined.54 None were arrested for refusal. Instead Goering formed the Herman Goering Works to take on the task. By the time of the outbreak of the war it had evolved to be one of the largest companies in Germany.

Farben is another example of the Nazis bowing to the expertise of leading corporations. With the advent of the first 4-Year Plan, they realized they needed the cooperation of business leadership in order to achieve self-sufficiency in a series of raw materials and finished products. Most of which were items would be crucial to wartime production. By the end of the war Farben, had a series of factories around concentration camps, were major users of slave labor, along with Krupp and many other corporations.

But the most damning evidence of the Nazi's unbridled corporatism was evident shortly after passage of the Enabling Act, when Hjalmar Schacht was appointed president of the Reichsbank. Schacht was a brilliant financier who helped negotiate the Dawes Plan and was largely responsible for stabilizing the currency in 1923; he also detested democracy and parliamentarianism. His first official act was the creation of Metall-Forschungsgesellschaft A.G. (Mefo), a dummy corporation of four armament firms. The state assumed the liability for their debts. The Mefo bills were not unlike promissory notes, they were issued to government contractors and could be extended to five years.55 Such favoritism of business is certainly not socialism. Today in America such corporate aid is labeled as corporate welfare. Note the similarity here not only to the present corporate welfare that's being doled out, but also to Eisenhower's warning of the military-industrial complex. The American military-industrial complex didn't need to invent a new plan, they were simply free to follow the example the Nazis used. In fact fascism is inseparatable from corporatism. You simply cannot have a fascist government without corporations and a capitalistic economy.

Schacht was later appointed to minister of economics in 1934, a post he retained until he resigned in 1937 over policy disputes. He was not an anti-Semitic and was conscious of the negative aspects of the takeover of Jewish business on both the economy and world opinion. By 1936, he was advocating slowing down the rearmament program, fearing the return of inflation.56 The return of inflation dispenses with the myths that the Nazis maintained strict control of corporations and the prices of goods in short order. In effect, such controls were non-existent. It should also be pointed out here that the economy at this time had taken on considerable shades of a consumer economy. Italy used their form of syndicalism to eliminate labor unions; the Nazis followed a similar path. The workers benefited little from this unbridled corporatism. Unemployment went from an official figure of six million unemployed in 1933, to 2.7 million in 1937, and by the time of the outbreak of war there was a serious shortage of workers. But growth in wages was far less spectacular, real wages rose only sparingly. The index of wages rose from 92.5 in 1933 to 103 in 1937, an increase of a meager eleven-percent.57 Much of the increase in wages was achieved only from working longer hours. The only real increases in the plight of the workers came with more unpaid leave. Many of the other benefits produced no real benefits to the worker, such as the factory beautification program.

From looking at the philosophers of fascism, it was revealed that fascism was a reactionary movement. What then was the fascist reacting to that led to the rise of Mussolini and Hitler? Many people responding to the question would simply answer the Treaty of Versailles. But such an answer is only partially correct. It doesn't account for the widespread rise of fascism in many European countries following WWI. In fact, during the period between the two world wars, every government from the Rhine to the Pacific underwent drastic changes. In many of those fascism had ample support but in the end was rejected. Some of the problem can be laid to the beginning dissolution of the British Empire and the arbitrary way in which maps were redrawn following WWI without regard to ethnic or natural barriers. An example would be the cobbled mess of ethnic groups that formed the former republic of Yugoslavia, an area that remains a hot spot today.

Britain and the United States were about the only two governments that did not undergo a major change during the period between the wars. However, neither was immune to the rise of fascism. The U. S. saw a rise of a great many fascist groups and groups closely aligned with the fascist in the period between the wars. The German Bund, the Silver Shirts and the mother's movement were all aligned closely with fascism. It was also this period that seen the greatest membership in the Ku Klux Klan.

The United States avoided full-blown fascism by essentially adopting fascist methods on a milder scale. This was a shameful period in the history of America. The infamous Palmer raids rounded up those with communist connections. The I.W.W was harassed constantly by Hoover and the FBI. In short, only those with non-approved political beliefs would be prosecuted. This suppression of liberty had actually begun around 1900. At the turn of the century, both conservative and liberal elements combined to pass a blizzard of new laws. This effort aimed at curbing lawless quickly became dominated by conservative elements and evolved in a tool for the right wing for the remainder of the century.

wing compared to the rest of the industrial world.
Perhaps one of the first and most notable events was the trial of Sacco and Vanzetti, two immigrants charged with murder in Massachusetts. They were found guilty more on their political beliefs than on evidence. They were anarchists, atheists, and reportedly draft dodgers, beliefs that threatened the industrialists of the time.64 Both were executed after considerable protest. Their trial set a dangerous standard that people could be prosecuted for their political beliefs. The inclusion of this trial here is to serve as a reminder of a new problem that is emerging to confront the hard right, jury nullification. Today there is considerable debate from both sides of the political spectrum on jury nullification arising in death penalty and drug cases. It warrants close observation. If the public becomes too polarized, it could spell the end to the trial by jury system, which has served admirably for over 200 years.
Various members of the right wing are now using this as an issue in another attempt to polarize the electorate for their own selfish purposes. These members of the right wing are promoting a system of justice backed by mob or vigilante justice. Essentially, it's a system backed by violence that is not unlike the tactics used by the Posse Comitatus, the Freemen, or various militias to corrupt the justice system.
The first example of political repression came in Minnesota. The then Republican Governor Burnquist used the newly created Minnesota Commission of Public Safety to suspend New Ulm's Mayor Fritsche and City Attorney Pfaender for their pacifist views after war had been declared on Germany in 1917. The following quote details some of the shameful actions taken by the commission and its connection to the hard right.
In April 1917, soon after America declared war on Germany, the Minnesota Legislature, following ferocious debate, created the Minnesota Commission of Public Safety. This remarkable body, chaired and appointed by the governor, was given "all necessary power" to maintain order and enhance Minnesota's contribution to the war effort. Technically limited by the state and federal constitutions, the commission essentially wielded all the authority of state government during the 18 months of its active existence. >
The commission came to be dominated by representatives of the Twin Cities business community. It used its sweeping authority with gusto, not only to root out ``disloyalty'' but to combat labor unionism and agrarian activism as well.
The commission dispatched detectives throughout Minnesota to investigate people and organizations suspected of disloyalty. It regulated food prices and the liquor trade, imposing prohibition in some parts of the state. It banned union organizing and intervened on the side of management in a bitter Twin Cities streetcar strike. It created a ``Home Guard'' of some 8,000 troops to back up its decrees. The commission served as a virtual campaign committee for Republican Gov. Joseph Burnquist in his 1918 re-election bid. It turned a blind eye toward frequent mob harassment of his opponents. It interrogated and intimidated Minnesotans who declined to purchase Liberty Bonds to finance the war effort.63

Nor was such action confined to just Minnesota, many states set up similar commissions. State sponsored violence against leaders from the left was common place. One group that suffered immeasurably was the I.W.W, the Wobblies. On Nov 5, 1916, Washington State suffered its bloodiest labor battle of all time. The resulting carnage between a local sheriff and the Wobblies left seven dead and over fifty wounded in the city of Everett.65
All three of these events illustrate that the United States repressed those with radical ideas in the time period of WWI and immediately thereafter. Pacifist, labor leaders, and leftist political leaders were all prosecuted with equal zeal. Remember, this was the time period of the Rosewood incident and other atrocities. The prosecution was lead by the hard right and business leaders.
But the real answer to the question is that fascism following WWI was a reaction to the Bolshevik revolution and the rise of liberalism ideals. Up until the Russian revolution, the only economic system was capitalism. Communism was a new revolutionary system. It threatened the power elite directly and gave way to a rise not only in communism but socialism and liberalism as well. It was no accident that fascism arose first in Italy, where in the period of 1919-1922, socialists ruled in many localities. Here fascism arose in the countryside were old practices such as sharecropping were giving way to new methods. In 1920, the largest strike in Italian agriculture ever was settled when the landowners capitulated. Elsewhere, unions were wringing out concessions from the owners through strikes and boycotts.58

The real appeal of European fascism was the protection it afforded against working class movements, socialism, and communism.59 Hobsbawm states it even more forcefully in claiming that without the October revolution and Leninism there would have been no need for fascism. For up until that time, the demagogic right, although politically active and noisy in many countries, had been kept in check.60 The entire Nazi movement was a reactionary movement. The reaction to the Treaty of Versailles is well known and needs no further comment, as is the opposition of fascism to liberalism, socialism and communism. Rather, the following quote will show how complete the reaction was to the events of the time.
"Today Christians... stand at the head of Germany... I pledge that I never will tie myself to parties who want to destroy Christianity...We want to fill our culture again with the Christian spirit... We want to burn out all the recent immoral developments in literature, in the theater, and in the press- in short, we want to burn out the poison of immorality which has entered into our whole life and culture as a result of liberal excess during the past...few years."61 <
The quote above was taken from a speech delivered by Hitler. It provides the illustration that the Nazi movement was completely a reactionary movement, reacting not only to global power politics and the rise of the left, but also to the changes in arts and culture of the time. It also provides the link to demonstrate that today's hard right movement in the U. S. is equally reactionary, in particular, the element of the so-called religious right. Contrast it with the quote by Pat Robertson below.

"The Constitution of the United States, for instance, is a marvelous document for self-governmentby Christian people. But the minute you turn the document into the hands of non-Christian and atheistic people they can use it to destroy the very foundation of our society."-Pat Robertson (The 700 Club, Dec. 30, 1981)62

Apparently, Robertson is under the impression that the constitution applies to only those he chooses and is null and void for the rest of us. Hitler held a similar contempt for democracy. However, the point that the Nazis were reactionary has been established beyond any doubt. The reaction was not just confined to the global political scene or economic conditions, but extended into the very roots of the culture. Starting around 1980, fascism reared its ugly head globally. Unlike the rise of fascism in the 1920s, this time the Reagan administration embraced it. The administration openly promoted class warfare, allowed the LaRocuhians access to security and intelligence agencies, filled the EPA with Coor's lackeys, and openly supported none but the elite. In essence, the Reagan administration was the American equivalent of the passage of the Enabling Act.

There is no need to expand on the violent behavior of the Nazis or fascists, as there is no dispute of their long history of violence. Instead, the violence of various groups in the United States will be explored. Many readers will immediately think of the violence that arose in the 60s during the war protests. In fact, that is the great illusion of the media. The truth is that little violence was directly attributed to war protestors. In fact much of the violence that did come out of the war protests was the work of the FBI.

The real story of violence in the 60s was the violence inflicted upon the civil rights workers by the Klan. The early part of the 60s was marred by violence, inspired by the Klan and racial hatred of right wing groups. Eisenhower had to use National Guards to integrate the Little Rock school system. Kennedy had to use federal marshals to integrate Old Miss. When the Supreme Court order that busing was to be used as a tool for integration, the violence spread nationally. The Klan burnt school busses in Michigan to prevent integration.

Since 1980, right wing groups such as the Order, which murdered the Denver talk show host, Berg, likewise have dominated the violence. The leader of the Order was killed in a shoot out with law enforcement. Another right wing group, the Posse Comitatus became a household word only after the Kahl shoot out with law enforcement in North Dakota. And of course there was the bombing of the Oklahoma federal building by the right winger McVeigh. Perhaps the greatest widespread use of violence since the Klan has been the bombing and violence directed against abortion clinics by members of the religious right.

Violence has been the hallmark of the hard right in America dating back at least as far as the Know Nothing Party in the 1800s and their hatred of Catholics. It was business leaders that hired Pinkertons to murder union organizers in earlier times. Yet there is relatively little in the way to support that left wing groups were equally violent. Groups like the Weathermen were violent, but the group was never more than a small fringe group. Its extremely small size limited the extent of its violence. One of the reasons for the lack of widespread violence from leftist groups has already been mentioned, the suppression of left wing groups by the FBI.

The last two traits of fascism will be explored together, as they are related by an underlying use of symbols and the inseparable nature of cults and religions. There is no doubt that both Hitler and Mussolini were in effect leaders of a cult. Their extremist views would rule out a major following otherwise. In fact, both promoted imagines consistent with cults. Both chose to use propaganda to promote larger than life imagines of themselves. Both Hitler and Mussolini were Catholics; neither appeared to be particularly active members of the church. Hitler referred to Christianity throughout Mein Kampf, as already shown by quotes of which a few more will be included here.

"The sword will become our plow, and from the tears of war the daily bread of future generations will grow."

"The more the linguistic Babel corroded and disorganized parliament, the closer drew the inevitable hour of the disintegration of this Babylonian Empire and with it the hour of freedom for my German-Austria people."

< " the Lord's grace smiled on his ungrateful children." >

Officially, the Nazis were a Christian group, if one can assign a religion to the group by the public policies they enacted. In this case, the assignment is based on the following prayer that the Nazis required to be recited in all public schools.

"Almighty God, dear heavenly Father. In Thy name let us now, in pious spirit, begin our instruction. Enlighten us, teach us all truth, strengthen us in all that is good, lead us not into temptation, deliver us from all evil in order that, as good human beings, we may faithfully perform our duties and thereby, in time and eternity, be made truly happy. Amen."67

It is also true that the Nazis dabbled in mysticism as well. Certainly some of the philosophers were pantheistic. But what really underlies both the religious and mysticism aspects of the Nazis is the symbolism buried underneath. In fact, one follower of fascism believed that the masses were unable to understand anything other than mere slogans. From Mein Kampf the following quote concerns the symbolism hidden behind the Nazi flag.

" Not only that the unique colors, which all of us so passionately love and which once won so much honor for the German people, attest our veneration for the past; they were also the best embodiment of the movement's will. As National Socialists, we see our program in our flag. In red we see the social idea of the movement, in white the nationalistic idea, in the swastika the mission of the struggle for victory of the Aryan man, and by the same token, the victory of the idea of creative work, which as such always has been and always will be anti-Semitic."66

At first in the quote above, Hitler is referring to the old flag of Germany. The choice of red was based on stealing from the communists and was chosen deliberately to enflame the Marxists. Throughout Mein Kampf, Hitler refers to the value of propaganda and made extensive use of symbols to convene a subtle message of hatred.

The similarities to the right wing in America is seen. The Republicans have introduced a flag desecration amendment to protect their symbolism. Even more revealing was the letter Newt Gingrich distributed to members of GOPAC. In this letter, members were to use the following words to impart a negative image: decay, failure, sick, liberal, unionized, welfare, corrupt, greed and intolerant. The following words were to impart a positive imagine: share, legacy, control, truth, and courage.68

Cults are inherently fascist in nature. The leader demands total submersion into the cult. America today has seen far too many examples of cults and cult behavior. A recent example, would be the Waco incident that ended badly. However, there are several right wing groups that do exhibit cult behavior besides the religious groups; the LaRouchians, many of the militias, and the Order would all qualify as cults. In addition, much of the hard right inside the Republican Party has taken on a cult like behavior in their idolizing Reagan. The 105th Congress renamed the Washington airport after him. In the present Congress Congressman Matt Salmmon of Arizona has introduced a bill to deface Mt Rushmore by adding Reagan's imagine to the monument.69

It has been shown beyond any reasonable doubt that Hitler and the Nazis were right wing extremists best described as social darwinists, the antithesis of socialism. It was showed that the Nazis were best described by syndicalism model and that syndicalism is neither socialistic nor capitalistic, inherently. Syndicalism can be either depending upon the makeup; the Nazis were definitely capitalists in that there was no input from labor. All input was reserved for the industrialist. Further, it was shown that the industrialists openly defied Nazi desires in the case of the use of low-grade ores. It was also shown that many of the businesses that was government owned were taken over by the government prior to the Nazis, some dating all the way from the monarchy. Likewise, it was shown that many of the Nazi programs would be classified as corporate welfare today. And it was shown that the real power behind the Nazi movement was the top elitist. This should be sufficient for anyone to dispel the myth that the Nazis were socialist, when in fact they were capitalistic extremists.

In defining fascism, three traits stand above all others, totalitarian, nationalism, and extreme corporatism. In fact, one can not have fascism without corporatism. Other traits of fascism, such as destructive divisionism and the use of violence are secondary. As fascist ideology evolved in the later half of the 20th Century, a happy face was put on fascism by its leaders as they down played the violence and racism. This can be seen best in the far right wing extremist groups currently active in the United States.

Additionally, there is one fact that absolutely places the Nazis and fascism in the extreme right wing portion of the political spectrum, and not the left. No one disputes that a communist revolution attacks the ruling elite of a country. Similarly, socialism and liberalism also attacks the same ruling elite, but the right wing extremists try to claim the opposite. In reality these systems merely seek methods to ease the burden and allow the lower classes to prosper rather than attacking the elite. The Nazis, on the other hand, did not attack the ruling elite of Germany. The rich industrialists were allowed to continue their ways, eased by laws that the Nazis enacted for their benefit. Likewise, the nobility of Germany was supported by the Nazis. In short, the Nazis adopted the ruling elite in Germany and supported them, the exact opposite of what a left leaning political ideology would support.
There is no better proof of the Nazi support for the ruling elite than looking at who supported Hitler in the 1930s in America. Granted, many lower class people were involved in the pro-Hitler movement just as in Germany. But like Germany, it was the rich industrialists that funded these groups. Hearst ordered his newspapers to print pro-Nazi articles. In fact, he had them print the Nazi propaganda directly from Gobbels. Irenee du Pont funded several pro-fascist groups. Henry Ford was well known for his praise of Hitler and funded many pro-Nazis in the 30s. Andrew Mellon and John D. Rockefeller were supporters of Hitler as well. No one is foolish enough to argue that these men were not part of the ruling elite or rich industrialists in America at the time. In fact, support for Hitler among the rich industrialists was rampant.
The continued propagation of such nonsense by the present right wing is nothing short of propaganda. It fits closely with the Nazis' use of propaganda and the symbolism proposed by Gingrich and his negative words. nor will it change the history of the right wing support of the Nazis.

Or "All Things Considered" in the afternoon. NPR has a very high presence in the "educational channels" of the FM band. Since it is cheap for the stations to carry them and it's a "public service", why not.

As I said in my previous post, the 545 is no slouch and you'd be better off getting a good quality scanner for above 30 mhz. But if you're itching to replace your 545 for LW/MW/SW, IMO the next step up has to be a Ten-Tec RX340. I replaced my 545 with an RX340, not because I was unhappy with the 545, but because I got a huge bonus at work and figured what the heck, go for it. The RX340 is absolutely superb and outperforms every rx I ever had.

But as nice as multi-kilobuck radios are, the performance improvement is not as dramatic as, say, upgrading to a NRD-545 from a portable. If you already have a great radio like a Drake R7A, JRC NRD-515, JRC NRD-545, AOR 7030, etc., you may find it's not really worth the expense to upgrade, as your current radio will hear at least 90% of what a multi-kilobuck radio will.

A couple of points.

You already have a tremendous HF receiver. Not the most pleasant audio, but a great radio.

Rather than move to an all-in-one, which may not be as efficient on the HF bands, keep the radio you've got, spend a couple of hundred improving your antenna, and put your money into a V/UHF radio. AOR makes a nice one, which should becoming to the US soon. Yeasu makes one, but HF isn't quite what you're used to.

An all-in-one that meets the same standard of HF performance you're used to, will cost far more than your $3500. And new ones are getting hard to find. ICOM discontinued the R8500 for consumer service, which was one of the few good widebands (though HF performance may still not have improved over your 545). And the 8500 was affordable, given your budget. AOR's R5000 was likewise affordable and performed well. No longer available. The R5001 will replace it.

Today a high performance wideband (new, not used) can top $14,000.

And truth be told, your HF performance with the 545 is within striking distance of Ten-Tec's RX3400, which is pushing $4000. Whereas, an improvement in your antenna will yield dramatic improvements at far less cost.

Keep your 545. Improve your antenna. Buy a decent V/UHF rig.

And put the rest into your VHF antenna.

242. Radio Suggestions Requested, Please. And, Re Yaesu FRG 7700

Hi,

I enjoy sw listening, and quite a while ago I gave my son my Yaesu FRG 7700 when I updated my set to a JRC.

He thinks he would like sw listening, but the FRG 7700 is of course all analog, and not much fun to use for someone like him who is very non-technical.

I was thinking of selling it, and using the $ to get him a modern sw receiver.

Would be for a Tabletop Model, and $ 250 max for the new one.

He wouldn't need SSB or vhf/uhf scanning, just the typical sw stuff below 30 MHz.
But, I guess fm would be nice also.

Would also want, I guess, an all digital readout, digital freq. selection, some memory capability, and if common, perhaps a built in displayable station/freq. database but they change so often, I'm not sure how or if this is practical ?
(Perhaps downloadable for Eibi, or...?)

Any suggestions ?

I guess the big names now for these types of radios are Sangean and Grundig/Eaton. Others ?

Frankly, I know nothing about them as to reliability or performance, or their model lineups.

Any suggestions would be most appreciated.

BTW: Anyone interested in a FRG 7700 ? Or, what kind of value do they have ?

Thanks,
Bob

Whilst your slavish defence of Pornographer Kramer is admirable your attempts to align your colleague David Leonard Arthur (a known the Kramer camp.

However I would dearly love to know why Kramer has'nt got the guts to

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.

1080p is doable OTA... but almost nobody is doing it. They'd rather add more channels and make more money than to give their bread and butter (the viewers) the best available.

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine. The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.

Remove the dome light. Try to fish the RG174U co-ax through the same place the dome light wire goes. There's usually some kind of channel.
Drill your hole straight up from the dome light.

If instead of trying so hard to look stupid, (BTW, you succeeded,) you

Scott, hang it up. You can't hold a job. You can't keep a residence. You

281. Anti-social personality disorder = LarbGai, Scott Koplin, Robert Johnson

The Internet is the perfect venue for people like these. They suffer from Anti-social Personality Disorder and can not function in 'real life' situations where they would have to interact with other people. They lie. They cheat. They steal. They have no regard for others, and show no embarrassment when caught at any of these, blaming others for their own shortcomings.

This is clearly demonstrated by Robert Johnson and his inability to to blend into the Thai social system nor the Ex-pat community in Chiang Mai. Instead, he drinks all day, splutters out a few lines into the newsgroups where he doesn't have to actually face anyone, then drops off in a drunken fugue only to wake up and repeat it all the next day.

Demonstrated by Scott Koplin's inability to hold a job, inability to keep a residence, and inability to even get through Military Basic Training.

Demonstrated by Larbgai, AKA David Leonard Arthur, the twice-convicted child sexual abuser.

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
The proof is right here in this web page...

None of the Public Broadcasting System publications or DVD's are cheap.
Namely to cover publication costs and whatever is left over becomes a "donation". However, programming as a whole is fairly cheap compared to commercial broadcasts. That's what I was trying to say.

Dave,

Yes the almost complete and total Liberal Monopoly

NPR - Oh the Silence of the Conservatives !

Giving less-than Equal Time {~12.5%}* for Truly All American Conservative Voices on NPR and Pubic

This sounds rather creative and clever! (Obviously NOT something the trolls would think up!)

We've had a long and interesting time in the knife group, with a lot of great information sharing, on many different topics. Real discussions with many people participating, and good clean fun. You don't find that in too many unmoderated groups these days.

It's true that it's my fault that these three followed me here, and I apologize to all for it. I haven't posted to the soc.culture.thai group in a very long time, and never answer these three at all. But that doesn't stop a true crazy, and with the Google Alerts system, they always know when I post. Frankly, I'm surprised that they waited so long to come to rec.knives again, and this time, in force. My apologies to everyone for the disturbance. Crazy people really make you crazy.

- Easy enough to strike up a conversation in English

- Won't take too long to see who the sympathizers are either.

DON'T GO LOOKING TO PICK-A-FIGHT
-cause- YOU WILL SURELY FIND ONE

There is NO need for Violence on Any Persons be they US Citizen or Illegal Un-Documented Aliens :
However If Narco-Terrorist and their American Allies Fire-On and Attack the Police or Federal Officials or the US Military then those charged with Inforcing US and State Laws should act to gain control of the situation and establish American Law and Order [.]

- But after all the carnage in the streets,
- where are you gonna get someone to
- clean up the mess?

If the US Federal Government gets off-its-ass and Enforces US Laws they will be NO Carnage {Riots and Warring} in the Streets of American Cities :
However since Prez Obama and the Obama Regime has actively NOT Enforced US Laws Prez Obama has insured that there will be Carnage-in-the-Streets {Social Unrest} of American Cities.

To Actively Enforce US Laws and Defend the USA and Protect American Citizens Prez Obama must use the US Military to Secure the US Border with Mexico and Search-Out and Destroy the Narco-Terrorists and their American Allies.

If we can have 100K Troops in Iraq; and 100K Troops in Afghanistan; and maintain 100K Troops in Europe and Korea : Then Prez Obama can put 100K Troops along the US/Mexican Border to Defend the USA and Protect American Citizens from the Narco-Terrorists and their American Allies.

1 - Pull the US Troops Out of Europe and redeploy these Troops to the US/Mexican Border to Defend the USA and Protect American Citizens from the Narco-Terrorists and their American Allies.

2 - Pull the US Troops Out of Asia/Korea and redeploy
these Troops to the US/Mexican Border to Defend the USA and Protect American Citizens from the Narco-Terrorists and their American Allies.

3 - Pull the Troops Out of Iraq by the end of this Year 2010 and redeploy these Troops to the US/Mexican Border to Defend the USA and Protect American Citizens from the Narco-Terrorists and their American Allies.

4 - Pull the Troops Out of Afghanistan by 2012 and redeploy these Troops to the US/Mexican Border to Defend the USA and Protect American Citizens from the Narco-Terrorists and their American Allies.

WAKE-UP AMERICA & MEXICO :
Each and Every Narco-Terrorists and every one of their American Allies that is Imprisoned or Killed in the US is one less that the Mexican Government and Citizens of Mexico has to deal with in Mexico; and Helps Mexico* in it's War Against Narco-Terrorist and the Global War on Drugs.

* SAVE MEXICO from Narco-Terrorism and Protect all Mexicans in Mexico and the USA from the Crimes and Killings by the Narco-Terrorists and their American Allies.

Six teens drowned in Louisiana. 5 boys and one girl. Just out having fun on a summer day, trying to keep cool.

Apparently none could swim and they came upon a dropoff in the river.

Imagine the absolute freaking horror as they tried to save one another.

Please, be careful out there.

This hits home in a way as a friend of mine was swept off the pier here during a storm 41 years ago on July 28 and drowned.

My thoughts are with them, their families, and the people of Louisiana.

Steve's pictures of naked elephants and monkeys does not constitute pornography. Hmm, now that I think further on it, it might be

One would think that after being bitch-slapped with links to the factual events, Johnson would at least show some embarrassment. But no... like a true sociopath, he just keeps making up more and more stories. Never any links to reality with Johnson. He will probably continue to say that Kramer was arrested and deported in 2004, despite this magazine story from 2006.

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

Johnson says that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
He says he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine. The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from

February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

There are 2 true HD formats in the US. 1080i/30fps; 720p/60fps

Keep in mind that Johnson had to put up barbed wire fencing around his house, with five motion sensor intruder detectors. (He was so drunk he didn't know how to operate them and had to repeatedly ask for help on the Internet.) His Thai neighbors kept throwing their garbage over the fence onto his property and even poisoned both of his dogs. That's the sign of a really respected individual.... Not.

Anti-social Personality Disorder sums up Robert Johnson perfectly. No friends. No social life. Nothing but a bottle of whiskey and the Internet for company.

Post a link or a cite or we will know that you are lying again. I can post a link...

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

All articles and mp3 audio files are now one-click away. The last 12 weeks of article links list the first line of any country related news for a quick preview. You can also search the feed for any text information.

If you subscibe to the feed you will automatically receive weekly updates as they are added.

Sure. For starters, the Volt IS more expensive than the Tahoe Hybrid.

http://www.chevrolet.com/tahoe/

And the Suburban ALSO costs less than the Volt, AND you cannot even get a hybrid Suburban.

http://www.chevrolet.com/vehicles/2010/suburban1-2ton/overview.do

And the batteries in the Volt DO have a 40 mile range, and require an overnight charge.

http://www.chevrolet.com/pages/open/default/future/volt.do?evar3=volt_hom_mhp

Volt is an electric car that uses gas to create its own electricity.
Plug it in, let it charge overnight, and it's ready to run on a pure electric charge for up to 40 miles(3)

I'm sure if he were here, he'd probably STILL ignore you. Just how stupid do you think people are?

If you are going to post 'facts' post something to support them, other than 'you' jabbering that they are. Like this.....

It's easy to put someone else's name onto something you write. Trolls do it all the time.

It's just not the same as posting a link to a well-known magazine.

Every time I see a CNN News Break saying
"Man goes berserk and shoots 11 co-workers" I wonder if it's Scott Koplin.

Then I remember that Scott Koplin can't hold a job so there wouldn't BE any co-workers. He'll probably be the one to shoot up a school-yard full of kids or a shopping mall full of innocent families.

One would think you would be smarter than this, David...
It's already been PROVEN beyond any doubt that there was no arrest. The proof is right here.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

The dates don't work. You have caught lying again.

You say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
You say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

You were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER you say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine. The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

Not familiar with Pacifica. I've caught their shows, NPR, every once in a while a few years back, especially All Things Considered. If the topic wasn't about politics, religion, guns or sex, it wasn't too bad, and some interesting information was to be had. However, if any of the above mentioned topics were in play, very little logic or fact was used to present the forum, just babble.

- Volt is an electric car that uses gas to create its own electricity.
- Plug it in, let it charge overnight, and it's ready to run on a pure
- electric charge for up to 40 miles(3)

Electric Coal* Powered Generation BTUs/KWH

Say Hey:

Steve Kramer too scared to post? You should have seen the scared look on his kisser when he was being questioned by the Royal Thai Police on January 8, 2004. He was a shaking and a quaking. I assure you a change of his underwear was necessary that day. Ah yes! January 8, 2004. A day that shall live in infamy. We tried to have him thrown in the slammer but the kind hearted Thai police took pity on him and suggested I sign his release. I assume they didn't want to put up with his stink. More to come. Stay tuned ......

Post a copy of the release. If you had to sign something, they would have to give you a copy. Show us this release or we will know, beyond any doubt, that you are lying... again. Actually, we know this already.

The dates don't work. Robert Johnson caught lying again.
Johnson says that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.

So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

Tell it to nurk_fred2000... He's your good buddy Scott Koplin, the reason many people stopped posting to this newsgroup. It's all in the archives.

> We all watched 'Reef Fish' flush himself down the tubes mentally.

... along with almost all the other posters that used to post to rec.scuba, right. Or did they just vanish into thin air? Rec.scuba now has 3-4 posters instead of the 20-30 daily posters it used to have. Will you blame that on Reef Fish too? Or on the 2-3 people that were attacking him...

I noticed that you cross-posted this to three groups as a good troll will, but somehow managed to forget to post to your own group. I guess that shows "just how pathetic and self-loathing you have become, with nothing left in your life than this scrabbling in the dirt," as you claim trolls are.

Look, David, can we PLEASE see some proof of at least ONE of your

Did you? If you think I'm Kramer, and you really did visit his studio, please describe it to us. I'm sure there are people reading these threads who will be able to corroborate your story. I don't believe that you have even been IN Thailand!

> Try for once to act like a man and start posting under your real

My real name isn't important. Only the fact that I can offer proof of your lies is relevant here. As you can't describe the studio, that will be further proof of your lies.

It's easy to put someone else's name onto something you write. Trolls do it all the time.

It's just not the same as posting a link to a well-known magazine.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.

The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

USENET is dying as an outlet medium and this sort of pig wrestling nonsense is one of the reasons why. But given that a disinterested third party complained about this off-topic BS, it was worth making an effort to volunteer a post or so that excluded rec.scuba, in order to encourage y'all buffoons to take your senseless crap parade elsewhere.

Sometimes this sort of approach works, sometimes it doesn't...but what we all know is that "Asking Nicely" no longer works.

But feel free to prove me wrong: please take your disagreements offline. The rest of the readership simply does not care.

Quite popular. According to Google Search, by my count of the 'attendees,' there were three of you. Do you line-dance?

However,the dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

Say Hey:

156 days to go for Stevie's 7 year anniversary. We certainly had a ball last year. Next will be even bigger and better.
I'm thinking of sending him an email but can't find his website.
Anyone have any suggestions?

N-S paths are hot on 20 meters. Just talked to a guy in Buenos Aires with a wire antenna and 100 watts (both of us) - excellent signals both ways.

Yeah, in fact of the business, its like somebody doing some welding inside of the compressor motors.Really does a ''number'' on those compressor motors!

Today I was drilling some holes sideways in some 2'' by 4''s.I made my own drill bit from an 8'' long bolt.The threads on that bolt/home made drill bit was doing a ''number'' on my old Milwaukee 1/2'' electric drill too.

I couldn't say what he did. What I do say is that YOU can NOT describe his studio because you were never there.

Just more of your lies. Would you like to see how to PROVE you are lying?

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.

Yes the Eton E1s have a 'nice' long-term Listening Sound, and some claim that the E1's AM-SYNC is better that the GS800.

Usually for the 'portable' AM/FM Shortwave Radios like the Sony ICF-SW7600GR Receiver

It's summer in the Arctic.. such as that is. It's winter in Argentina, and they're fairly far south, so pretty cold. Argentine temperatures range from a record of 120(49C) degrees in January 1920 to a record low of -38(-39C) in July, 1972.

59 degrees at 5 AM. Had to put on a sweater.

With blistering heat, freezing blizzards, torrential rains, and the occasional tornado, you'd think flyover country was punishing its inbred hillbilly constituents. I'll take the fires and earthquakes (and the good weather).

You still haven't described the studio...

> Two can play at the photo game can't they Steve, and I must admit you > were a bit shy when my camera came out.

Wonderful!! You have a photo. Show us. Otherwise, we know it's just another one of your lies.

I like this one the best though...

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
The proof is right here in this web page...

February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

Hi Dave. not so much the skip zone, as they can play hell here in daylight. after dark, that freq really gets busy, and WWVA just seems to ride everyone else. 1.170 is a busy freq in the USA. 10 or 15 years ago they moved their signals around a bit. back during the days of the clears, i would get them like KDKA here. local news at noon here showed all 3 of their towers down. pics should be somewhere on the web. looks like they will be off for awhile.

Thanks for the info. Nothing on that frequency right now. Weak het on 1172.8 but nothing audible in MI. Will listen at sunset with the directional loop. Radio Minsk or VOR via Minsk uses this frequency (1170 kHz) for anyone on the east coast. Would be difficult today with all the solar and electrical storm activity but you never know.

No proof of anything. Trolls try to say something happened, but when questioned about it, 'insist' (as if that will make it so) that what they say is true, but no ONCE have ever offered any proof of what they say! NOT ONCE!

On the other hand, everyone disagreeing with them usually offer third-party validations such as newspapers, magazines articles, and independent web sites as counters to the troll claims.

Of course, every person who disagrees with the troll is considered to be just a sock puppet of their target, Kramer. This despite the FACTS that the various posters are posting from several different countries, including locations which do not permit proxy posting.

Say Hey Stevie:

The only lies come from you Stevie. On January 8, 2004 you unequivally stated to the Royal Thai Police that you would refrain from sending abusive faxes, telephone calls, emails etc to the Pickle King business. But did you keep your word, Nay! You began playing games with your cell phone. You put a stop to it when we discovered it was you again attempting to interfere with the business and threatened to have you not only arrested but deported from the kingdom. Your deportation was only delayed. When the police gathered enough evidence, as provided by CMPK, you were brought before the Royal Thai Immigration Bureau, charged, convicted and deported.

Larbgai has been to Thailand numerous times over the years. He has met you face to face and even took pictures of you posing in your run down studio. What a joke for a studio. Now you go and think about it son and report back here.

Please show proof of what you say. If you can't, we know that you are lying... again.

As we see you lying here;
The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine. The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

* How much longer are you going to keep this pretence up Steve???

Why are you continuing to use this sock puppet when you once proudly boasted that you ALWAYS used your own name and people who used aliases were the lowest form of life.

Are you the lowest form of life now Steve??

Do you seriously think that people care about what you write in defence of yourself??

Why Steve? You are a nobody.

What the so called "trolls" have done is embarrassed you so much(by pointing out to those who care) your bullying, blustering and outright bullshitting to the stage where you are too scared to post anywhere using your real name.
Oh I know, your going to print a whole series of outdated URL's that were paid advertorials but these are many years old and before the time we decided to give you your comeuppance.

We will continue with this when you post using your real name Steve, go on just make the adjustment, it's easy.
No sense talking to a sock puppet when the real person is behind the keyboard is there all the time.

Go on Steve I dare you.....

You used this one waaaay too many times for anyone to believe it. Either post your proof or else we just have to continue to KNOW that you are lying.

The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine. The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

As he was there to give evidence against YOU, along with the owner/publisher of CityLife magazine and the owner of the Middle Eastern restaurant that took away all your business, why would he be ashamed? Would you like to see the photo of them standing on the steps of the police station as you stumble in? Unlike Larbgai, I'm quite willing to post proof.

> Perhaps you want to talk about it over a beer or two? Name > the place and time. I'll even spring for the drinks.

Two problems... First, there isn't a bar in Chiang Mai that would let you in, and secondly, I have no desire to meet you. Kramer does. He tried to get you to meet him many times, but you never showed up. It's all in the archives. Would you like me to bring them all into view?

Are you afraid to send him e-mail? I think you are.

Didn't he have about a dozen of your e-mail accounts shut down because you were mail-bombing him? Didn't Loxinfo shut you down, and you tried (and lost... as usual) to sue them for it? Remember that? It's all in the archives. I'll be happy to post the link citing this event.

Imagine... your ISP throws out your account because YOU broke the law, and you try to sue THEM? I imagine that created quite a laugh among the ex-pat community when they found out. Chalk up another Robert Johnson fiasco!

Almost as good as the custom-ordered Christmas cake you insisted the baker give you your money back for because the Thai mail system wouldn't let you mail them to the US. Imagine... trying to return a custom ordered cake!!! Ya gotta love Google Archives! Better than Comedy Central!

Say Hey Stevie:

You must have been eating pretzels son. Your yarns are all twisted again.

Loxley gave me a ration of shit and I cut them off on payment. Tried to collect and I told them to get stuffed. Threatened me with a lawsuit and I told 'em to go ahead. Never heard from 'em again. See where their stock on SET is way down.

Re the Xmas cake. The dumb lemon pelter told me it could be sent via Fed-Ex and FE told me their policy does not permit food to be sent. I asked and received a full refund. So you along with the pomy asshole can eat cake!

Say Hey Stevie:

I continue to offer payment for your visit to Suan Prung Pyschartic Hospital. Your in sad shape son. Seem you have spiraled downhill when coming to Chiang Mai to make a go of it. Don't understand why an ole broken down snapper like yourself would want to open a photography business and compete with the Thai shops. Beside Chiang, as you have said, is a very small town.  For a retired Australian public servant you sure seem to be a fount of knowledge in all things Kramer.

Did you spend you career researching Kramer and like minded

Your recent postings in favour of the paedophile and pornographer ex

Well, Scott is a bit of a wannabe in the military line. My guess is, since he was rejected by the police force as well, he'll be looking for a job as a security guard next. That way he gets to wear a uniform, carry a gun and "feel" important! Here's hoping he'll have to do some psych. assessment before they let him loose on that! Hopefully they'll find he has a few screws loose and reject him, a situation he is very familiar with!

Say Hey:

Larbgai. Sorry to have blown your cover. But after you sending me the picture of you in his studio I couldn't help but laugh at the poor ole sod sitting there so proudly in the chair with the Thai Tourist Police sticker he glued to the wall. Must have been real proud of himself being one of the Farangs In Blue (FIB). Paid over 3,000 baht for his FIB outfit and only got to put it to use a few times. I understand Stevie tried to sell it for a profit to his fellow volunteers.

526. PAR ENDFEDZ LINE ACQUIRED BY LnR PRECISION

Just saw this on QRZ.com:

On August 2, 2010 LnR Precision, Inc. acquired the popular Par EndFedz line of amateur and SWL antennas. Larry, AE4LD, will be the new owner. Larry is a talented machinist, active amateur, QRPer and will be far better equipped to manufacture and expand the EndFedz line of antennas. In recent years, PAR has had to resort to only accepting orders in 1 week windows in order to better balance their growing commercial segment and the amateur products. LnR Precision will have much larger manufacturing capabilities and thus amateurs will benefit from much faster order filling. Dale W4OP will be staying on to complete new designs and offering technical assistance to LNR Precision. Amateurs can expect new novel EndFedz models in the near future. "I wish to thank the many thousands of amateurs who have bought EndFedz and whom I think of as friends. I will continue to design/manufacture both commercial and amateur filters and expand our line of commercial and amateur VHF/UHF antenna products and hopefully some really interesting surface mount accessories for HF rigs." -Dale W4OP

Those entities (except NPR) are all ratings driven capitalist corporations. If they skew one way or another it is because that is How different it would have been if digital broadcasting had been given its own dedicated band: There would be many new channels opened up for alternative programming, and the AM and FM bands would have become _less_ congested, not more.

But no, that could never be allowed. The billionaire money-men would have lost all their expensive signal advantages over the small broadcaster. That would be intolerable.

With all good wishes,

Kevin, WB4AIO.

JJ. in the July Mon. Times, they got a story/ comparison, of the Eaton line. if your making up a "go bag", or some such, i would go as small as possible. I got an Eaton FR-350 here. it was a freebie from universal. has the crank and an LED light, no solar panel. from the few articles i have read, the ones with the solar panel are next to useless. may take days to charge. throw some cheap batteries in the bag. also has "most" of the shortwave band. most out there have MW/FM/ and a bit of the SW bands. what do you want or need to hear? mine also cover the NOAA weather band. it's up to you what you feel you might need. so it's going to be what's best for you. the Eaton are as good or better than most. check the Universal web site, google for ETOW, and see what they are giving away. Ears To Our World, has given radios out to the back water schools/teachers all over the world. so, i would say the one they give out would have to be reliable. just a thought. please post what you decide to get and why. good luck.

D'OH! ... I got sidetracked last night and forgot to listen to 1170.
WWVA's website says they're back on the air with reduced power (I wonder what the power is?) and no ETA as to when they'll be back on 50kw . I bet they're using a horizontal wire or maybe a hastily erected vertical.

Thanks for the tips. What I do is stay away from the sqare waves. The nice thing about having some sort of bandscope is that you can see the sidebands of those IBOC stations and I will try to steer clear of these. The bad thing is there are more of these stations staying on at night.

Is WWVA back on? I did not see a post. It did appear there was a dead carrier on 1170 just before sunset local time (before the hash got strong).

Given that David works with these numbers for a living as the national programming director of a nationwide station operator, I'd say that he probably has a reason to say the things he does about ratings. Perhaps it's a misunderstanding somewhere.

I don't recall EVER challenging you on anything within your area of expertise, which is radio engineering, and if I have I'll happily apologize for stepping over the line there.

You've posted about signals, RPUs, antennas, transmitters, and all that and I don't think you've heard a peep out of me about it.

I do challenge your concepts about programming, sales, management, and other matters. Remember, you're the one who said that the stations you worked for didn't test their songs, but instead did seat-of-the-pants programming.

For the record, I've sold and bought radio and TV time, have done some programming (about 6 months, but even so...) and have done some station bookkeeping, leading me to see the numbers for themselves. I've also worked on-air, and managed dozens of employees in two businesses (telephone call center and food and beverage), so I think I have perhaps more expertise in those areas than you do.

And while I have some engineering chops, I defer to you in those issues.

I must be one of the odd ones in SoCal as I rarely listen to radio while at home or work but never drive with the radio off. With me it's start car and turn on the radio (if I turned it off, which I rarely do). So I probably do 99.44% of my listening in the car.

HEY - Mobile IBOC [HD] Radio does work Great
. . . as long as you stay parked in the Driveway.

Actually HD Radio Receivers have the same disadvantages and Advantages as the good old Analog AM/FM Radios.
* Most of the Home Radios are poorly designed and cheaply built and lack real RF performance.
* While most of the Auto Radios are better designed and better built and have good RF performance wrt those intended for the Home.
* Plus the Auto Radios are 'matched' to an Antenna system that works very well in the mobile environment that the Radio exists in.

IBOC is a Two [Dual] Signal System Analog and Digital
-if- the Digital Drops-Out the Analog is still there.
-if- the Digital Drops-Out the Analog is weak and/or hash Digital is not the issue -cause- you are in a signal dead zone or beyond the stations signal.

HOME - IBOC [HD] Radios can have their Digital over Analog 'sense' point set at a higher level; because they are in a fixed location; with Digtal being the preferred mode.

AUTO - IBOC [HD] Radios can have their Analog over Digital 'sense' point set at a lower level; because they are in a mobile location; with Analog being the preferred mode.

Actually having a Preferred 'Mode' Switch built into the IBOC [HD] Radio makes sense especially for Auto Radios. Call the Preferred 'Mode' Switch what you will :
* Local [HD] / Distant AM/FM
* HD / Normal

For most Audio Consumers at Home : Music is the preferred Content and they listen to FM Stereo; and Digital "HD" Radio expands their Music Listening Enjoyment.

For most Audio Consumers in Autos : Music is again the preferred Content and they listen to FM Stereo; and Digital "HD" Radio expands their Music Listening Enjoyment.

Note KSL & KCBS* both 'simulcast' on FM now.
* News Weather and Traffic for People On The Go !

As IBOC [HD] Radio increases it's Digital Signal Output from 1% up to 10%? the Drop-Outs will lessen and the number of HD Audio Consumers will expand greatly at least for the FM Radio Band; where the majority of Audio Consumers are.

And once again IBOC [HD] Radio is very much like good old Analog Radio It's FREE* to the Consumer.
* and the majority of the people like 'Free'; grew-up on/with 'Free'; and think 'Free' is really good.

Last things that I read from the FCC {US GOV} and NPR {CPB+US GOV} both were Positive about IBOC [HD] Radio; at least for the FM Radio Band where NPR with the Thousands of Public Non-Commercial FM Radio Stations; together are looking to expand both their Content and Services via IBOC using HD-1 and HD-2 Channels on the FM HD-Radio.

NOTE - I recently bought an Insignia® FM HD-Radio 'portable' Player Model NS-HD01 as a waking around

Pocket FM Radio. Even up here in Twain Harte, CA
{The Land of the Blinking Blue Light -aka- Drop-Outs} it preforms well and gives good reception and quality sound from Central Valley FM HD-Radio Stations that are 45~75 Air Miles away.

The politics of many liberals are motivated by a lack of self-love and self-esteem. This claim can be inductively proven by an analysis of their behavior.People with a low sense of self can be found in any occupation. However the types of work to which they are drawn include positions of power and control over others (to compensate for their lack of power over how they think and feel about themselves), positions that can draw fame or praise (to fill their longing for esteem), occupations that involve emotions more than reason, and positions that are somewhat removed from reality...

While I may not have some of the expertise he claims to have, I am an engineer, and have worked for many years in radio. I speak two languages and working on a third, not that that matters to the converasation.

That being said, I need no radio expertise at all to know a pompous, dismissive, ass when I see one. He cares about ratings, which are made of whole cloth and based upon a model that is non-sequitur in the real world. We've all seen what the true meaning of polls is during the past four election cycles. There's just no way you can legitimately, despite what some would have you believe, base the opinions of 1,000,000 people on the dubious reporting of a few hundred or so.

The industry, and he in particular, choose to dismiss the opinions, tastes, and needs of a significant segment of the population (and getting MORE significant over the next 20 years or so) with the totally inapt reasoning that they "don't contribute significantly to sales figures" and "are not swayed to try new products", both of which are patently and demonstrably untrue, if you actually LISTEN to your public rather than to allow yourself to be lead around like an animal at a petting zoo.

FWIW, I have a good friend that has known David for many years, and who agrees 100% with my opinions of him. This person has never owned any stations, nor won any major awards, either. But he has been in radio for over 40 years in various positions.

This hits the nail on the head. No one accused Eduardo of being stupid, but he has his own agenda and he will distort the truth accordingly. He's a bit like Univision's own version of the Iraqi Huh? Without ratings it's very hard to make income. Sure, it's possible to sell time on stations with no ratings, but it's extremely difficult. Stations such as KEST and KPIG(AM) do it, but they have a tough go of it. KPIG(AM) is advertising for salespeople every couple months because it's so hard to keep salespeople who can't make any money selling time.

Regardless of whether you think the ratings system is flawed or not, the PPMs and the diaries of Arbitron are fairly close for the most part, and the differences between Neilsen and Arbitron ratings aren't much different, either. Thus, I'd be inclined to think the ratings systems aren't as flawed as people contend they are.

None of this matters in radio and TV ratings. The ratings come in and the stations sell based on those ratings. The advertisers buy based on the assumption that they are correct. If they're so far off as to be bogus, the advertisers would have left long ago and the ratings systems would have been thrown out. Companies do not spend money capriciously, especially they're trying to bring in business.

I haven't followed his opinions on IBOC. When I see IBOC my eyes glaze over. Until recently I had the term "IBOC" killfiled, so if this were 2 weeks ago I wouldn't have seen your post at all.

Being that he is a company executive if he's in favor of IBOC he could be boosting it as a matter of following company policy. That's what executives must do sometimes in order to keep their jobs.

Sure, if that's the case we can call him a shill or say that he's a liar, but if you had such a position with a major broadcaster I doubt you'd act any differently. I once wrote ad copy saying that Cadillac was an "economy car". Why? I wanted to keep my job.

Okay, let's say your company spent oddles of dollars on a failed technology. You've had success and your company likes you, but then you also realize that you're age 61, in a job that normally goes to people 20 to 30 years younger than you. If you lose this job you'll likely stay in radio, given your track record, but not in a position paying as well or with as much prestige as what you have right now.

Do you tow the company line or do you speak out and jeopardize your job? For those who have a knee-jerk reaction of "tell the truth", all I can say is that you've never had to face such a question or you wouldn't be so quick on the draw.

The Tea Bagger GOP are motivated by a lust for killing and self gratification, (money, sex and food) only caring for themselves and nobody else. So, I guess the above line would appear correct by a Tea Bagger's prospective.

I'm not saying that Eduardo is the devil because he's a sellout. I'm merely asserting what many others have also observed: that, for whatever reason, Eduardo is a sellout. I bear him no ill will. I just call 'em like I see 'em.

Many of the wonderful-sounding ideas that have been tried as government policies have failed disastrously. Because so few people bother to study history, often the same ideas and policies have been tried again, either in another country or in the same country at a later time-- and with the same disastrous results.

One of the ideas that has proved to be almost impervious to evidence is the idea that wise and far-sighted people need to take control and plan economic and social policies so that there will be a rational and just order, rather than chaos resulting from things being allowed to take their own course. It sounds so logical and plausible that demanding hard evidence would seem almost like nit-picking.

In one form or another, this idea goes back at least as far as the French Revolution in the 18th century. As J.A. Schumpeter later wrote of that era, "general well-being ought to have been the consequence," but "instead we find misery, shame and, at the end of it all, a stream of blood."

The same could be said of the Bolshevik Revolution and other revolutions of the 20th century.

The idea that the wise and knowledgeable few need to take control of the less wise and less knowledgeable many has taken milder forms-- and repeatedly with bad results as well.

One of the most easily documented examples has been economic central planning, which was tried in countries around the world at various times during the 20th century, among people of differing races and cultures, and under government ranging from democracies to dictatorships.

The people who ran central planning agencies usually had more advanced education than the population at large, and probably higher IQs as well.

The central planners also had far more statistics and other facts at their disposal than the average person had. Moreover, there were usually specialized experts such as economists and statisticians on the staffs of the central planners, and outside consultants were available when needed. Finally, the central planners had the power of government behind them, to enforce the plans they created.

It is hardly surprising that conservatives, such as Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in Britain and President Ronald Reagan in the United States, opposed this approach. What is remarkable is that, after a few decades of experience with central planning in some countries, or a few generations in others, even communists and socialists began to repudiate this approach.

As they replaced central planning with more reliance on markets, their countries' economic growth rate almost invariably increased, often dramatically. In the largest and most recent examples-- China and India-- people by the millions have risen above these countries' official poverty rates, after they freed their economies from many of their suffocating government controls.

China, where famines have repeatedly ravaged the country, now has a problem of obesity-- not a good thing in itself, but a big improvement over famines.

This has implications far beyond economics. Think about it: How was it even possible that transferring decisions from elites with more education, intellect, data and power to ordinary people could lead consistently to demonstrably better results?

One implication is that no one is smart enough to carry out social engineering, whether in the economy or in other areas where the results may not always be so easily quantifiable. We learn, not from our initial brilliance, but from trial and error adjustments to events as they unfold.

Science tells us that the human brain reaches its maximum potential in early adulthood. Why then are young adults so seldom capable of doing what people with more years of experience can do?

Because experience trumps brilliance.

Elites may have more brilliance, but those who make decisions for society as a whole cannot possibly have as much experience as the millions of people whose decisions they preempt. The education and intellects of the elites may lead them to have more sweeping presumptions, but that just makes them more dangerous to the freedom, as well as the well-being, of the people as a whole.

Say Hey:

Stevie never had any authority with the tourist police. His main responsibilites were to direct tourists to restrooms, money exchanges, and his speciality of which noodle stands provide the best fare for the price. Perhaps his auctioned off uniform will wind up in a museum here in Chiang Mai of the infamous. Ah yes I do recall those days of our clown prince telling everyone where the elephants lie down.

Experience DOES tells us that trickle down economics do not work.

Experience is also learning from past failures and using common sense to not repeat them. Experience alone promotes repeating waste and inefficiency. Intelligence is developing new ways of achieving the same end with less effort expended, faster and cheaper. For some reason, the conservative right is against intelligence and high education. Asia has invested heavily in this area and it is paying off for them.

Besides, the top 1% of the rich are not people who re-invest into infrastructure. They mostly are corporate CEOs, bankers and investors. Give them a tax break and they will take the extra money and stash it overseas where it will not be taxed.

Removing tax breaks for corporations who import their products tariff-free, and then compete with true American manufacturers would be a great way to get America back to manufacturing and a sound economy.

Unfortunately, this way of thinking would hinder profit from large corporations and eat into investors and bankers profits. This is why bankers and investors are not financing small business loans. American manufacturing jobs eat into Corporate profit!

Putting more tax free money in the over-stuffed pockets of the rich (at your expense) will only create money that trickles down into republican senator's pocket when they become lobbyist.

I agree Eduardo is pretty sharp, but let me try to explain Brenda's point, or perhaps put my spin on it. There are two ways to market a product. One is to do research, focus groups, etc. This produces a product that the market probably wants to some degree, but also a product for which the market is familiar. Now the way to make a killing is to come up with a product that the customer doesn't know he needs. You understand the product, not the market per se because the market isn't built yet. Basically if you focus on surveys, you can only provide something that the customer already knows about. You probably won't screw up, but you won't make a killing either.

Eduardo has no passion for radio. He surveys the market and tries to adjust stations to meet what his survey indicates is marketable.

Eduardo doesn't shill. Rather, he has bet his reputation on that crappy technology. Eduardo can plug HD all day on usenet and it won't make a hill of beans in the sales numbers, so he is not shilling. Of course, it is pretty obvious he is spreading propaganda.

d'Eduardo understands the Univision Corporation's Agenda to use IBOC and HD1 and HD2 Channels to Double the Number of Spanish Language FM Radio Stations in the USA.
* Double the FM Station HD Channels
* Double the Listener Choices

- Who in Hell comes home and turns on their radio?

I do turn on the 'local' AM Radio Station to Listen to the Local News that the Big City TV and Radio Stations don't cover.

Local Noon News on the Radio followed by the Regional/State/National News on the TV out of SAC-Town.

- Maybe, sit at their computers and listen to Internet Radio.

Dang I got a real AM/FM/Shortwave Radio with some real outside Antennas next to my PC and listen to Radio ~80% of the time. {like right now}

The oldies station is WFDL, Waupun, WI. Operating with 1000 watts daytime and a PSRA of 9 watts. I think I may have heard them with the 9 watts.

Have to do further checking and maybe send 'em a report. Not that terribly far away, but still interesting at that power.

You see a finite and limited market that can not expand.

d'Eduardo & Univision see a current finite and presently limited market that can be expanded with more FM Station HD Channels and More Diverse Station Programming {Different Audience Profiles*} between the Channels.

and More Revenue Streams.

597. Magnetic Longwire Balun: weird resistance. What is normal?

I am rebuilding my 15+ yr old longwire+MLB antenna due to broken coax etc etc.

I checked the DC resistance between the 3 terminals of the MLB:
IN - high impedance longwire tiepost
OUT - low impedance coax center conductor SHIELD - coax shield.
Weird results:
IN-OUT = < 2 ohm
IN-SHEILD = OUT-SHIELD = ~50 ohm (can't really notice a difference)

Inverting + and - does not change result, hence not an obvious semiconducting corrosion cell.

AFAIK
- the circuit is just a very broadband impedance transformer
- there should be no resistor
...however I don't remember what the normal resistance might have been.

QUESTIONS
1- what would be normal resistance values?
would near zero be reasonable?
2- guesses on what might have happened?
is 50 ohm compatible with a poor contact 3- did anybody crack it open?
suggestions for repair?

Thanks for any wisdom on this matter!

Hello,

It sounds like there is a 50 Ohms resistor between the shield connection and the common of the autotransformer The MLB I made myself has no resistors inside. If there was resistance, I would expect it between the transformer and the "out" terminal, not inbetween the transformer and ground terminal.

Did you add some small mechanical impulse to the MLB and/or shield connection. If there is contact resistance problem, it mostly changes after mechanical shocks. Does it mention a brand or type number?

Does it function? You can check this by putting a short piece of wire to the 50 Ohms coaxial cable that goes to your receiver. Tune to a station where you still can observe increase or decrease of signal strength. Now connect the MLB to the cable and connect the piece of wire to the input of the MLB. This should result in more signal power.

That short piece of wire has very high impedance at HF so adding the MLB will reduce the mismatch, hence increases output signal.

Best regards,

I know Bob Ling aka Reef Fish personally and can verify that he is way too proud of his own self to bother creating a new persona to hide behind.

On the other hand, I've been posting and corresponding with Scott Koplin for years as well and would be utterly astounded if he were really able to create and maintain the personae of kop and Nurk Fred. Hint: the real Scott incorrectly uses apostrophes to pluralize many words, something I haven't noticed in the posts of these supposed sock-puppets of his. Besides the IP address that places kop and Nurk Fred somewhere in the Pacific Northwest, is there any other evidence that they are really Scott Koplin? Liberty Net: July 31, 2010

http://3950.net/2010/08/liberty-net-july-31-2010/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

CONDITIONS were excellent this week on the Liberty Net, and so were the conversations. Check-ins spanned the entire eastern half of North America. Here are just a few of the highlights from this weekï¿½s most exciting net on the amateur radio bands:

ï¿½ Obama made a recent statement on ï¿½The Viewï¿½ that most Blacks in America are ï¿½mongrels.ï¿½ If a White person had made such a statement, the media would have gone into overdrive and there likely would have been rioting in streets. (12 minutes)

ï¿½ Maxine Waters can be properly described as the Communist representative from California, now that she has openly stated that all businesses should be seized by the government. (24 minutes)

ï¿½ Why are the bank failure announcements always made late on Friday? ï¿½ in hopes that they will no longer be ï¿½newsï¿½ by Monday? So far, despite the ï¿½happy talkï¿½ from the regime in Washington, the bank failure rate is almost twice as high this year than in 2009. (26 minutes)

ï¿½ As the government gets more and more power-mad and bloodthirsty, and as the financial system gets more and more fraudulent, a growing number of businesses ï¿½ and intelligent people ï¿½ are relocating outside of the country that was once called America. (52 minutes)

ï¿½ Are there now enough criminals on Wall Street so that they could be rounded up and sent to pick crops in the fields, allowing all the Mestizo invaders to be sent home? (56 minutes)

ï¿½ It is so sad to see Andy Griffith and other iconic cultural figures become shills for the regime in Washington ï¿½ but then actors have never been known for their insight or intelligence. (58 minutes)

ï¿½ Are Maxine Waters and Charlie Rangel ï¿½ as true-believing Marxists and anti-White ideologues, and thus electoral liabilities ï¿½ going to be ï¿½thrown under the busï¿½ by the Zionist thugs who run Obama? (1 hour 7 minutes)

ï¿½ With America being invaded and Americans being used as cannon fodder in the money-menï¿½s endless wars, why are Republicans pushing through a resolution approving an Israeli attack on Iran? (1 hour 13 minutes)

ï¿½ Some used to make fun of the late Irwin (W2VJZ) Richardtï¿½s on-air adherence to the Constitution, but obeying the Constitution would put the regime in Washington completely out of business ï¿½ and, in addition to being the only legal thing to do, that would be a very good thing. (1 hour 26 minutes)

ï¿½ Government-faked photographs falsely implying that Ross Perotï¿½s daughter was a lesbian were the real reason Perot dropped out of the presidential race. It is high time Americans realized that the Washington regime regularly engages in such fraud, bullying, and dirty tricks; they did so in my case too. How many lives will we allow them to destroy before we stop them? (1 hour 35 minutes)

Thanks to N2SAG and N2IRJ and W1WCR, you can listen to the Liberty Net every week ï¿½ on 3950 plus or minus several kHz ï¿½ every Saturday night at 10PM Eastern Time, and also via the Web. You can also download the Liberty Net right here at http://3950.net and listen in your car, at work, or wherever you like.

Commercial radio is always about numbers, specifically numbers of DESIRABLE listeners. Desirable listeners are usually men and women ages 25 to 49 because they are known to spend the most money across the most kinds of products and services.

Remember, as the radio audience you are not the customer, you are the PRODUCT being sold to the customer. The customer is the advertiser. This is why David Eduardo has a successful career in radio and you do not.

* The various sock puppets that are posting about Scott and several others are none other than Steve Kramer up to his old tricks.
Well known in various groups for his spamming, bullying, blustering and causing mayhem amongst members whilst himself (in the days when he had the courage to post under his real name) would maintain the high moral ground.
I don't know Scott either but I would guess that Kramer just picked out a name at random (he's got one for me from a phone book and at one time I was the Mayor of Tauranga) and away he went on his fruitless campaign.

A few years ago a group of us got together to combat this fool and we have had considerable success.

*Nowhere does he post using his real name or his loathsome spam.
*After catching out breaking the laws of Thailand on several occasions we were able to point the authorities in his direction and the result.......
*Deportation.

Cheers hope that helps.

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

Yes, it is true that Scott Koplin has no education, and often does use incorrect punctuation, the writing skills of these two sock puppets isn't any higher. Koplin was 'outed' using the 'Rick Armstrong' sock puppet several years ago when he forgot which account he was using and signed with his own name!

Koplin frequently uses the very same phraseology and terms used by these two. However, the most telling argument is the intense hatred these two sock puppets show for their target, Kramer. There are only two individuals who have cause for this level of anger and also live in the Belleville, Washington area; Scott Koplin and K.Michael Young. Both are anti-social, behaviorally disordered psychopaths, and both were intensely humiliated in their dealings with Kramer. I think it's safe to assume that it is one of them, and by the choice of language, Scott Koplin.

Well, you may not count. People over age 50 don't count to most advertisers, thus most of the KGO listenership is a group few companies want to reach. That's because people over 50 don't buy much, and those who do tend not to be swayed much by advertising.

That's just the reality of the ratings game.

Well, commercial radio has always been that way, since the beginning of the medium and the very first ads (KQW in 1909 in San Jose). If you want radio that caters to you as a listener, I suggest you support your local non-commercial stations, since to them YOU are the customer, given that they depend on your dollars.

Reality has changed, the radio industry is not changing with it. The people with the most disposable income are all over 50 (boomers), and, at least until this recent downturn, which has affected ALL sales, they spent quite a lot of it. I myself am always buying new tech, and I still try new fast foods when they come out, ad inf.. Boomers are a huge market that is being largely ignored. We buy new cars, hot new toys like the iPad and iPhone, big screen TV's, all kinds of big ticket items that we denied ourselves earlier in our lives because we had families to raise and mortgages to pay.

Ratings are bogus. I, and most people, really don't care to have my decisions on what to listen to or watch or whatever decided by a small sample pool. Imagine if 2500 especially picked individuals decided who would be POTUS?

It dont work that way anymore. It turns out, the neurology shows that you cant raise kids on sugar cereals, junk food, and soda and then expect them to grow up to be rational voters. Just look at all the lunacy here compared to the tiny amount of rational discourse.

And this effects the elites as well.

As a result, the corporate mass media prefers sensational stories that build ratings and hence ad revenues rather than the dull analysis of real statistical data showing what is going on.

The elites, the media, and the sheeple all suffer from group think.

You are hard put to find a poster who admits there is a downside to proposals, yet the rational mind always knows there aint no free lunch.

That may be less true than you think. Even non-comms are about the money. And the bulk of funding for most non-comms is corporate underwriting. Which is still about the numbers game. Non-comms fewer listeners see reduced funding. If any at all from some underwriters.

Now, this isn't true in many countries outside the US, where broadcasting is government run, government owned. But in the US, radio has always been about the money. Always. And programming...well, that's just there to hold a listener's attention between commercials.

Many of the first radio stations were licensed under amateur regs to operators of grain elevators who used their transmitters to report grain and commodity prices to farmers at harvest time. WDZ, Decatur, IL, began this way while still licensed as an amateur station in Tuscola. This became a model for other operations. The station would sign on in the morning, give commodity prices, sign off, until noon. When it would sign on, again, broadcast commodity prices, and then sign off, until close of business.

Content entirely related to commerce. Nothing else.

When farmers had their choice of stations to get prices, and could pick and choose the elevators offering the greatest profit on their produce, enterprising operators began using local entertainment talent...singers, story tellers, even childrens' school chorales, to hold the listener to THEIR station, until the next report.

The birth of programming.

When the first commercial break was created, it became a whole new profit center for the operator.

Radio in the US is always, and has been always, about the money.

Been ever thus.

I have a feeling that there is absolutely NO indication that Kramer ever resigned from the Royal Thai Tourist Police Force, nor was ever asked to do so. Certainly nothing on the Internet that says this.

The line to which you refer was said WHILE he was being interviewed AS an active member of the Force.

If you have any proof of that, Scott, please post it. Otherwise, again, we know that you are just lying.

I forgot to add; Robert Johnson was also intensely humiliated in his interaction with Kramer but is:
A) Too drunk most of the time to realize it, and
B) Doesn't post from the Belleview, Washington area.

He does, however, have more than a dozen different active e-mail have been shut down by the ISP for misconduct.

As a director at KKUP (been on the board for ten years), I have to say that one of the most frustrating things about that station is that what you say is NOT true. The programming on that station reflects nothing but the whims and vision of the volunteers doing the shows. The station has no underwriting, all grants come with absolutely no strings attached, and listener subscriptions make up the rest.

The station is Arbitron-encoded (at my strenuous insistence), but no one pays even the slightest attention to what is going on with the numbers. In my opinion, we could shed some of our hand-to-mouth existence if we would just so much as pay lip service to what the listeners seem to want to hear (and jettison our aversion to underwriting).

> Radio in the US is always, and has been always, about the money.

I which someone would tell that to KKUP so we could get some!

You are part of his 'past.' There is good reason you never made it into

It's called 'Google Search.' Try it someday. Perhaps you should try

If you copied them at 9 watts it's worth sending a report because with all of the IBOC hash and interference copying such a station would be a challange, even if fairly close.

Why don't you just dummy up? There are thousands of illegals now in

Let me put in what you clipped to make the point.
You are hard put to find a poster who admits there is a downside to proposals, yet the rational mind always knows there aint no free lunch.

And in this case, without leadership we see anarchy. So, the suffering is not caused by some power elite, but your neighbors. People who lack the self control to govern themselves find someone else to do that for them. Note all the leaders you refer to above are men.

Women tend to offer a lower cost of management cause they dont need to support harems, and dont start wars to increase the size.

If companies were truly interested in reaching people 50+ then KGO wouldn't have to struggle to get ads, given that they have by far the largest audience of people age 50+. KGO doesn't get the national ads, but instead has to go for the lower-paying local companies such as family trust lawyers, laser eye surgeons and bankruptcy attorneys.

Meanwhile, the REST of radio, that which is reaching people <50 have to choose from a boatload of national advertisers: Geico, The "HD" Digital Radio Alliance,Verizon, Home Depot, Macy's, McDonald's, AT&T, Lowe's, and Radio Shack. You may hear Geico and Home Depot on KGO but those are usually network make-goods, not national accounts specifically buying KGO's gray listeners.

Sure, there are occasional problems, such as when Higdon's KUIC wound up as the #1overnight station. But generally the ratings are fairly accurate, accurate enough that companies are willing to spend money on advertising. For the second time let me say that if they weren't satisfied with what the ratings mean the ratings would have gone away a long time ago.

And since YOU are not the person spending money on the station, nobody cares about whether you like the ratings or not.

And as I said in another post, if you TRULY believe in radio serving the listeners and not the advertisers, you should be supporting non-comm radio (the stations between 88 and 92 on your FM dial), because those stations are truly listener-supported, and run the programming they do because that's what the listeners want to hear.

Actually, Matt Elmore from KQED has said differently. He says that the bulk of KQED's money comes from donations. I know, having volunteered and worked at KALW (the other NPR station in SF) that over 80% of KALW's income comes directly from listener contributions.

KKUP could take a page from KQED-FM. KQED, as you'll remember, had a classical music format. They ditched it in favor of the news & information format years ago and rose to become the #1 (highest share) non-comm broadcaster in the nation. And in local ratings they're #3 after all-news KCBS and "lite rock" KOIT.

In this here long term Recession where many of those prime younger Radio Listeners have lost their Jobs and Cash Money Flow : Just about 100% of those "Don't Count" Senors 50+ Still Got Jobs and Retirement Checks with a steady Flow should re-think their Prime Demographics and try and Target those still with Money in this Multi-Year [Great Obama] Recession (2009~2016).

N1JPR - OK - What Brand ? Model ? of MLB ?

=WRT= Shortwave Radio Listener {Receive Only}
-so-called- Magnetic Longwire Baluns [MLBs]

Let's say you have a 'classic' 10-Turn Secondary Winding Coax-Shield-to-Radio-Input that is couple with a 30-Turn Primary Coax-Shield-to-Antenna.
* Using a Common Coax Shield Ground Point for both Windings.

Using #24 AWG Solid Copper Wire
-note- Wire Gauge Resistance per foot #24 = 0.03 Ohms/Ft
* #14 = 0.003 Ohms/Ft
* #20 = 0.012 Ohms/Ft
* #36 = 0.4 Ohms/Ft
* #40 = 1.0 Ohm/Ft

Using a Small 1-Inch OD Ferrite Toroid "Donut" Core with 1/2" ID and 1/2" Thick/Wide.
http://www.goldmine-elec-products.com/prodinfo.asp?number=G6683&variation=

Each Turn is about 2.4 Inches of #24 Copper Wire
* 10 Turns ~ 24 Inches ~ 2 Feet = 0.06 [~1/10th] Ohm
* 30 Turns ~ 72 Inches ~ 6 Feet = 0.18 [~1/5th] Ohm

Wire Gauge Resistance per foot #24 = 0.03 Ohms http://www.epanorama.net/documents/wiring/wire_resistance.html

With Common Ground Un-Uns -aka- Magnetic Longwire Baluns [MLBs] that are 'suspect'
* Simply Replace with a New MLB
* Build a New MLB from scratch
* Tear-down and re-build the old MLB into a New MLB using the same Core -if- not damaged {cracked or discolored}. Use New Wire and if needed New Hardware too.

However before you suspect and replace the MLB :
1 - Check-out your Connections at the MLB
2 - Check-out your Coax Cable
3 - Checkout your Antenna Wire
4 - Checkout your Ground Wire and Ground Rod
More often then not it is the 'Connections' and a Damaged/Broken Coax Cable where the problem is and nothing internal to the MLB.

hope this helps - iane ~ RHF

Say Hey Stevie:

Just showed you how one can have it both ways. Proved you wrong time and time and time again. Back to playing with your Brownie camera Stevie and thinking how your failed to begin with business never took off. Perhaps one of your many faults you don't know anything about running a business. One of the first rules is location, location, location. I have pointed out your failures many times in the past and all you do is call me names. But that is okay. I can put up with that.

Say Hey Stevie:

Me dawgs are all fine here. Plenty of chow and peaceful area to sleep. Perhaps you'll come across a few when you reach Rainbow Bridge. I hear now your health isn't quite up to snuff these days. Told you about getting out there and exercising Stevie. In fact invited you several times when you were holed up at that rat infested Condo you called home.

What a wonderful way to spend a Sunday afternoon. Raking Stevie over the coals. I'll have a few extra heave a heads for you this evening Stevie. Such a pity you can't even afford a few simple beers from time to time. How are the knifie projects coming along? Any new hobbies, like finding a job while you continue to leach off of your wife's rental property?

Well sea traveler the sun is well over the yardarm and time for the maid to mix me up another pitcher of crocktails. Come morn and we start off with cold bloody marys made with Smirnoff vodka with crunchy celery stalks. Just another rotten rainy day in paradise.

At this rate, you'll probably end up between 25 to 30 AM BCB stations received carrying C2C. Like I stated before, I copied 9 stations, but I was driving around and using the car radio at around 11PM Pacific time.

Odd that the 20 plus in the UK at least cannot afford to buy their own places, too expensive, so they live with Mum and Dad at sod all rent so disposable income .. and the 50 something's house paid for, perhaps

The electoral college still goes by the will of the people at large (though there is nothing forcing them to legally). More or less, at least.

Hi David,

Just to let you know at one stage they were convinced I was Steve Kramer as well - I don't even post to this group usually but they found out (through Google Alerts) I had mentioned Steve in a post of mine to one of the cooking discussion groups.

I would suggest you plonk them all in your killfile list. They are idiots - nothing more, nothing less.

Say Hey Stevie:

I can understand why you do not consider Thailand paradise. You did have a very bad experience here with your failed photography business in Chiang Mai. Why would a farang want to compete against the professional snappers here at 1/3 the price? Besides Chiang Mai, as you say, is a very small town. Looks to me it is the 2nd largest city in Thailand. But we live outside of city limits and enjoying our life of leisure. Not much to do but play with our solar projects, watch my stock profits climb on thaistocks.com, enjoy the company of me dawgs and have a few heave-a-heads from time to time. Remember Stevie if you can't afford to drink, DON"T.

Say Hey Feces:

No problem acquiring it. As there is plenty in the supermarkets.
Remember Stevie leave the alcohol consumption to the big boys. In your condition I suggest consuming green tea on a daily basis. Need a good source in J-pan then let me know.

Yes, it does seem a bit strange, but then when I'm in a club and keep seeing teens and 20s using fancy expensive looking mobile phones. Then I compare that to my phone, one of the cheapest available at the time, as I'm just not interested in fancy phones. (OK I'm some way off being 50, but then the part about house paid for and disposable income does apply to me). So there does seem to be some truth in this.

Also the not being swayed by advertising does apply to me to a certain extent. Recently ordered a new camera, and took no notice of any advertising. Just went straight to Amazon and typed in Nikon, as I believe then to be the best make, plus my previous camera was a Nikon and was a gooden.

I also have quite a nice IPod, but in that case advertising was pretty much irrelevant. At the time I looked around to see what was available, and could only find one model with enough storage for my music collection (an IPod Classic). Think I'll be avoiding Apple in future though, the ample storage is the only thing I like about it. Apart from that, I think they have compromised ease of use, in favour of styling. And as for trying to force you to install ITunes, just so that you can load YOUR music onto YOUR IPod, Grrrr... that seems a bit out of order. I was very pleased when I worked out that I could remove ITunes and use Media Monkey instead. (with my previous mp3 player, I could simply plug it into a USB and copy music to it, so much easier that way).

Apparently this is why the Saga stations did so badly. Targeting the 50+s doesn't attract much advertising.

Bob, how is it you are still able to type? Just past 8.30 in the evening in Chiang Mai and by this time you would usually be sprawled out flat on your back drunk with a mangy soi dog licking bits of your supper off your chin.

You were in a similar state in the picture below from what I have been told - I'm sure you remember it fondly. The whole of the Chiang Mai expat community laughed about it for weeks grin

Is THAT the best you've got?!

I have no idea where Steve Kramer is, and frankly, I don't care. YOU and your friends seem to care quite a lot though. Just WHY is that?

From what I have read throughout the usenet archives, it is very likely Kramer may not be in Thailand any longer, so in that respect, you may be correct. Whether he was deported from Thailand, however, would seem quite unlikely though, given the general consensus one is able to ascertain by reading various posts suggesting he is actually in Singapore as the result of a business opportunity he CHOSE to move there for quite some time ago.

But, if you would rather waste your time, chasing your tail around convincing yourself otherwise, then that's your lifestyle choice. I'm sure Kramer has better things to be doing; whenever he is not busy with his work that is.

What about you? grin

I never thought about it that way before, but it does make a lot of sense.

Although perhaps smaller commercial stations, do tend to pay more attention to the listeners than larger broadcasters. Or at least that's the impression I get here comparing the big commercial stations in London to the small one that I normally listen to (Radio Jackie).

This may be because the smaller stations have a harder time building up listener numbers, to then sell to the advertisers. Or then again, it might be partly to do with the fact that the small stations I usually listen to was once a pirate station. This was back in the days when I used to listen to a lot of pirate stations, and they mostly didn't carry advertising. They tended to be set up by people wanting to provide radio that wasn't available elsewhere. Basically a lot more listener centric than the commercial stations. I think perhaps some of these basic aims have been carried over, now that they have managed to become a legal station.

Subtitle to this post: "The Pollyannites."

We're used to spin from all White Houses so it is not surprising that Obama would try to put lipstick on a pig and gussy up the spectacularly bad jobs numbers from yesterday.

But the way they've gone about doing it insults the intelligence of the American people, as this IDB editorial points out:

"Two years into the Obama era, when the U.S. should be enjoying a booming recovery from the 2007-08 meltdown, with millions of new jobs and higher incomes for all, all we see is economic wreckage from the unbelievably foolish policies pursued by the White House and the Democrat-controlled Congress.
Whether it's the $862 billion "stimulus" that turned into a welfare program for bankrupt states and public unions, or the $700 billion TARP program that became a giant dish of pork for Democrats and their supporters, or the job-killing duo of health care and financial reform, Obama, Pelosi, Reid et al. seem oblivious to the deep and lasting damage they're doing to America's economy.

"Solis also repeated - with the stock market selling off 100 points as she spoke - the bogus claim made by the White House and uncritically parroted by its media pals that timely action "saved or created more than 2.5 million American jobs."

"As we've said, this is utter nonsense. Completely made up. And, by the way, the official who made it up - Council of Economic Advisers chairwoman Christina Romer - quit on Friday to return to academia, her reputation for accuracy in tatters.

[She is married to David Romer, her colleague in the Economics Department at University of California, Berkeley. They have adjoining offices in the department. How sweet "progressive" Berkeley academic life at the expense of your tax dollars.]

"Here's the real record: America has lost 4.1 million jobs since Obama took office and 7.7 million since the recession began in December 2007. So most of the jobs lost have been under this administration. Whatever else you might call Obamanomics, "successful" isn't it.

The economy is not even creating jobs at a rate that would soak up those who are entering the job market for the first time every month. Economists believe we need to create between 120,000 and 150,000 jobs for that to happen. Coupled with the loss of 8 million jobs since 2007 and you can see why liberal economists are throwing up their hands and admitting defeat, telling us it will be a decade before we see that number of jobs restored to the economy.

Surely, many of those 8 million jobs lost are gone for good. But government stimulus isn't going to create the new businesses and perhaps even new industries that will presage the next great economic revolution. At this point, we can either play catch up or lead that revolution.

Obama and his advisors, despite their rosy scenarios, haven't a clue how to do that.

It costs the American taxpayer $1.2 million per year to support EACH soldier in Afghanistan and Iraq.

With numbers like that, it's easy to see why Bush's phony wars have hit

There is also a similar story in Michigan.

WUOM-FM which was renowned for its classical music format did exactly the same and switched to a news and talk format on July 1st, 1996 with complete phase out of classical music by July 2000, and the listening audience grew from 15 million

But with all of the talk radio stations available on AM, should not public radio be offering something different?

Say Hey Feces:

Stevie doesn't have a job. He has no income. Unable to collect s/s benefits because the fool never even acquired the minimum 10 years. Hank Williams certainly had Steve (Kombat) Kramer in mind when he sang the song, Born To Lose. Stevie is a born loser. Tried several business ventures in Thailand and all failed. Was arrested and finally deported from the Kingdom of Thailand.

This tendency though is much, much, much, more pronounced in Italy and Spain even for those in employment.

True, in theory.

However, I'm not sure if this exactly works with the BBC, who often seem more interested in their own agenda, rather than in doing what is best for the listeners.

Don't know about community stations. They should in theory be a lot more listener centric than the normal commercial stations. I don't really know if this works in practice as I don't have much experience of community stations.

As for the big commercial stations, the regulator ought to keep them in line, but that doesn't seem to work here either. Ofcom seems to have allowed allowed most of the commercial stations these days seem to have become clones of Heart, and late at night, they all seem to be just one big quasi national juke box broadcast. (or should that be Joke box, lol)

NONE of which indicates that Castro is "Progressive."

"Progressive" is an honorable term that's applicable within the USA to denote FAIR-minded and sensible people who are social liberals/egalitarians.

Castro is a Communist -- which has NOTHING to do with being an egalitarian. And YOU are as dishonest as that asinine alias you've chosen for yourself.

In short -- you are a jerk.

Well do I remember the Great Controversy at KFJC in which net-streaming was denounced vociferously because programmers would "start pandering to the net audience."

In the noncomm world, it seems that either listeners are the crop or are just-kinda-out-there-somewhere.

It will all depend from where they receive their funding. If it is a listened supported station then they will have to be receptive to their listeners or they will not get any money to continue. If it is a block grant from a government agency, then they can probably ignore listeners completely so long as they can justify they next

You could try listening to some for about 5 minutes -- you may feel yourself unable to listen for any longer than that for some of them in England.

If their is a regulator and if the regulator has policies and power

OfCon is a light touch regulator whose purpose is to maximize revenues from the exploitation of the electro-magnetic spectrum, not a body to promote the interests of the listener and quality programming.

And if Jeremy Hunt keeps his promise, OfCon will become just a technical regulator and all policy decisions will be made as an afterthought by free market enforcers at the DCMS.

The controversy at KKUP is exactly the obvious. The troops have been vociferous in their demands to resume streaming at KKUP. The management has been reticent because of cost and work involved.

Actually I wasn't talking about Mr Eduardo, but I can understand the

I'm happy with most of what the BBC do, but with radio being the big exception, over processed, and reluctance to provide good digital sound quality.

I've only listened to one, and that was only because a friend has a show on that station. I did send a message to the station once, on Facebook, saying I found their 96k mp3 internet stream too low quality, and suggested that if they can't afford a higher bit rate they might consider an aac+ stream. I never got any response to my message, however some how their 96k mp3 sounds better than it used to. Not sure if they did something about it, or whether I simply got used to it. It does now sound better than I'd expect, although not hi-fi quality.

Usual thing in those cases is take the loudest kvetcher and put him in charge of it. Then ride his ass to get it done. It either gets done or the person shuts up pretty quickly.

The thing about (especially non-comm play-music) radio is it's relatively easy to single-hand. Thus it attracts a bunch of "auteurs" who are in it exclusively for their own airtime and don't give much of a hoot for the station as a whole. Just asking one of them to turn the monitors down because I was recording somebody and he walls were paper-thin resulted in a great huffiness.

It should be noted that there are many people who have had "a successful

Definition of a the "Progressive" Movement: a contempt and loathing of "individualism" -- and its political expression in the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution.

The movement's premise: the substitution of collectivism for individualism, statism for laissez faire.

The Progressive Party was in fact a creation of the Communist Party and its ranks were filled with Communists and fellow travelers -- the Old Left.

Recycle: Progressive - The "New" Left http://abcdunlimited.com/ideas/progressivism.html

"The term has today re-emerged to once again denote any person, organization, or idea left of moderate. It was the centrist liberalism of the Clinton Administration -- e.g., the (proposed) neo-Progressive cartelization of medicine, the intervention in the Balkans, the North American Free Trade Agreement -- that brought forth self-designated "progressives" who opposed anything less than full socialization of all medicine, the deployment of U.S. troops anywhere, and the rise of the global economy. The only real change in the term is how commodious it has become. It encompasses everyone from an ever-leftward social democrat to a Communist-without-a-Party to such relatively recent arrivals as the colorless "radical feminist" (i.e., white bourgeois female) fighting the Patriarchal Occupational Government, the Queer activist fighting "heteronormality," the multiculturalist fighting Western civilization, and the Deep Ecologist fighting all civilization. It even includes ideologically exhausted leftists-without-an-ism such as philosopher Richard Rorty, who allows that the "best we can hope for is more of the same experimental, hit-or-miss, two-steps-forward-and-one-step-back reforms that have been taking place in the industrial democracies since the French Revolution." What's left is a "progressive" Left that can progress in any number of directions -- or with none at all."

A Progressive is a Socialist is a Communist is a Fascist is the "New" Democrat.

There is no use asking if the air is any good if that's all there is to breathe. The fact is that from inside the industry, the grumbling over the sample size (and hence the granularity and accuracy) of the ratings sucks. I hear this from within CC, CBS, the independents, and even KUIC had a gigantic laugh over their own fleeting "good fortune" (which is one reason KUIC and many other stations use the ratings as an internal guide and not as a sales tool).

Arbitron remains in business because there is no competition, and the major broadcasters are too lazy to do anything else.

Well, I have to say that when we moved, we solved that problem creatively: we built sound-proof studios. Highly resistant, anyway.

That doesn't make sense, because HD Radio is more likely to drop out indoors than outdoors because the signal strength is a lot lower indoors than it is outdoors due to building penetration loss, and OFDM copes with mobile reception relatively well.

Looks like the digital radio industry in the US is as clueless about digital radio technologies as the grossly incompetent UK DAB industry.

I believe you have it half right. People over 50 spend plenty of money, but their purchasing habits are well established. You can't make them change brands. So the theory is you indoctrinate the younguns and they will buy your crap for life. Apple is a prime example. The young liked the ipod, so they think Apple makes good phones too.

After looking at all these web sites, I think the 909X pictures are just drawings of what they expected the radio to look like. And the
listed improvements over a 909. I doubt that there are two designs going into production, but I could be wrong.

The last active duty was handed over in Iraq today. Less solders are dieing each day when compared to when the death monger GOP party was in power. During the Bu$h presidencies, about 1 million Iraqis were killed so Bu$h and his friends could get their oil. But according to a previous post, you called this cut-n-run? Which way is it rightard?

NONE of which indicates that Castro is "Progressive."

"Progressive" is an honorable term that's applicable within the USA to denote FAIR-minded and sensible people who are social liberals/egalitarians.

Castro is a Communist -- which has NOTHING to do with being an egalitarian. And YOU are as dishonest as that asinine alias you've chosen for yourself.

In short -- you are a jerk.

NONE of which indicates that Castro is "Progressive."

"Progressive" is an honorable term that's applicable within the USA to denote FAIR-minded and sensible people who are social liberals/egalitarians.

Castro is a Communist -- which has NOTHING to do with being an egalitarian. And YOU are as dishonest as that asinine alias you've chosen for yourself.

VNO,

You have to first start right around 10 PM when
Coast-to-Coast AM [C2C-AM] is on more Radio
Stations as an original broadcast. After 2AM
Coast-to-Coast AM is usually a repeat re-broadcast of the early show that night and is on far fewer AM Radio Stations.
http://www.coasttocoastam.com/

I have always thought that the AM Radio Stations should try to work-out an arrangement with Coast-to-Coast AM to Air Tonight's C2C-AM Show from 10PM to 2AM; and the Prior Nights; an"Encore
Presentation" C2C-AM Show from 2AM to 6AM.
This would give the Radio Stations greater program diversity and allow Radio Listeners not to repeat the same 'content' in the same night.
http://www.coasttocoastam.com/

Hello George Noory at Coast-to-Coast AM are you Listening ? Talking about the Prior Nights
"Encore Presentation" C2C-AM Show from 2AM to 6AM -versus- a Repeat of the current night's show. --- http://www.coasttocoastam.com/

MODERN progressives are social liberals. EGALITARIANS who are staunch DEFENDERS of civil/human rights, and personal liberties.

You know -- all those GOOD and WORTHWHILE aspects of America that moronic BIGOTS like you are hateful enough to OPPOSE.

Thus -- you are a LOSER.

NO bigoted agenda ever gets out of society alive.

HISTORICAL PRECEDENTS for Rendering Bigoted Agendas EXTINCT

Society ALWAYS outgrows intolerant and hateful movements that are mired in stupidity, and are supported by NO relevant facts. ALWAYS. No exceptions! And our own history, here in the USA, makes that very clear. Since 1865 ---

-- Slavery -- EXTINCT
-- Opposition to Women's Suffrage -- EXTINCT
-- Prohibition -- EXTINCT
-- Opposition to Birth-Control Pill -- EXTINCT
-- Segregation -- EXTINCT
-- Anti-Semitism -- ENDANGERED (Thankfully)
-- Anti-Choice (abortion) -- LAUGHINGSTOCK STATUS
-- Opposition to EQUAL Rights for Gays -- FADING FAST

Segregationists were a JOKE (i.e., "laughingstock status") during the last few years before it became extinct. As opposition to EQUAL rights for gays (with respect to housing, being parents, marriage, and employment) continues to fade, the remaining opponents first will become laughingstocks, and then that hatefulness will end in extinction. constant consciousness-raising, as is being assisted by the media in its sitcoms, talk shows, etc., is very helpful.

The ludicrous and hateful actions and defense of sociopathic agendas against individual liberties on the part of the adherents/ lemmings of the RRR Cult will soon lead to American society's becoming EMBARRASSED to have those louts in their midst, making our country a laughingstock in front of the entire world. Even now, the process of their becoming FED UP with that is building toward the critical mass that will trigger the rejection of the RRR's shameful and worthless agendas. Before much longer, society will reject those movements with all the force that it brought to bear against segregation.

Historical precedents have CONSISTENTLY proven that Americans outgrow* movements of intolerance (such as ALL of the above), and then REJECT them -- leaving them behind FOREVER.

And that is EXTINCTION.

Very WELCOME extinction. As in, "Good riddance forever!"

Poor feeble spammie no-life: can't argue a point convincingly,

Do you ever have anything of interest, or substance, to say?

You are a little dick bitch who feels like it is his civic duty as

There are three vesions shown in different spots around the web. There is the X version to be sold at Grove and Universal. (Also at the Sangean web site). And there is a model with an added Squelch and AM RF Gain control and a model or drawing with the squelch, gain and 4 extra slide switches. Maybe these variations are the XR - and maybe the XR will never be built - who knows. It would cost more - thats for sure.

Sadly, yes, we can say that...
...but we are saying it because W had NO exit strategy during his terms, there is STILL no exit strategy for Obama and if McCain were in office, there would STILL be NO EXIT STRATEGY for McCain either. (and I'm sure a responsible, fair and honest fellow like you would be calling it "McCain's War").

FYI, "no exit strategy" means that if we stay, we kill "more and more American Boys and Girls along with countless Civilians" as you so eloquently put it.

If we leave, the power vacuum will re-ignite the centuries old tribal war between the Kurds, Shiites and Sunnis, probably with Iran jumping into the fray too. If we are lucky, this will only lead to $10 a gallon gas; if we are unlucky...Armageddon. We are walking a very, very fine line...and I hope this helps you realize why Obama (or McCain or whoever) is trapped.

Sadly, stay or go, W painted us into a corner -- and don't try and deny it. Bush Senior himself said so in his book when he stated that he didn't go into Baghdad during the first Gulf War because (are you ready?), he said there was NO EXIT STRATEGY. Too bad W didn't have the brains of his old man. :-(

Heck of a job, Georgie!

Around these parts anyway, the recession is not hitting the younger folks as much as you might imagine. The bars and restaurants in SF are filled many/most nights with people under age 50 who obviously have money to spend at Rasoj, Luna Park, Delfina's, Foreign Cinema, Aqua, Bix, Chez Papa, etc. The Valencia corridor is so packed that some lots are charging a minimum of $20 at night just for parking.

But there's also the matter of becoming immune to advertising. A large number of older people know enough not to be taken in by advertising, or they simply don't care to change brands. Most people over 50 have no desire to wear the coolest clothes or phone or eyeglass frames, so advertizing to them is fruitless.

My great mentor in this was Bill Adler of KWUN, a daytime-only station with a signal so bad and a profile so low that people who lived across the street from the station didn't even know it existed.

Yet, without ratings he was able to sell the guts out of the station, including the nightly signoff. "Though KWUN's day is ending, the night is just beginning at John Jawad's Pioneer Inn in Clayton..."

I agree with you 100% that corporate radio does not teach people to think outside the box. On the other hand, unless they're in a situation like KGO, they don't need to. They can just skim the cream off the top and leave the creative marketing and selling to the stations that need to invest in doing it that way.

It takes a certain kind of personallity to sell a station with no ratings, and those sellers can be hard to come by because they sell based on relationships, and often they are quite happy to stay where they are, working their relationships.

In the U.S., the non-comms are not perfect by any means. There are still fiefdoms and the People In Power (and in the case of the Pacifica stations, the endless breast-beating and ill-informed decisions), but given all that I'd say that non-comms would be more likely to pay more attention to the audience because that's directly where their money is coming from.

The ultimate in catering to the listener would have to be XM & Sirius, which are wholly listener-supported (on their non-commercial channels anyway).

There are, of course, broad ranges of non-comm stations in the U.S. Many cater to very specific slices of audience.

Here in the Bay Area, KPFA caters to political activists (or people who think they are political activists). KCSM-FM caters to jazz listeners. KPOO is into mostly blues and affairs affecting black people.

KUSF is a training ground for new student DJs and musically caters to them, plus there are blocks of programming catering to Catholicism (KUSF is owned by USF, a Catholic university).

KQED-FM appeals to news/info hounds, carrying nearly all the NPR and PRI news and talk programming available. KALW, an equal member of NPR carries a lot of the rest, along with BBC, CBC, and other news/info programming.

KCEA caters to people who prefer to listen to big bands music of the 1930s and 40s. KVHS, also owned by a high school, reaches out toward teens.

KFJC, KSJS, KSMC, and KZSU do the same thing for college-age audiences.

I'd normally agree, except that I've heard the state of commercial talkradio in America and it's sad. It's made up of uninformed callers pontificating just to hear themselves speak.

And the topics seem to be mostly politics, and worse, the party-bashing subset of that. And when you get outside the major cities, if you hear any local talkradio at all it's likely to be some local psychic or a "swap shop" show.

Agree or disagree, but the talk offered by the major non-comm networks, NPR, PRI, APM, PRX, MPR, and Pacifica is for the most part top quality.

Neither does KALW. I've mentioned here in the past that just the interest on the mortgage for KQED's Mariposa Street studios -- just the annual interest -- is enough to pay the entire staff salaries of KALW management, engineer, and board ops.

KALW wisely tapped into high school and college intern programs and various associations with commercial news organizations to build its news staff. Aside from that, the local pubaffairs programming was/is all volunteers.

KALW makes time for them on Sunday nights with "Hearts of Space". They may be the only station still carrying that program.

Arbitron used diaries. Nielsen does surveys. Pulse and Hooper I believe relied mainly on telephone calls. Well, Pulse and Hooper are out of business, probably because advertisers found them lacking.

But Arbitron and Nielsen are still around. And responding to demand, Arb introduced the PPM to replace diaries. What's amazing is how little this dramatic change in sampling methodology has changed the standings of stations.

About the only major complaint is that "minority stations" that used to get credit when people listed them in diaries are apparently hurting. It seems that people didn't really listen to those stations nearly as much as they listen to the more mainstream stations.

I'm not so sure about that. Stations have music focus groups which they either conduct themselves or via an outside agency. Surely they could contract with some agency to do polling for them if they felt they'd get anything substantially better than what they get right now.

The one thing that KQED-FM does great is to carry the Audio of the PBS-TV 'News Hour" on the FM Radio at 3PM M~F Listen at Work, or in the Car, and even at Home with No TV needed.

IMHO the fastest way to get FM HD-Radio accepted is to find a Local TV Station that will do an Audio Simulcast of their Programming on the HD2 Channel and market the Audio Simulcast on TV.
-why- Since TV went Digital the old Analog AM/FM/TV
Radios no longer provide TV Audio. FM HD-Radio HD2 Channels can provide TV Audio to an already existing at Work and can Listen {but can't watch} and in the Car and can Listen {but can't watch} TV {radio} Listeners.

True, if what you are advertising is the latest fad.

I suggest it is false if you the advertising is describing the advantages and availability of somewhat useful items. Home improvement, such as re-piping, re-roofing, energy efficient windows, and possibly solar power systems, will almost certainly sell better to a 50+ listener than to a 20-30 year old listener (who probably doesn't own his own home).

The real problem is selling the advertising, as ad agencies think all selling is bling to 20 year olds...

You were NOT across the street having a few cool ones. This is a lie.
The above photo is proof of that lie.

In this photo, that is YOU stumbling into the police station while the owner/publisher of northern Thailand's largest English language magazine, and the owner/manager of Chiang Mai's finest Middle Eastern restaurant (which sold the same products that you tried to sell, and took away all your customers) look on. They were there to give evidence about your abuse via telephone and e-mail. That bundle of paper in the publisher's hand is copies of your e-mails for one week.

Robert, you can't keep lying like this. It only makes your pitiful reputation even worse.

Bingo. In and Out is better than Micky-D or Burger King, but they don't have any toys. Eventually as the kids get older they can be weaned from Micky-D.

I get to use that joke again: In and Out is unclear on the concept of separation of church and shake.

VNO,

You have to first start right around 10 PM when
Coast-to-Coast AM [C2C-AM] is on more Radio
Stations as an original broadcast. After 2AM
Coast-to-Coast AM is usually a repeat re-broadcast of the early show that night and is on far fewer AM Radio Stations.
http://www.coasttocoastam.com/

I have always thought that the AM Radio Stations
should try to work-out an arrangement with Coast-
to-Coast AM to Air Tonight's C2C-AM Show from 10PM to 2AM; and the Prior Nights; an"Encore
Presentation" C2C-AM Show from 2AM to 6AM.
This would give the Radio Stations greater program diversity and allow Radio Listeners not to repeat
the same 'content' in the same night.
http://www.coasttocoastam.com/

Hello George Noory at Coast-to-Coast AM are you Listening ? Talking about the Prior Nights
"Encore Presentation" C2C-AM Show from 2AM
to 6AM -versus- a Repeat of the current night's show. --- http://www.coasttocoastam.com/

RHF,

I usually miss the first hour or so because I'm at work, that's why I'm usually able to catch it at 11PM. I use to listen quite often but now I'm lucky to catch it a few times a month. I get a kick out of some stations replaying daytime talk show hosts at 2AM or 3AM for 2 ro 3 hours. I guess if the graveyard shift misses the original broadcast during the day because they are sleeping then they are able to catch it then.

VNO,

An Hour a Day is a good start and 3-Hours a Day
is all that most Radio Talk Show Hosts ask ;-}

Actually -if- the Day-Time Talk Show Hosts wanted to reach more People they could designate One (1)
'best-of-the-best' Show Hours each Day of their Late-Night "Encore Presentaion" Show to Nightime
Re-Broadcast by their Affiliate Radio Stations.
* Give the One-Hour "Encore" Rebroadcast to the Radio Stations for F-R-E-E as a Bonus for Running
the Host's Day-Time Programming.

The Radio Stations work block-out One Hour each for their Daytime & Afternoon/Evening Hosts*
12 AM -one-hour-of- Rush Limbaugh
1 AM -one-hour-of- Sean Hannity
2 AM -one-hour-of- Glen Beck
3 AM -one-hour-of- Laura Ingraham
4 AM -one-hour-of- Michael Savage
5 AM -one-hour-of- John Batchelor
* who ever their day-time line-up is . . .

Late Night Radio would be Exciting with Something
New : Each and Every Hour from Midnight 'til Dawn.

Followed at 6AM with America's Morning News
http://www.washingtontimes.com/americas-morning-news/
http://www.talkradionetwork.com/pg/jsp/general/host.jsp?chartID=3&position=1
-or-
Good Day with Doug Stephan
http://www.dougstephan.com/

1ST - This would drive some/many of the Radio
Station's Late-Night Listeners to the Station's
Day-Time Programming. {That's Good}
= More Listening Hours & Listeners for the Radio Station {Better Ratings & Increased Revenue}

2ND - This would drive some/many of the Radio Station's Late-Night Listeners to the Talk Show Host's Website and "Listen" Feature. {That's Good} = More Radio Listener & Website Subscribers and Listeners of the Show {Better Ratings & Increased Revenue}

3RD - The Talk Radio Networks Should Love It Too !

It's a "Win-Win" for both the Radio Stations and the Talk Show Hosts and the Networks. ~ RHF

The cheeky prick has even posted the link to the picture on his own

My guess is they are going to be pretty impressed with him especially when they see some of the images posted around town.

VNO,

An Hour a Day is a good start and 3-Hours a Day
is all that most Radio Talk Show Hosts ask ;-}

Actually -if- the Day-Time Talk Show Hosts wanted
to reach more People they could designate One (1)
'best-of-the-best' Show Hours each Day of their Late-Night "Encore Presentaion" Show to Nightime
Re-Broadcast by their Affiliate Radio Stations.
* Give the One-Hour "Encore" Rebroadcast to the Radio Stations for F-R-E-E as a Bonus for Running
the Host's Day-Time Programming.

The Radio Stations work block-out One Hour each for their Daytime & Afternoon/Evening Hosts*
12 AM -one-hour-of- Rush Limbaugh
1 AM -one-hour-of- Sean Hannity
2 AM -one-hour-of- Glen Beck
3 AM -one-hour-of- Laura Ingraham
4 AM -one-hour-of- Michael Savage
5 AM -one-hour-of- John Batchelor
* who ever their day-time line-up is . . .

Late Night Radio would be Exciting with Something
New : Each and Every Hour from Midnight 'til Dawn.

Followed at 6AM with America's Morning News
http://www.washingtontimes.com/americas-morning-news/
http://www.talkradionetwork.com/pg/jsp/general/host.jsp?chartID=3&position=1
-or-
Good Day with Doug Stephan
http://www.dougstephan.com/

1ST - This would drive some/many of the Radio
Station's Late-Night Listeners to the Station's
Day-Time Programming. {That's Good}
= More Listening Hours & Listeners for the Radio Station {Better Ratings & Increased Revenue}

2ND - This would drive some/many of the Radio Station's Late-Night Listeners to the Talk Show Host's Website and "Listen" Feature. {That's Good} = More Radio Listener & Website Subscribers and Listeners of the Show {Better Ratings & Increased Revenue}

3RD - The Talk Radio Networks Should Love It Too !

It's a "Win-Win" for both the Radio Stations and the Talk Show Hosts and the Networks. ~ RHF

Apparently the stations aren't seeing this and just letting anything go approach. I guess they figure there aren't many listeners interested in the programs at night and use it to fill the time between midnight and sunrise. It's quite possible their demographics and Arbitron ratings books show something the general public isn't seeing. However, I must say, I like your ideas for late night programming. You would almost have to make it like a cable TV selection in which you will be hit with multiple talents to choose from and not get bored with just one of the for 3 or 4 hours.

Central Standard Time zone here.CTC comes WFMN 97.3 FM (Frequency Modulated) on the air at Midnight, right after the 12:00 AM top of the hour news spot.
I reckon so anyway, I haven't tuned in to CTC in years, doggy and I hit the sack every night around tenish PM. (Pee Emm, Emma come first)

So, what were those Kooks on CTC squawking bout last night? I have some recorders here, tape and digital recorders, I could record CTC and play it back later on.But why? because CTC is over 90 percent pure undiluted Bull Sh!t, I don't give a damn about that crap.I will never record that crap.

WFMN 97.3 FM right now on my radio, I am listening to Real News, the Paul Gallo radio talk show, Super Talk Mississippi.

BWAHAHAH oh dear, I didn't know you also doubled as a comedian. You've gotta be joking, at this time of the day Bob Johnson would barely be able to wipe the dribble away from his mouth with his stubby little fingers - how do you expect him to locate the numbers on a telephone keypad?! Actually the ONLY number Bob could find in his state at the present hour would be the number for the local Thai whiskey merchant; and that's only because he has the number on speed dial.

That is no different from most countries though. Ever had the sad experience of listening to TalkSport in the UKofGB&NI?

And quite a number of the commercial talkradio presenters in the USofA and other countries merely pontificate whilst still being uninformed about the matter on which they are talking.

It is certainly of better quality because the presenters research the topic which they are presenting, and often it is of a technical nature eg Science Fridays.

Incidentally, the talk show "The Tavis Smiley Show" did not last very long on NPR ...

Remember thought that the Bay Area is very well served by non-commercial stations and that the availability is rather different in other, smaller markets. Often the only non-commercial is an NPR station and maybe one from a neighboring market, plus perhaps a religious station.

Phone ins are not the same as talk radio. Its a subset of it. And if you let anyone phone in then you'll get the uninformed and ignorant now and then.
OTOH you also get very smart people. Essentially phone ins are just a forum for people to vent and I think thats a very good thing to have.

Most of them are hired for their opinions and ability to talk for 2 hours without drying up. Not on their particular expertease on a certain subjects.

In the San Francisco Bay Area Market, a local station 860 A.M. carried Laura Ingraham for a while, then changed the format to :

Sports Talk

You know, as if there wasn't enough sports to go around - the SPORTS MAFIAS have once again decided to grab another radio outlet - especially one that used to cater to the conservative segment of the population. Remember when the local news broadcasts all pushed sports "news" in a major way in the middle and beginning of news broadcasts ?
Well, most have relegated, have shelved the sports back to the rear, the end of the news program.
Good idea. Who ever said that playing with a ball, silly games -------- was NEWS ?

Stanford's radio station KZSU, their news department demands that every news program HAS TO have a sports story.

Back to Laura Ingraham. There are no current markets in the Bay Area for her presently......as far as I know.
I wholly enjoy her program - she is so smart and funny.
KSFO 560 A.M. should completely DITCH :

> 5 AM -one-hour-of- John Batchelor

I am sorry, but John Batchelor sounds to me like a queen with some annoying dramatic music to play, where the music is overbearing most of the times
.....too much music !
Bachelor ONLY deals with a few items per show.
Laura Ingraham covers it all. I miss her dearly. I will seek her out on the internet - I guess ?

On KSFO, they ~ditched~ the Sunday Night programming that took-over the slot for Matt Drudge ---> Bill Cunningham.

Cunningham is a patriot and deals in controversial subjects.
Mighty interesting that KSFO would get rid of Cunningham and replace him with "music man" Joan Gay Not Married.

SO ------> I always listen to Fresno California - 580 A.M.
NOT 560 A.M. on Sunday nights.

KSFO IS COMPLETELY IMPOTENT, with the likes of John Batchelor and Dr. Laura.
A "doctor" who abused and neglected her mother horribly.
"Dr." Laura is an evil woman....what she did and does to her mother and her mother's image on the radio.
Evil !

Anything would be better than a REPLAY of George Noory and the call-in program that caters to complete ---> Loonies.
Too bizarre, and giving air-time to pagan babylonian occultic psychic nonsense. I don't listen - generally.

Um Scotty, you seem to be overlooking something...

The Democrats, having inherited the war, have only been there a year and a half and you blame them for losing the war?

The Republicans were there for EIGHT years and did not win the war. You don't blame them? You want the Dems to do in a year and a half what the Repubs could not do in EIGHT years??? How careless of you to overlook that.

Furthermore, the tanks and helicopters you whine about above seemed "to be useless" against those VC guys on bicycles wearing black pyjamas. Odd, but I don't remember those great Republicans Nixon and Ford winning the Viet Nam war. How forgetful of you.

Other than proving yourself to be a real dipshit (IMHO) and bigot with a short memory, what's your point?

If that were the case then talkradio would be huge. It isn't. At his peak, Rush Limbaugh had what, 20 million listeners? 30? According to Premier, Limbaugh's syndicator, he gets 3.59 million listeners (2008). That's less than 2% of the U.S. population. That's not much, and he's the biggest radio talkshow host.

I was born here by what you call an illegal, so I'm a citizen anchor

There was indeed a stodginess not just in the BBC but the whole establishment.

It was not the BBC who decided the services, but it had to be made for them when the Wilson government gave the authorisation through the Postmaster General that the BBC could start Radio 1 to compete against the pirates and Radio Luxembourg, and subsequently local radio.

There is nothing inconsitent there.

Today, compared to 2005, besides 5 years having passed, levels of radio listening have changed due to the new and growing competitors for entertainment, ranging from Pandora and the web to smart phones.
Still, the metrics of radio have not changed and the distribution of listening locations is similar.

There are two principal metrics in radio ratings... cume and average listening levels.

Cume is the total number of persons who listen for 15 minutes or more a week to a station or combination of them, or to radio as a whole.
Radio as a whole reaches about 94% to 95% of people 6 years or older each week. To put listening level (on which ad sales are mostly based) in perspective, Arbitron analysis shows that over 90% of the average station's listening time is contributed by 50% of its listeners (cume). So half the people who listen to a station listen around 15 to 30 minutes a week, and are of no value to advertisers or the station.

Average listening, expressed as persons, share or rating (and all meaning the same thing) is the number of people tuned in at any given time. Average listening from 6 AM to midnight, Monday to Sunday, is around 13% of all persons.

So, while 95% listen at some times during the week, about 12% to 13% are, on average, listening at any precise moment.

About 30% of average listening is in the car. The rest is at home or at work. While around 85% were found to listen at some time in the car, listening spans in the car are shorter, so the total amount of hours a week listened in the car is, as stated, around 30%... from a low of around 24% in New York CIty to around 33% in LA.

As stated in my 2005 post, 70% of listening time is NOT in the car, even if over 80% of people listen at some point each week in the car.

One is a head count, the other is the amount of time spent by each person. A further explanation and 100% verification of this is on the Arbitron website, in what is called the Purple Book or, technically, the Description of Methodology..

Of course, the reason why you make these ignorant posts is that you have no understanding of the way radio operates. So you spend your time, as in this case, confusing terminology and looking like a fool. Of course, that's better than your other passtime which is the posting of profanity on a website that provides the only source for much of the history of commercial radio available to the average person.

You are another person who, surprisingly, given your backround in broadcasting, who does not know the difference between AQH listening levels and cume audience.

It's easy to claim a foul if you don't know the rules of the game... or even what game is being played.

Elections can be won with a single vote. In ratings, averages are what allow advertisers to attach value to campaigns. It is, in fact, the larger advertisers who demand ratings and do not make decisions without some form of quantitative analysis. In recent years, advertisers have their agency ad buys audited to make sure that there is measurable efficiency in them.

And you, again, fail to understand that advertisers determine the age group´s they wish their campigns to reach. If there are essentially no advertisers asking for audiences over the age of 55, then there is no way for commercial radio to serve that group as there is no way to pay the bills. Despite what some have "claimed" radio station sellers have little or no contact with those who make marketing decisions at the client level.

Blaming radio for what advertisers choose to do with their money is naive.

I doubt that, since I have spent most of my career where English is not spoken. In any case, no person in broadcast management is running a popularity contest among their competitors. Being disliked is often a sign that you are winning.

that stayed the same are thankful they did not go down, and are

The purpose of focus groups is to try out on real people things for which there is no current market. You get a cross-section of humanity in a room and expose them to your new product.

Again, it's the advertisers who don't want to pay to have their messages heard by people over 55 or so. Over and over and over the reason is that the cost of making a sale with an older, more skeptical consumer, is greater than the profit on the sale because it takes many more repetitons of the ad message to create a sale. In other words, there is no return on investment.

Radio has as high a usage by those over 55 as in any of the so-called sales demographics between 18 and 54. There are plenty of stations and formats that appeal to seniors, including AC, country, news, talk, etc., but they don't get much revenue from that and can't effectively use audience ratings as nobody is buying.

> be POTUS?

Two little differences (although for someone who has made their mind up already, this won't make any difference):

First, a presidential election is one time every four years. Radio ratings are for every moment, hour by hour, every day, every week, every month. And a reasonable approximation of audience size is adequate for pricing, the whole purpose of ratings where there are many, many winners.

Second, the samples are not 2,500 but hundreds of thousands. Just in Los Angeles, the daily sample is around 3,000. That's 1,000,000 daily listening samples a year.

True. An old fuddy-duddy like Obama was still wedded to his BlackBerry.

The reality is that people change because products change and suppliers go out of business. If brand names continue to exist, they are names only.

I admit my mother in law finds it hard to use her DVD player, but she's over 90, and she's used to playing tapes over Ch. 3.

I've said this before -- my uncle was 65 when he dropped his lifetime habit of buying Chryslers for a Toyota. He was the first guy on his block to get color TV, and had he lived long enough I'm sure he'd be the first one with a plasma widescreen.

Of course, the demographics of radio advertising are determined by advertisers, not stations. But why let facts get in the way of another

That "purchasing habits are well-established by age 50" is the most ridiculous nonsense I have ever heard in my life. Since I was 50 (decade before last), I have changed almost everything--several times. Two years ago, I bought my first Ford. Before that, I owned three Chevys (sequentially). Chevys got worse; Fords got better. MY age has nothing to do with that.

After decades of owning a top-loading washer, I bought a front loader last month. My home phone system isn't based upon any technology I grew up with and spent much of my life installing and maintaining (it is more complex than anything a radio station other than KGO has now). After over ten years of DSL, I went with cable Internet several months ago (actually I have both now). Cable got better; DSL stagnated. And on and on it goes.

Change is the spice of life. After living my whole life in California, I'm prepared to live my final years in another state...one that isn't constantly telling me how I have to live. I may be a senior citizen, but I'm certainly capable of recognizing the benefits of superior products when they show up as well as being able to adjust my life accordingly.

> The reality is that people change because products change and

Exactly. Brand-loyalty might have been a consideration in the fifties and sixties, but today it is meaningless. Even we doddering oldies know that.

Indeed. When one turns fifty, his brain does not turn to mush (I should hope not: fifty is but a fond distant memory). In addition to still being able to dress myself, you might be surprised the purchasing decisions I can make.

I never said that major radio owners were evil. They just aren't very Sorry for the OT, but I can't find a very active satellite radio newsgroup on usenet.

A friend of mine has a Sirius Stiletto SL 100 portable that he got at a thrift store a couple years ago. It was activated when he bought it and has been activated the whole time, i.e. it might have a lifetime subscription. Is there any way one can tell how much activation time is on a radio if one doesn't have an account with Sirius? I'm thinking about buying this radio, but if the subscription goes away tomorrow, it would certainly be less valuable to me. Thanks for any info you might have to share.

I'm not arguing the veracity of Rush Limbaugh, but the nature of the whole commercial talkradio genre. There are a lot of people who do not listen to commercial radio.

Interesting sidenote: The teenaged son of one of my computer customers and I were talking the other day. I mentioned various talkshow and magazine show hosts. He hadn't heard of Ronn Owens, had heard the name Rush Limbaugh but didn't know much about him. He didn't even know who Ira Glass is, BUT he knew Jad Abumrad and Robert Krulwich (hosts of WNYC's Radiolab). We have heard the future of radio and it is Radiolab. He doesn't listen on the radio, though, he downloads the podcasts.

Be careful there, David. You made it appear that I spouted the nonsense above. I did not, "Brenda Ann" did.

If we're going to get into conspiracy theories about why "HD" radio is being touted with so much gusto, I'd say it's because of the play for pay possibilities. As the radio audience is harder and harder to sell to, what better way to make sure that stations stay afloat but to charge for the programming.

Only trouble with that model is that it has taken a decade to make XM/Sirius profitable, and they had to merge to do it, and that's for a meager $13 a month or whatever for hundreds of channels. I doubt that it's possible to get the charge low enough on any one station or cluster of stations to make local "HD" radio attractive to listeners.

Funny you should mention this. When GE sold off tons of assets in 1986 they leased the rights to the "GE" and "RCA" names.

The other night I was rooting around looking at brand names and noticed that GE still controls "GE" and licenses it to various companies for various products (they still make light bulbs, though).

But RCA was sold off to the French Thomson company, which changed its name this past year to Technicolor. The RCA brand is now used by over a dozen non-related companies.

Here's the skinny on just the RCA TV brand -- I won't even get into the other RCA appliances...

"Prior to 2004: RCA Televisions manufactured by Thomson are out of warranty. Please refer to your local TV repair shop, which may be able to assist you with repairs and replacement parts.

"RCA Televisions made between late 2004 and early 2010 were likely manufactured by TTE Corporation. Your set should have a label similar to the one to the right that indicates the manufacturer.

"If your RCA TV was purchased in the spring of 2010 or later, it was probably manufactured by ON Corporation. Your set should have a label similar to the one below that indicates the manufacturer."

As was previously mentioned in one of the earlier threads, no one in CM had a problem with your products Bob - it was YOU which eventually turned people away in droves and resulted in you having to offload your business for peanuts. I think maybe even some of the expat community did for a short time feel a little sorry for you that you lost so much money on the sale, but then after hearing all over town about your love of the bottle and the behavior resulting from that, the pity among the expats and locals soon disappeared.

You've only got YOURSELF to blame for the pitiful state you find yourself in now.

Drop-Out -versus- IBOC Digital Drop-Outs :

Drop-out : low-signal or no-signal
* Indoors if your signal has dropped-out : You either change to another Radio Station -or- don't listen to the Radio at all -or- Listen to something that you have pre-recorded.

Digital Drop-Outs : Intermittent Signal Strong Signal then No Signal with IBOC as you move around from spot to spot with a Pocket Radio that uses the Head phone Wire as teh FM Antenna : You may have a Strong Signal in one location with your Body and Antenna positioned one way; and you may have a Np Signal in another location with your Body and Antenna positioned another way.

Mobile Digital Drop-Outs : Intermittent Signal Strong Digital IBOC Signal along one area of the Road; and then No Signal with IBOC as you move along another stretch of the Road.

Only the account holder has access to that information. It's accessible online, but an account name and password is necessary.

If you call, Sirius/XM, you may be able to get the current status on that radio, but you'll need the radio ID number, which is located on Channel Zero. They'll ask for this number. They'll also ask for the existing account information.

Once you've identified yourself as the owner of the radio, and the information you give does not match the information they have on file, the radio will likely be deactivated.

You can reactivate the radio under your own account quickly, and if the $13 a month is troubling you, savings are available in 1, 3, and I believe 5 year plans. The Lifetime Subscription is still being honored, but isn't currently offered. I bought one when it was offered, and it was a big chunk down, but there are no additional fees, and the subscription persists over the life of a series of three radios, factory automobile radios being an exception for farily obvious reasons.

A caveat...If you buy this radio, and do not initiate your own subscription, you're technically guilty of 'theft of service,' since you're enjoying programming from a subscription paid for by someone else. How you came by it is irrelevant in the post DMCA universe.

If you buy the radio, activate it under your own subscription.

If I give you a Skype call, you will know my real name as that is the Anyway, what would that prove? I suppose you could tell from my Aussie accent that I'm not Steve but you only need to look at my IP address to

I did and there is no one in Thailand with that nick.

PAST SUCCESS??? No mention of PRESENT FAILURE, is there? You can't count a slow decline in a business as a PAST SUCCESS. A decline is a decline, no matter which way you look at it! You started out with potential and you failed to make anything of it. How would "everyone on Skype" know of your "success" when you have a failed business?

As always, a jackass. No wonder you couldn't make a success of the pickle business in Thailand!

Krypsis, he's just TOO thick (or most likely drunk) to get it!

One only has to look at a well-established and extremely successful business venture such as Jerusalem Falafel, which I believe is still going strong in Chiang Mai by all accounts. Poor ol' Johnson was never a chance of long-term success with his business nous; or lack there of. Obviously the copious amounts of early morning liquor he consumes wouldn't have helped either I guess. Was doomed to failure from the start.

Say Hey Feces:

What is the ranting and raving all about? I never owned a business in Thailand. CMPK business was sold at a handsome profit and now another business has been opened at the same location.

Now dabbling in Thai stocks with thaistocks.com and very well with our value investing technique.
Just watching the prices climb day by day. Sing along with me Stevie.
My 1st skin hangs down to my 2nd, my 2nd skin hangs down to my 3rd, my 3rd skin hangs down to my foreskin, my how the money rolls in.

I'll drink to that. Remember Stevie if you can't afford to drink.
DON"T! In your case you can't handle the booze and I strongly recommend you stay away from alcholic beverages. Leave the boozing up to the big boys Stevie.

As Thailand doesn't permit proxy servers, there is no doubt that Felicity is in Thailand right now. As far as I can tell, Jerusalem Falafal restaurant is still doing very well, and under the same management. The woman on the left in this photo http://img8.imageshack.us/f/johnsondw.jpg/is the owner of the restaurant and was at the police station to give evidence against Johnson. Her restaurant makes and sells the same products that Johnson made and most of his customers, when they got tired of his racist behavior, stopped purchasing his products and bought hers. He was forced to sell his business at a loss. She is still in business. Her products are still selling well and can be found in all the supermarkets, expanded shelving now that Johnson's products are no longer taking up space.

To clear up one matter; Johnson keeps saying that he never owned a business. It's true. In Thailand, all businesses must be at least 51% Thai owned. The business was in his wife's name. Perhaps if she were the figurehead for the business it would still be viable today. Instead, people assoiated Johnson with the company, violently disliked him, and boycotted his products.

Let's re-phrase that to be 'copious amounts of early morning through late afternoon liquor.' A bottle a day keeps the snakes and spiders away. The DT's are difficult at best...

Say Hey Stevie:

Thai stocks took a tumble today. Our portfolio dropped from 12 per cent down to around 9 per cent. Nothing like planning ahead with diversification. Check out thaistocks.com and see how it's down.
You'll be glad you did.

Time for our night cap Stevie and then off to beddy-bye. Sweet dreams ole buddy. Hope all you problems are little ones because you certainly can't handle any big ones.

Hi Anonymous,

Yes I can confirm when I was last up in CM I did pop into Jerusalem Falafal as I had heard many good reviews about the place. I am not normally a huge fan of 'middle eastern' type dishes, but I would have to say the food I tried there was wonderful. The owners/staff also couldn't have been any nicer and it is not difficult to understand why the business in question has been so successful over such a long period of time.

Haven't been up to CM in quite some time, so I can't guarantee that Jerusalem Falafal is still in operation, but considering the quality of the food and hospitality I experienced there, it would be hard to think it wouldn't still be going strong. Next time I travel up that way I will be sure to call in anyway.

Sorry to make you even more envious Bob.

Not necessarily brands, but the type of products which you buy.

You are still buying automobiles, but it is unlikely that you are now going to start buying hang-gliders.

The brain starts turning to mush as soon as it stops getting used on a regular basis. Many people never start using it, so the effect is accelerated in them with aging.

Yes "Anything would be better than a {Back-to-Back} REPLAY

Four One-Hour "Encore" Repeats of the Prior Days
3-Hour Programs would add variety at little or no cost;
and introduce your late-nite Radio Listeners to your Day-Time Radio Talent/Programming.

Why even KGO-AM 810 kHz could replace their late-nite host : Ray Taliaferro [1~5AM] with One-Hour "Encores" of :
1 AM : Ronn Owens
2 AM : Len Tillem [45M] / Dr. Dean Edell [15M]
3 AM : Gil Gross
4 AM : Gene Burns

IMHO - Radio Stations running Coast-to-Coast AM for 4-Hours 10AM~2AM and again 2AM~6AM is just keeping their Radio Transmitter 'warm' between 2AM to 6AM. ~ RHF

Interested you should bring this up. In my ultralight club, only one member is under 50. And we add new members every year. Of those of us who own an ultralight, only three bought their first before the age of 50.

The reasons? Well, discretionary income is higher at this age, so there is money for it. And after the work-a-day/family grind begins to fade, adults begin to look at resuming the adventures they put on hold in their 20's.

A large percentage of pilots come to aviation later in life. Because the opportunity to invest both the time and the money is now available.

Now, what DOES seem to be the case, is that 50+ buyers are less prone to being convinced by quick and dirty advertising, requiring a more thoughtful, and informative approach to convince them to turn loose of their cash.

But the priorities that guided the previous generation are not ours. To borrow a line from Dennis Hopper, 'the generation that wasn't going to get old...didn't.' The over 50 set is as adventurous, and prone to taking on new life paths, as the younger, so-called 'desirable demographics.' And they have greater discretionary income to spend, and more maturity to guide them in doing it. In many cases, it wasn't until their 50's, that many people didn't have their shit together enough to begin new adventures.

That advertisers haven't learned to tap into this wealth is a tribute to their shortsighted grasp on the limits that guided them 25 years ago.

As Brenda Ann pointed out, times, and the state of the population has changed. It's time to catch up.

Yep, those were the days alright... Now, so many over-50's have had their retirement accounts ravaged, their home equity gone deeply into the red, if not their home's loss completely, and face a dismal job market competing with 30-somethings, and are only a few years away from, what used to be, a normal retirement age. So, they're are really pinching pennies and squeezing nickels. Fortunately, I guessed right in major matters. Thus, so far-so good [knock wood] but I am even nervous of letting go of my money like I used to.

An over-50 buddy of mine told me he bought a yacht a few months ago. I told him I hadn't heard that. He replied that he had really been down playing it, because of the hard times the other over-50's friends have been having and it was too awkward to bring it up.

This delayed daredeviltry reminded me: A friend of mine, going apparently through a third "midlife crisis," bought his first motorcycle a couple of years ago, at age 58. He uses it to commute to his job.

He apparently had at least one close call, but no injuries.

In the absence of bikey ads on the radio, his chief source of information was a neighbor in his sixties who has ridden since his teens.

The question is not whether he should play it quiet for a while.
The question is: how big is the yacht?

- As Brenda Ann pointed out, times, and the state
- of the population has changed. It's time to catch up.

With a growing "Aging" Population {Aging of America} and a relatively getting-smaller 'Younger' Population :
Both Manufactures {Producers} and Marketers {Advertisers} need to re-think :
* What they are making and for who . . .
* What they are selling and to who . . .

> So a lifetime subscription is not transferable?

He's not talking about tranferring the account. He's talking about acquiring the radio, and using someone else's uncancelled subscription.

The subscription connects the customer to the service. The subscription isn't to the radio, it's to the service. A transfer of subscription must be accompanied by the necessary transfer of account ownership through SiriusXM.

In some cases, tranfers of account are permitted.

From the Customer contract:

"If you transfer a Subscription from one Receiver to another or from one person to another, you will be charged a transfer fee of $15 for all but Lifetime Plans. If you transfer a Lifetime Subscription Plan from one Receiver to another or from one person to another the transfer fee is currently $75.00. SATELLITE RADIO SERVICE SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE TRANSFERABLE ONLY TO THE EXTENT PROVIDED FOR HEREIN. A LIFETIME SATELLITE RADIO SUBSCRIPTION IS NOT TRANSFERABLE IF IT IS ASSOCIATED WITH A RECEIVER INSTALLED BY AN AUTOMAKER OR AN AUTOMOTIVE DEALER IN A VEHICLE, EXCEPT IN THE EVENT THE ORIGINAL RECEIVER ASSOCIATED WITH THAT LIFETIME SUBSCRIPTION PLAN IS STOLEN, ACCIDENTALLY DAMAGED OR, IN OUR SOLE DISCRETION, IS DEFECTIVE. No transfer fee will be charged for the transfer of a Lifetime Subscription Plan associated with a Receiver installed by an automaker or an automotive dealer if, in our sole discretion, the Receiver is defective."

To transfer a subscription you must register as an account holder attached to the specific Radio ID in question.

Specifically inre the Lifetime Subscription:

"Lifetime Subscription Plan: A "Lifetime Subscription" is one that continues for the life of the Receiver equipment. Lifetime Subscriptions are nonrefundable. You may cancel a Lifetime Subscription but if you cancel during the first year of service you will be charged a cancellation fee set forth in these Terms. Non Automotive Receivers: A Lifetime Subscription associated with a home, portable, or dock & play Receiver is transferable from one Receiver to another Receiver, up to a maximum of three (3) times. For each permitted transfer of a subscription from one Receiver to another or from one person to another you will be charged a transfer fee set forth in these Terms. Automotive Receivers: A Lifetime Subscription is not transferable if it is associated with a Receiver installed by an automaker or an automotive dealer in a vehicle, except in the event the original Receiver associated with that Lifetime Subscription is stolen, accidentally damaged or if, in the sole discretion of XM, it is defective."

Regarding transfers from one person to another:

"For each permitted transfer of a subscription from one person to another based upon a stolen or accidentally damaged Receiver you will be charged a transfer fee set forth in these Terms. No transfer fee will be charged for the transfer of a Lifetime Subscription associated with a Receiver installed by an automaker or an automotive dealer if, in the sole discretion of XM, the Receiver is defective."

I am not sure, in this economy, whether there exists any opportunity for HD in the forcastable future. AM HD, given its technical issues, is just not going to work because AM is not going to be viable in the longer term; age and listening level everywhere confirm this.

FM HD can be marginally profitable with very niche offerings or narrowcasting, such as the Indian Subcontinent programming on quite a few already. As long as the economy forces belt tightening on established stations, HD will not develop content of any striking value. And by the time the economy improves, the window of opportunity may have moved on.... just as the delays in AM stereo killed any chances of that system becoming a consumer hit.

While I see no reason to discontinue HD where it is already running, I don't see much reason right now for stations in smaller markets to convert... again the economy, not the technology, being to blame.

Advertisers... thinking if P&G, Budweiser, WalMart, etc., spend, each, hundreds of millions a year in researching customer trends, purchasing patterns, etc. All of them would love to be able to develop the senior market, but until the ROI on advertising to seniors makes sense, this won't happen... it still costs more to make a sale than the profit on it in most product and service categories.

- A caveat...If you buy this radio, and do not initiate your own

So reading the Magazines at the Barber Shop

So, any First Lady that takes a vacation is a "Royal Queen Bee"? Odd, but I don't remember you saying that about "Dime Bag" Laura Bush when she took vacations.

Odd that I don't remember you saying anything when "Dime Bag" Laura Bush and her girls took that "Glitzy and Luxury" African vacation in 2007. And I will bet -they- didn't stay at the Motel 6.

Do you mean that 10% unemployment caused by George W. Bush's Great Depression? The one that occurred in 4Q 2007 on W's watch? The one that he did nothing to stop since him taking office in 2000? That Depression?

Along with various other mental issues, it appears that you are also suffering from a very short memory.

Yes "Anything would be better than a {Back-to-Back} REPLAY

Four One-Hour "Encore" Repeats of the Prior Days
3-Hour Programs would add variety at little or no cost;
and introduce your late-nite Radio Listeners to your

Why even KGO-AM 810 kHz could replace their late-nite host : Ray Taliaferro [1~5AM]
with One-Hour "Encores" of :
1 AM : Ronn Owens
2 AM : Len Tillem [45M] / Dr. Dean Edell [15M]
3 AM : Gil Gross
4 AM : Gene Burns

IMHO - Radio Stations running Coast-to-Coast AM for 4-Hours 10AM~2AM and again 2AM~6AM is just keeping their Radio Transmitter 'warm' between 2AM to 6AM. ~ RHF

Broadcast transmitters are happiest when left on 24/7. Vacuum the air filters as required.

Yes I do seem to remember that story, and it also led to commercial radio stations being licensed.

I'm thinking more of the BBCs more recent attitude towards sound quality.

FM sounds is over processed, and doesn't sound nearly as good as it used to.

Digital radio via Freeview and Satellite are at lower than ideal bit rates, for no apparent reason. Resulting in low sound quality for no apparent reason.

Internet radio sounds OK now, but was very low quality for many more years than it needed to be.

Greets -
People like myself, who have been in non-commercial radio, for years, are amazed at the salaries of the Programming Directors at radio stations. These same high-priced clowns, are the same who make the colossal mistakes in programming :

Giving us a replay of Noory !

Michael "Weiner" Savage has stated on his program that he does not want to have his program played again, later, on the same radio station.

Sadly, K.S.F.O. 560 A.M. (San Francisco) is in the same building as K.G.O. 810 A.M. Here is why that is a major problem:

Liberal Brian Copeland (K.G.O.) produced a spot and it was scheduled to air during Michael Savage's program. I heard the spot and couldn't believe that a race-baiting N.A.A.C.P. sadist, a cross-dressing transvestite who is a rabid liberal, a "roman catholic", who is trying to start a RACE WAR
with his book:
"Not A Genuine
Black Man"

Whether Copeland scheduled it to play during Michael Savage's show, when it was on K.S.F.O. -----> OR it was scheduled by someone else, I cannot tell. Regardless, it was a deadly poison intrusion of the worst liberal kind, onto and soiling Michael Savage's conservative program.

Hardly anyone is mentioning the gentleman - Alex Jones from Austin, Texas. There is a station in Santa Cruz, California, @ 1080 on the dial, during the evenings. However the wattage is low and it is hard to receive in the San Francisco Bay Area.

What is needed is Alex Jones on a Bay Area radio station.
K.S.F.O. won't offer Alex Jones, because they are, as I said before: "impotent".
I am waiting the debut of Laura Ingraham and Alex Jones in the San Francisco Bay Area.

1) Did it happen on HIS (W's) watch?

Yes.

2) Even if some blame it (the Depression) on Clinton legislation in 1999, W had SEVEN years to correct the problem (from 2000 to 4Q 2007). Did he?

No.

Maybe not directly, but the entire mess was caused by Big Business / Wall Street...and W was the BEST FRIEND Big Business ever had.

So, however you slice it -- W caused it directly or caused it by not doing anything about the 1999 "Clinton legislation" -- either way, he seems to have had a wee bit of responsibility.

Robert Johnson now admits that he was lying about Kremer's arrest and deportation.
Johnson says that Felicity Warbrooke is Kremer.
Felicity Warbrooke is IN Thailand and posting from there.
Therefore Kremer is IN Thailand and was never arrested nor deported... which we knew for a fact long before this. The difference is now we have the trolls admitting their lies.

If A=B and B=C then A=C It's as simple as that.

ANALYZING ABORTION-ON-REQUEST* in the USA

*(Abortion Rights as they have existed since 1-22-73)

Abortion, just like aspirin, is nothing more than a valuable REMEDY for an unwanted medical condition. Folks who are Pro-Choice are not "pro-abortion" any more than there are any such people as those who are "pro-aspirin." People who are Pro-Choice regarding abortion defend the right of all girls and women to have ready, unfettered, and legal ACCESS to that remedy. And they would defend the right of girls and women to have no impairments to ACCESS to the right to full gestation, if that were their choice -- if there were any loons running around seeking to deprive them of that option. Thus, Pro-Choicers are sometimes misperceived as favoring one option over the other. They do not. They support both options EQUALLY. The misperception happens because the remedy of abortion is the only one of the two options that has a crowd of hateful, screeching, and ignorant bigots opposing it.

ANTI-Choice louts irrationally seek to impose immense hardship upon more than a million girls and women per year, in the USA, by again FORCING them to gestate to term, against their will, as was the case in the Pre-Roe vs. Wade Dark Ages. A very real, 9-month-long form of RAPE. Such a scenario would cause the loss of HUGE ranges of future opportunities to those girls and women, unless they were able to afford travel to FREE locations where abortion was still safe, legal and unfettered. ANTI-Choicers are sociopaths, and are totally without excuse. (And to date, NO Anti-Choicer or RRR Cultist (usually the same people) has ever yet been able to refute ANY of the points made in this article. Which shows how*monumentally* morally-bankrupt they truly are.)

To see the grave and long-term DANGER that threatened America, if McCain had won the 2008 election, please read these;

Abortions obtained by girls and women terminate three of the four of the reproductive-process entities (RPEs): zygotes, embryoes & fetuses, up until the 7th month of gestation) which have ALL of these characteristics in common with the first stage -- gametes (sperm and ova):

-- Human
-- Unique
-- As a stage of development, indispensable to future birth
-- Have NEVER experienced conscious awareness*
-- Alive

...which makes it hypocritical when abortion opponents try to defend the later three stages of the reproductive process but NOT the Stage One entities (gametes).

 (AFTER the 7th month of gestation begins, conscious awareness may be possible, but all the other of the above-listed attributes still apply. (But by then, the ONLY abortions being performed are for medical emergencies.) In fact, the procedure that Anti-Choicers LYINGLY call "partial-birth abortion" NEVER was. It is the MID-term procedure whose REAL name is ID&E: intact Dilation and Extraction. Which was almost always done around 4-1/2 MONTHS before birth typically occurs. Anti-Choicers are almost universally DEVOID of honest. And usually, too, of much in the way of intelligence.)

And the Bible, which is the primary moral authority for the majority of Americans; 83% of them:

-- In NO way condemns abortion.
-- Doesn't even MENTION abortion.
-- By Jesus' day, abortion had been around for 1,000 yrs.
-- Contains NO defenses of RPEs as people.
-- Reserves ALL of its protection for already-BORN people -- That it regards personhood to begin at BIRTH is made clear by it's immense emphasis on the importance it ascribes to BIRTH order, BIRTHrights. and first-BORNS.
-- In certain cases, condemned BABIES to horrible deaths.

-- Never indicates that there is anything "special" about fertilization.
-- Thus making gametes (the Stage One RPEs) equal in worth to the other three stages.
-- More than a QUADRILLION gametes are electively aborted DAILY, worldwide... by men. All of which had been potential and unique people.

Abortion-on-request enables women to:

-- Put their lives back on track immediately.
-- Restore their well-being to pre-unplanned pregnancy levels.
-- Vast majority of women are happy with this decision.
-- Most women have NO regrets afterward.
-- Restore their full range of future opportunities to PRE-ill-timed pregnancy levels. Immediately!
-- Avoid physical difficulties of a 9-month pregnancy.
-- Especially important for young girls, ~12-16.
-- Statistically 6-10 times safer than carrying-to-term.
-- Avoid the trauma of adopting-out, and wondering later.
-- Avoid possibility of changing mind about adopting-out, and those losing the chance to pursue many of the future opportunities that they formerly had had.
-- Reduce likelihood of long-term economic deprivation.
-- Avoid bringing a child into a less-loving home.
-- Avoid bringing child into unstable environment.
-- Wait until timing is better before having children.
-- Who then are MORE likely to be loved.
-- Who then are MORE likely to be in stable home.
-- And thus are LESS like to have troubled childhoods.
-- And therefore more likely NOT to become criminals.
-- And thus are MORE likely to become successful.

Legal abortion-on-request:

-- Is exponentially safer than illegal abortions.
-- Thus saving the lives of hundreds or thousands of women/yr.
-- Has been available throughout the USA since early 1973.
-- Between 1973 and 2000, 30 million women have had them.
-- Between 1973 and 2008, 45 million abortions have been done.

Other related facts include:

-- MOST women who have abortions go on to HAVE kids later, when the timing is better .
-- Those children would NOT have been born if the abortions had not taken place earlier, because the same sperm and ova would not have matched up.
-- Those "2nd-round" kids STARTED reaching age 13 in significant numbers by 1988. By the early 1990s, millions of those "2nd-round" kids were in their mid-teens by the early 1990s.

-- Mid-teens is the highest risk age for crime, and this continues into the early 20s.
-- As pointed out above, wanted and loved children are LESS prone to criminal behavior.
-- By 1995, millions of "2nd-round kids" were entering the workforce. Perhaps a million-plus MORE have entered it every year SINCE. By 2000, the oldest ones had reached the age where they could be getting quite successful.
-- Since the early 1990s, the rate of violent crime in the USA has declined dramatically, and by 2000 had reached 40-year lows in many categories.
-- The decade of the 1990s, and the 21st century to date, in the USA, has been the most economically-dynamic period of time for any nation in the entire history of the world, despite temporary fluctuations.

Although the exact figures may be impossible to derive, the probability that abortion-on-request has SIGNIFICANTLY benefitted all of America's society in terms of the crime rate and the economy is normally QUITE strong, and will be again, once the current and temporary worldwide recession has run its course. And a strong U.S. economy benefits the entire world.

It doesn't matter how much you may have, no one wants to see the state draining one's life savings. California is throwing money down the toilet. How many taxpayers does it take now to support one former state-employed retiree (since the crash)? It would appear that anyone with any money left at all is going to be taxed up to his eyes.

Sorry, but Kremer is in Thailand. Your buddy Larbgai has confirmed this fact. Of course, you have confirmed that he's in Austalia, and Scott Koplin tells us that he is posting as Greg Mossman and living in California... You guys are really making fools of yourselves.

There is no need for him to sneak into the Kingdom as he was never deported in the first place. Would you like to see the proof?

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post
photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one
Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people
in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine.
The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.

The proof is right here in this web page...

Such folks, like myself, are going to move to an adjacent no-tax state (Nevada and Washington come immediately to mind).

It has already been decided by the SCOTUS that California, and other states with high income taxes, CANNOT go after its former residents, to tax them on on tax-sheltered income which was earned while a resident of California.

965. Palstar R30/R30A tuning question

I'm considering getting a new receiver and one of the models I'm considering is the Palstar R30A.

But I have a concern about the tuning: I already have one minimalist communications receiver -- the Lowe HF-150 -- and the one thing I can't stand about it is how s-l--o---w the tuning is in USB or LSB mode. It makes clarifying the signal properly easier (which is why it's this way, of course), but it makes the receiver essentially useless for hunting for signals in USB or LSB mode. It just tunes too slowly for that.

Does the Palstar tune like this, too, or are its tuning rates more reasonable in SSB mode? What I'd ideally like is something that tunes pretty much the same rates the HF-150 does in both AM and SSB, with the option (under my control, NOT automatically chosen as a result of mode) to slow the tuning rate down if I want.

Thanks,

Ack! That's really bad wording there. Let's try again:

What I'd really like is a receiver that tunes at about the same rates the HF-150 does in AM mode, but does so in both AM and SSB, with the option (under my control, NOT automatically chosen as a result of demodulation mode) to slow the tuning rate down if I want.

Palstar R30 is NOT in the same group of radios such as Lowe HF-150,despite of much physical similarities.To start listing the differences, my R30CC has two very decent Collins mechanical filters . According to all reviews published it has a pretty high dynamic range and I never experinced any overload / intermodulations.
However, Lowe HF-150 was designed (!) be used with an external preselector... Palstar I own has a high serial number,as far as I am aware of, and has two speeds for tuning. It is a high performance receiver ,but does not have a keypad nor remote,unfortunately.

You can use a focus group to tweak something. I really don't think you can spring a radical idea on a focus group and expect to get useful data. If the product is very different from what is on the market, the focus group won't get it. Radical changes take time to be accepted.

Focus groups are great for say testing a new flavor of soda. Look at how long MP3 players languished until Apple did the only thing they do well, namely market products. You ask the average dufus on the street and they think Apple both invented MP3 and the MP3 player. Mention Fraunhofer and they think you are bullshitting them. Really, I've had drag down fights with fanbois over this.

I still stick with blackberry because I want the phone to work. If I need 3D games and fart sounds, I will get an iphone. I loan my BB to many a person with an iphone that doesn't work due to crappy reception or dead battery. Further, due to security and the need for enterprise control, you would find nearly every government work uses a blackberry. If you investigate Rim BES, you would be amazed at the technology. Oh, and there are fart apps for the BB too, but no 3D games.

I was on a flight to DC and the twenty something guy next to be played freakin 3D baseball on his damn iphone for 90 minutes straight until he killed the battery. Nothing like landing and not being able to make a call.

Those Radiolab guys are ADHD! Or is that ADD? It's an OK show. Not must hear radio, but I wouldn't turn it off.

but leave radio. The music on PHC is great, but the skits and readings

Greets -
People like myself, who have been in non-commercial radio, for years, are amazed at the salaries of the Programming Directors at radio stations. These same high-priced clowns, are the same who make the colossal mistakes in programming :

Giving us a replay of Noory !

Michael "Weiner" Savage has stated on his program that he does not want to have his program played again, later, on the same radio station.

Sadly, K.S.F.O. 560 A.M. (San Francisco) is in the same building as K.G.O. 810 A.M. Here is why that is a major problem:

Liberal Brian Copeland (K.G.O.)
produced a spot and it was scheduled to air during Michael Savage's program. I heard the spot and couldn't believe that a race-baiting N.A.A.C.P. sadist, a cross-dressing transvestite
who is a rabid liberal, a "roman catholic", who is trying to start a RACE WAR
with his book:
"Not A Genuine
Black Man"

Whether Copeland scheduled it to play during Michael Savage's show, when it was on K.S.F.O. -----> OR it was scheduled by someone else, I cannot tell. Regardless, it was a deadly poison intrusion of the worst liberal kind, onto and soiling Michael Savage's conservative program.

Hardly anyone is mentioning the gentleman - Alex Jones from Austin, Texas. There is a station in Santa Cruz, California, @ 1080 on the dial, during the evenings. However the wattage is low and it is hard to receive in the San Francisco Bay Area.
What is needed is Alex Jones on a Bay Area radio station.
K.S.F.O. won't offer Alex Jones, because they are, as I said before: "impotent".
I am waiting the debut of Laura Ingraham and Alex Jones in the San Francisco Bay Area.

Scott Koplin, I've been looking at some interesting posts. Just what is your connection with the Gay Rights Movement in Seattle, WA, and how long have you been associated with them? Are you also involved with the Gay Rights group in Vancouver? Did that play any part in your dismissal from the Marine Corps?

Heh...that's funny. If you smoke cigarettes you'll pay more tax in NV and WA than in California. Both WA and NV charge lower sales taxes than CA, but WA charges taxes on both goods AND services, which can be quite substantial. For instance, a car repair might cost $100 in parts but $600 in labor. In CA the labor isn't taxed.

Property taxes: Interesting note here. WA is willing to defer some or all property taxes to the elderly, BUT they will then put a lien against the property so that the person can't leave the property free and clear to anyone without first paying off the property tax lien.

In CA the property tax is limited to 1% of assessed valuation, which can never be more than market value. Neither WA nor NV had any limit on how high property taxes can go relative to assessed valuation.

Good luck in finding that retirement bargain...

At first I'd always thought that Garrison Keillor was making fun of the Midwest, so I didn't like him for that. Plus, I preferred Tom Bodet's "End of the Road" series. Well, I came to tune in "Prairie" from time to time and found that the skits were sometimes quite fun and sometimes among the worst drivel I'd ever heard on radio. The music is excellent for the most part, but why on earth does Keillor sing along with his guests? He's not a good singer, and the kind harmonies he does (there are many kinds of harmonies) are usually inappropriate for the kind of song. The fact that KQED runs this program twice a week is a travesty. But, that appears to be what the listeners want.

Imagine a Thai version of Key West, without the limitations of the ocean, surrounded by mountain jungle filled with ethnic hill tribes, wild life, and amazing culture. The area is a travel/nature/people photographer's dream come true with dozens of shooting venues of every sort. I run this 1/2 page color advertisement http://www.photoenvisions.com/Advert.htm in 8 different free tourist guide magazines given out in the airport, hotels and guest houses. I also have it on the walls all over town. You can't be here for more than a day without seeing it a dozen times. Hi David,

Hmmm quite an interesting find on your behalf. What they heck is this Koplin guy’s real story I wonder – his mind seems to be all over the place; particularly considering the types of 'hobbies' he seems to have some involvement with in one form or another.

Anyway, thanks to your research skills, it highlights another reason why people (even here on the internet) should consider giving this wacko a real wide berth.

Bob, why can't you take the hint - nobody is the least bit interested in your stocks. What we are interested in though is just exactly what lies hidden behind those security-proofed walls of yours up there in lovely, safe Chiang Mai. Care to enlighten us as to why there is such a need for THAT kind of security? I can't imagine you would have anything of much worth that anybody would want to take. You pissed the remaining savings you had up against a wall long ago; not to mention the thousands you lost in the fire-sale.

Garrison Keillor and a Prairie Home Companion

1005. Yaesu FRG 7700 For Sale

From: Bob <rgsros@notme.invalid>

Hello All,

Several years ago I gave my Yaesu FRG-7700 to my son when I purchased a JRC NRD 545 for myself.

My son is totally non-technical, but he said he thought it might be great to be able to pick up the BBC, etc. directly. Well, he hasn't turned it on once,apparently.
I think it's just a bit too complicated for him.

I'm a retired engineer from MIT, and I really loved this radio, and would like very much for someone else to enjoy it as I have, rather than just leave it laying around totally not used. Thinking of perhaps getting him something a lot simpler, like one of the Sangean portables.

I plugged it in today, and from what I can determine it seems to work, still, just fine.
Picked up WWV on 10, 15, and 20 MHz, and the local AM broadcast bands well.
Have not evaluated it on other modes or all the freq's.

So, I guess, as with these kind of things, I should say it is being sold "as is".

Cosmetically perfect, other than a very slight black mark about 1/8" or so long on top cover. Other than that, looks perfect.

Not sure what to ask, frankly, but I think $ 285 would probably be fair.
I will pay shipping. I can't believe how heavy the radio is, so anything less than this hardly would be worthwhile for me to to sell if I pay for the shipping also.

I'm too elderly now to learn how to use PayPal, eBay, etc., so I would request a Cashiers or Certified check prior to my shipping it.

The display seems to light up fine, and the segments do all display correctly.
But, many of the segments, although totally lit, do have some greying in them.
Not totally clear and crisp, but perfectly readable.
I noticed looking at eBay that they have for sale the display module for the radio at about $ 20, so perhaps this partial segment greying is common ? Not sure what they used for the display: gas discharge ?

If anyone is in the Boston area, would be happy to have them come over and play with it. Or, would be happy to provide any details that I have missed talking about.

I do have a photocopy of the manual.

I know I had two of the small add-on's for it.
One was an antenna tuner, and I don't remember what the other one was (it was not the memory unit). Perhaps a VHF DownConverter ? Embarrassed to say it, but just cannot find them. Will blame it on old age. If I do locate, would be happy to include, or ship afterwards to purchaser.

If interested, or any questions, please contact me at:
rgsrose@comcast.net

Thanks,
Bob

Don't let the door slam on your way out. I'd be very happy if more retirees left California, for several reasons: (1) fewer people means less congestion on the roads, on public transit, and in line at Safeway; (2) fewer people means less wear and tear on the infrastructure, (3) fewer retired people means more working people and a big savings in Medi-Cal payouts.

In short, everybody wins!

Not a State employee, therefore no "source tax".

I believe it was indeed the "source tax" on NON-STATE retirement incomes which the SCOTUS invalidated.

You, on the other hand, were forced to sell up your wife's business because YOU screwed it up for her. That's why she left you!! You don't have any options Bob. You're stuck in Chiang Mai because you can't afford to live anywhere else. The ONLY option you have is to hide behind your walls with your alarms, searchlights and guard dogs and get drunk. Don't be so hard on Johnson, Krypsis. He has Larbgai and nurk_fred as friends. It's just unfortunate that they only exist as pixels on a computer screen and not in real life for Robert. His only friend in real life is his bottle. The dogs only stay because they get fed. We can only hope that they get enough food so they don't have to eat what his neighbors throw over the walls. Animals shouldn't have to suffer for

If CMPK is NOW successful, it is only because YOU aren't involved in it any more, having been forced to sell it at a loss! Anyone with half a brain could make a success of it but you don't even have that much! No wonder you drove the business into the ground!

You have investments? I daresay they would be about as successful as CMPK was when you were running it. . .

Say Hey Stevie:

The Toyota Hilux is used for hauling my beer, and wine bottles to the dump. We have a Toyota Yaris to drive around in. My wife does the driving as I'm usually three sheets to the wind. If you know what I mean. They took away my drivers license several years ago. I never did learn the ole adage about drinking and driving.

BTW - SET/MAI closed higher today. All signs of a good bull run. Keep in mind Stevie, "Investing is where you find a few great companies and then sit on your ass" -- Charlie Munger (Warren Buffet's sidekick)

One of the funniest stories I heard coming out of Chiang Mai involved Johnson once being found sprawled out on the driveway of a next door neighbors house - Nothing too much out of the ordinary there you might say. True, except for the fact a couple of stray soi dogs were witnessed by several of the neighbors licking the contents of Johnson's dinner the previous evening off his chin where he had thrown up all over himself. It was not a pretty sight I'm led to believe. The neighbor in question apparently said he was often found in varying degrees of drunkenness stumbling around trying to remember where he actually lived. Pitiful is the word that comes to mind.

Corporations hire people, and sell to people..... corporations are simply middle men that try to take in more than they spend.....

So any tax on a corporation is actually on the people they hire and sell to.

The only way a tax is paid, is by people spending money they earned or earning money they spend, and that is just labor.

When you sell your labor and the government taxes who you sold your labor too, they have to pay you less to have more in their hands to pay the tax.

According to Wikipedia: "The IRS estimates that about 6 million unauthorized immigrants file individual income tax returns each year.[3] Research reviewed by the nonpartisan Congressional Budget Office indicates that between 50 percent and 75 percent of unauthorized immigrants pay federal, state, and local taxes.[3] Illegal immigrants are estimated to pay in about $7 billion per year into Social Security.[15]"

If illegal immigration were such a big problem, the federal government would have stopped it during any Republican or Democratic regime since the 1940s when it first rose to public attention.

"Two Ton" as she is affectionately named, is better known for guzzling the leftovers of her customers meals and ravaging the trash cans looking for snacks.

Goodness knows what the Royal Thai Police made of her descending on them at the time of his arrest. It would have been difficult for them to restrian a lady of her size and weight, let alone stop her in her tracks.

I'm sure Steve felt much more safe with her around though as reportedly he was shaking like a leaf in the cop shop when they brought him in.

The "Road Taxes" on Gasoline were a good example of 'dedicated' Taxes that worked to meet a need.

Now so-called "Road Taxes" are put into the general

How do they file returns without SSNs? This sounds bogus.

With few exceptions corporations are where sick, twisted people use money to keep score while they lay waste to all they get near. They are an experiment run amok, and must be heavily controlled if we are to survive as a nation.

Since they control the media they can brainwash people into acting against their own best interests, which they do quite nicely.

Aside from that... most of the people major US corporations are hiring live in India, China, Vietnam, Mexico, etc. American workers demand much higher wages and benefits than corporations are willing to pay, since it affects their bottom line.

Automatic F due to using Wikipedia as a reference.

Actually the illegal alien burden is mainly on the states who have to comply with all the unfunded federal mandates.

I don't know about income tax, but the illegals are big contributors to Social Security and Medicare even though they are ineligible for benefits. "http://www.nytimes.com/2005/04/05/business/05immigration.html".

Now here is an interesting idea... It's been bandied about that Larbgai's real name is Craig Sutton
212 Stout St Gisborne Tel: 0-6-868 9506
With the help of GoogleMap it would be easy enough to get the addresses of all the neighbors around his house. It looks as if it sits at a 'T' junction on Stout St. Why not send copies of this photo to all the neighbors and see what happens? If it's not Craig Sutton, then nothing will further. But if it IS Craig Sutton... Well! We already know that Sutton is married and has kids. A photo of him with a Pattaya bar girl sitting on his knee should go over really well with his wife.... I think it's worth the few bits for postage. The photo already exists on line so easy enough to print out a few copies.

Sounds like a plan.

Government statistics say the same. Also, the IRS issues noncitizen TIN's that work the same as SSN's, except there are no benefits.. they're just for tax purposes.

Also, think about this: even the ones using faked SSN's are paying into Social Security. Those payments will not go to the person illegally using that SSN, but to the person who actually owns the SSN. If nobody owns the SSN, then the payments just go into the general fund to be distributed later.

Think carefully old bean, last time you tried that you had a warning

I will advise him you are at again.

btw, confirmation that I am NOT Craig Sutton and that I live no where near Gisbourne can be had by contacting Bob, however if you want to go on making a clown of yourself feel free to do so. I enjoy watching a mature old man gradually (or though in your case it's rapidly) slipping into your premature dotage.

Bob, YOU are the only pickled drunk around here. You are in a constant state of pickledness due to your alcoholism. I really do pity that poor ex-wife of yours - considering all the ridicule she went through being married to you. Imagine having to come home from a hard day at work and finding you sprawled out, near-naked, in the next door neighbors driveway with a couple mange-riddled soi dogs licking your chin. You didn't even realize it till days afterwards when the stories started going round the CM Expats Club. I can't believe you had the audacity to even show your face around town - let alone still expect people to buy your products. That is when you still HAD a business though.

The benefits go into a suspense account where the money is immediately used up anyway.

So, a real or a faked SSN/TIN doesn't matter as the receipts will be spent on those who have a valid number and who file for benefits.

I am reminded that when I applied for early SS, do to a marked decline in my investment portfolio income, I was supposedly required to supply an official copy of my Certificate of Live Birth.

I actually DID obtain such a certificate from the State of Ohio, but when I called the local SS office to for instructions, the official said my COLB was NOT required as they had already verified it from other sources.

Perhaps from my U.S. Passport data?

I HAD to provide a certified copy of my COLB to obtain my first passport, but not on subsequent passport applications.

Incidentally, for those so-called "birthers" out there ... both California and Ohio COLBs are facsimiles of the actual original document, signed by the attending physician, but printed by photographic means (Ohio) or xerographic means (California) on special paper which is virtually impossible to counterfeit. Imbedded silk threads, multi-color printing (intaglio in CA's case) and micro-printing. The whole nine-yards. Also a raised seal of the state, over the signature of the official who issued it ... an MD-MPH in CA's case.

If the person in the photo is NOT Craig Sutton, then the receivers will have absolutely no idea why they are getting such a photo. No names need be used. It will just be another piece of junk mail to be thrown away.

However if the picture IS Craig Sutton, posing with a whore on his lap, well... THAT will be interesting to watch!

When you consider how much the Thai's love to gossip across the back fence, his wife must really suffer quite a lot of ridicule. But do remember that his Thai wife is NOT actually his legal wife. She simply lives with him for his money. Johnson is legally married to a Western woman that he married for Tax purposes when he first came to Chiang Mai, before anyone knew the 'real' Robert Johnson. Since that time, as I understand it, she has had no contact with him... for obvious reasons.

Imagine having to come home from a hard day at > work and finding you sprawled out, near-naked, in the next door

I'm sure by this time she's used to it. It's most likely as daily occurrence.

Johnson was kicked out of the CM Expats Club for threatening the lives of its board members.

He doesn't. He comes out before dawn, does his shopping in 24hr stores, and is back behind his fortified walls before most people are up and around.

You are right Anonymous, I had forgotten about the exact details surrounding Johnson's personal situation - not that I really want to know anything about that sordid situation mind you. Yes from what I have heard, his western wife is still trying to 'live down' the fact that she actually entered into lawful marriage with this man - the poor woman must still have nightmares thinking about any actual time spent with him. Even though from what I have also heard the marriage was for reasons other than love, she must still question herself for doing it, particularly now that everyone knows the real Bob.

Guilty by association. I hope his current 'wife' is handsomely reimbursed to compensate for the fact she has to smell his whiskey-drenched carcass every day.

So once again you admit that Kremer was never arrested nor deported! If you say the Felicity Warbrooke is Kremer, and Felicity Warbrooke is posting FROM inside Thailand, then Kremer must be INSIDE Thailand!

All of which proves once again that you lied about his arrest.
But we already knew that, didn't we.

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine. The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.

http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

I would really like to be in the neighborhood when those photos get seen. I'll bet we can hear the screaming from Thailand, Singapore, Thinking back on it, Kremer's initial problems with Robert Johnson stemmed from Johnson's abuse towards the owner of the Jerusalem Felafel Restaurant over on soc.culture.thai. Johnson was calling her all sorts of anti-semetic names, calling her Thai husband racist names, and at the same time e-mail bombing her. It was a long hard journey but eventually Kremer saw to it that Johnson was put out of business and lost everything he had in the community.

Now it looks as if Larbgai wants his share. I think it would be a great start in that direction to send the photos to NZ.

In a very safe place, I keep a certified copy of my birth certificate, an SSA-issued SSN card, and every passport (including a current one) ever issued to me. While it has only recently become necessary to carry a passport for travel to neighboring countries, I found out the hard way that it was a good idea even decades ago to have the passport along when crossing borders.

Returning from a diving trip to Cabo some years back, I carried nothing with me other a simple photocopy of my birth certificate. I was assured that was all I needed (and in times past didn't even need that for automobile border crossings) for the air trip to Baja. Upon return, I was stopped by immigration at the airport of entry back into the US. I was told that the photocopy wasn't certified (and hence worthless). They didn't even want to see my CDL.

The most silly round of questioning I have ever experienced ensued. "Who is favored to go to the 'series'?" How the hell should I know? I'm not a sports fan. There were all manner of "pop culture" questions. Who cares? I endured this nonsense for over two hours. Finally, they abruptly said, "You can go now."

In recent years, I have thought about the possibility that I was being f*cked with royally. They could have brought up a copy of my passport at any time with the information I gave them. The picture was unmistakably me. My spoken English is unaccented and exhibits a good grasp of the language. I was with a group containing many members who did have passports. Someone was having a good time at everyone's expense. As a result, I have zero respect for our immigration authorities.

So even before the regulations demanded it, I made it a practice to go nowhere near the border of the US without my current passport in hand. I never wanted to endure that nonsense ever again.

I believe there is a whole page full of Johnson's vile remarks about Jews, Thais, and a range of other people he feels hatred towards on Steve Kremer's old website. I don't remember the actual link ,but I'm sure a quick search on Google is all that is needed to find it. I wonder if the authorities in Thailand would be interested in having a look; considering the way Johnson speaks about the Thai Governmenr.

Actually, the initiatives taken to increase the ozone layer have had a marked effect on increasing the ozone layer. Remember, the first such activity was begun in the 1970s when NASA had accumulated a history of photo documentation from space. That first initiative was banning Freon and other fluorocarbons. I suspect that the various incremental shifts in regard to global warming will probably have a similar effect, but we may not see it for a number of years.

But you can't win for losing (or however the phrase goes). Dig this:

"ScienceDaily (Jan. 26, 2010) • The hole in the ozone layer is now steadily closing, but its repair could actually increase warming in the southern hemisphere, according to scientists at the University of Leeds. [....]"

It is rather difficult to "make up" and SSN. Like credit card numbers, they have checksums. A bogus SSN will drop a flag the moment it enters an SSN-savy computer.

I'm reminded of when the witch doctors "caused" solar eclipses and then were worship when they made them go away. At least they put on quite a show. Now, we're told that there's too little ozone or too much carbon dioxide (things we cannot even detect or observe on our own as ordinary schlubbs) and then after we empty our pockets, we are told that all is right once again. Some things never change, but I think the witch doctors put on a better show.

Oh, I'm sure someone in government will figure out a way to get more out of our pockets.

I am totally new to the hobby, so I was thinking it would be nice to have a shortwave radio that I could listen to some broadcasts. I would prefer a radio that is battery independent (So I don't spend a fortune on getting new batteries for a radio, plug in or wind up is fine) and I really do not want to spend a ton of money on something that I won't use much if I don't like it, so it needs to be inexpensive (as in under $100 USD.)

To answer you questions backwards, don't buy a battery independent radio, unless you need one. For example in your fallout shelter. Buy either a radio that runs on household current, or if you want a portable, buy one that uses AA batteries.

Then go out and buy a set of slow discharge NiMH batteries, such as the Sanyo Enerloop, and use them. They charge in any standard NiHM charger, but take longer to charge. They also will hold 80% of their charge for a year.

The don't take a charge well the first few times you use them, so expect them to need to be recharged relatively quickly the first few times.

They will last about 1,000 charge/discharge cycles, or 3 years if you run them down to empty and recharge every day.

Now to a radio.

You can look at the website of Universal Radio (www.rffun.com) and see what they have. Look at their used radios too. Don't buy anything with tubes in it, no matter how good it looks, how well they say it works, nor how cheap it is.

Tube radios are fine if you understand the care they need, but as a first radio, it's not a good idea.

Before you buy anything, put an ad up on the local mailing lists, looking for one for free. You would be surprised what people have, and won't get rid of because they think it might be valuable, but really want out of their homes and would gladly give away to someone who asked.

You could also go to www.qrz.com and put in your zipcode in the advanced search option. That will give you a list of hams that live near you.
If you recognize any names, give them a call.

If you don't send them an email, or if they are a neighbor, knock on their door and explain why. Hams love to show of their stations and help prospective hams.

Geoff.

Well, I called around and to make a long story short (Someone I knew

Grundig Traveler II Digital G8 for a song (20 USD) that I will get and I might have fun with it.

So, I guess the question is now "How good/bad is a Grundig Traveler II Digital G8 as a portable Shortwave radio?"

Thank you Bob. Seems by the reviews online it is a decent radio at a good price. I figure if I buy it, never use it, I could sell it on, and if I did like it, I could put it in my office/car, use it as a portable system, and get something like a Ten Tec RX-320 for home use. Might be good for me to learn how to spool up and make some home made attennas for better SW service. My grandfather was a Ham, but I am completely new to the whole true radio experince.

If you want to just listen why not use web streams? They are much

That looks like a fun radio. It uses a real old tuner chip from the late '80s. Sensitive as all get-out. I wouldn't add more than a couple clip leads to the antenna. You can tune stations in the gap adding (or subtracting) 900kHz to the frequency you want, as the radio is single conversion with a low IF (450 kHz [sometimes 450]).

Of course they have no checksums. I'm surprised so many people did not

That's exactly it, and this is why nobody is going to rock the boat about illegal immigration.

Personally, I'm against illegal immigration, especially from Mexico because Mexico is strictly against illegal immigration from the U.S. You have to have your papers on you at all times when in Mexico, and you can be stopped by the federales or by any local cop who may suspect you of being in the country illegally.

Do you honestly believe I don't know what a "checksum" is? If so, then my only error was overestimating the contextual comprehension of the readers of this group.

Granted, I should have used the term in quotes.

The format is will publicized. I don't know what would make you have thought that there was a checksum, since there isn't.

The states and local governments are the ones footing the cost of the drain of illegal immigrants, not the Federal government. As far as I know, the state and local governments are not reimbursed from this supposed windfall (as they rightly should be).

But he wasn't.

I understood precisely what he meant. It was a casual use of a term that has a specific denotation, but also connotes a wider context when there isn't an alternate specific term.

There is no checksum for SSN's. He knows that. We all do.

But the term is a decent analog for what he was trying to say, without going into a lengthy description of the process from which SSN's are generated.

Let it go.

Just as we'll let 'an historic occasion' go for you.

Yes, that's the problem. There are unfunded mandates to provide services regardless of a persons status. While often well-intentioned and cheaper than the alternative, they still are an enormous burden on certain states like California and Arizona.

There's no doubt that Arizona knew that the law they passed was unconstitutional and would be thrown out. But they succeeded in both sending a message to the federal government and to would-be illegals coming to Arizona.

Well the old adage of "be careful what you wish for you just might get it"

Someone offered me a Hammerlund HQ-129x if I carted it off...now I know why they are called boat anchors!

I know it works, as i was able to get a country radio station on it, but i hope the poor reception was due to my improvised antenna (some co-axle cable) and not the radio. I downloaded the manual so I know how to warm up the tubes and all that. (Has original knobs i think)
So now I am trying learn with about 20 foot co-ax antenna.

The scene: It is November, 1943. We're in Camp Shelby, just outside of Hattiesburg, Mississippi, where 5,300 German prisoners of war are interned.

The Geneva Conventions are being strictly adhered to, with food (prepared by German cooks), clothing, and medical care equal to their captors. The German POWs have formed soccer and volleyball teams, with descriptions and results of the tournaments between them reported in the camp newspaper, The Mississippi Post.

A Nazi church has been erected in the camp, where Nazi worshippers attend services held by Nazi chaplains. In their sermons, the chaplains instruct that:

It's worse that Coast-to-Coast AM

Mike and Mike in the Mornings on ESPN Radio

It everywhere from 540 kHz to 1000 kHz

Noon-time and hearing 790 ESPN Radio http://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/KFPT

KFPT-AM 790 kHz Clovis, CA http://www.radio-locator.com/info/KFPT-AM and even at Noon they are still talking about
"Mike and Mike in the Mornings" on ESPN Radio

Note - It seems like 1/4rd of ESPN Radios Air-Time is spent repeating "ESPN Radio" and promo'ing itself.

yeah - it's radio and that's what i hear ~ RHF

Skype Customer Service requests that you show ANY post that says someone named "David" wants to call all of you. They can't seem to find one. If you could show them just ONE SINGLE POST to prove anything you say, it would go a long way in helping your cause. Perhaps if you gave them your Welfare Case Number they might take pity on you.

Nah... It's just that no one gives a damn about what you ask for. You lie constantly, and we've proven that over and over.

You've never once show ANY proof of the things you allege, while at the same time, we constantly show proofs to EVERYTHING we say. So why should any of us think we need to more? Until you show any proof of anything, we'll continue to know you lie about everything. It's just that simple. Here is some more of our proof of your lies...

The dates don't work. The trolls caught lying again.

The trolls say that Kramer was arrested in January of 2004.
They say he was deported.
So how come a Chiang Mai magazine was able to interview him and post photos of him working for the Thai Tourist Police IN THAILAND in 2006?

Employed by the Royal Thai Police in 2006. Thailand's largest English language magazine interviewed Kramer in 2006, along with several other members of the Royal Thai Tourist Police as they were helping out one Sunday afternoon. http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341

This wasn't some article about Kramer. He was just one of the people interviewed for the information contained IN the article. No some advertorial as the trolls claim but a story about people helping people in Thailand.

The trolls were kind enough to post the photo of him working as a Thai Tourist policeman two years AFTER they say he was deported. So who is lying? The trolls? Or Chiang Mai's largest English language magazine. The answer is patently obvious.

All of the posts about the supposed arrest were lies.
All of the posts about the supposed deportation were lies.
Just as people have said all along.
The proof is right here in this web page...
http://www.chiangmainews.com/ecmn/viewfa.php?id=1341 A web page from February, 2006. Two years AFTER the trolls say he was arrested.

 Oh you care alright Steve otherwise you would;nt keep replying to our posts.

Yessir, it hurts so bad that your planned campaign to vilify Bob Johnson backfired so badly you ended up a limp penis posting under a string of assumed names.

Yessir, it hurts so bad that you drag in totally unknown citizens of foreign countries on the wild pretext that they are the persons pursuing you on the net.

Yessir, it hurts so bad that the only people anywhere that will stick up for you are figments of your own imagination.

Yessir, it hurts so bad when you can only claim to have 3 fat chicks stick up for you at the time of your greatest humiliation.

Yessir, it hurts so bad that the name Steve Kramer is associated with buffoonery anywhere on the internet.

Yessir, it hurts so bad that all these facts I posted about you are verifiable truths not lies as you would like to claim.

Yessir, it hurts so bad that you can't prove one of these facts lies.

You sure you want to keep this going Steve??? It's really making you look foolish.

Gerry Brown is a nationally and internationally recognized agility competitor and judge. Gerry and Larrie (his Collie) have also been successful competitors in USDAA, finishing fifth in the Grand Prix of Dog Agility World Championships in 2002.
Over the past several years, his judging assignments have taken him all over the United States and Mexico. Gerry competes actively in both AKC and USDAA.

Michael Savage is a dog lover, just like you, and as such is very involved in many canine activities.
He talks on-air about his dog Teddy more often than you do about your own dogs.

Oh, you weren't thinking about the former mayor of Oakland, were you?
That guy is Jerry with a J. He also has a dog, named Dharma who is obviously not Christian.
If word gets out he has a non-Christian dog, he will almost certainly lose the good members of the Capital Christian Center in Sac.
After all, the CCC has standards and godless Hindu and Buddhist concepts are not welcome. Neither are sinful stripper parents who try to put their children with all the nice kids in the church's school.

Greets VegasNightOwl,
As you probably know, Michael Savage broadcasts from several locations from 3:00 p.m. (Pacific Time) to 6:00 p.m. His last hour (5-6), is usually made-up of 2 guests (30 min. each) who discuss various topics. One day
he spoke with a person who talked about boxing for 30 minutes, another day it was about dogs.

Those who are looking for conservative talk, are offered a plate-full-of blather about dining at Italian and Chinese joints, or about dogs, or about boating (smog and bilge oil / gas on the water), or about boxing, etc., etc. Savage unfortunately has become soft, rarely diving into controversial subjects, or most definately not focusing on conservative issues.......only the same boring topics of:

* Boxing
* Food and Eating
* Dogs
* Mocking cats and their owners
* Motor Boating, NOT Sailing. (Noisy and Smoggy)
* Same stories about his childhood
* Using the term Mc Carthyism again, shedding a bad light on the "jr." Senator from Wisconsin.
In fact I was the one who contacted Savage when he started some 15 years ago....yes I have been listening that long. Anyways, Savage
was making fun of Mc Carthy, using the term Mc Carthy-ism. I called-him-on-it, sent him a fax and told him that he had it all wrong, that he was doing exactly what the liberals and

Communist Party would do - smear Mc Carthy.
So.....he changed his tune, and started supporting Mc Carthy, talking about the Vanona Papers, etc.
However recently, since he was banned in Britain proper, he has again used the term
Mc Carthy-ism in a bad way.
For the life of me, I cannot figure Savage out.
However, the image of the Senator from Wisconsin is more important than any friendship that I would have with Weiner / Savage.

Funny, Michael Savage even has a audio clip of my call to his program.....my laugh.
He used to play it a lot on his program....
Then calling the person who is laughing, called Norm. I don't know why, possibly because at the time I was rebuking a "man" from K.Q.E.D. in San Francisco, who was attacking Michael Savage on the internet.
I realized that Norm Howard, who's name isn't Howard at all, in fact he is an admitted homosexual who always found my writings antagonistic to his Death ("life") Style.

That is why I am drawn to people like Laura Ingraham, who takes-on the real conservative issues, and that is why I like Alex Jones. I bought one of his videos years ago : 911 - The Road To Tyranny.
It's classic Alex Jones, great !
Anyways, I have his permission, he gives it, I am going to try and have audio clips and probably video clips from the movie that I think are important.....
LIKE :

The 12 video cameras that took photos of the Murrow building in Oklahoma City during the blast. Showing Middle East connections......More than Mc Veigh.
Alex Jones provides news clips from Oklahoma City TV station's news programs, investigating the bogus explosion in Oklahoma City....

That I plan to do !
Which Goes To Show That The Limbaugh (anti-Mc Carthy) and his minion are trying to keep the real facts away from you, by not talking about crucial issues.....
Michael Savage has ton of material and topics to pick-from.

.....and he chooses Food Talk or Boxing or Lord Help Us about a LOUSY DOG !

More on that later....

No they don't. You said that Kremer was arrested and deported in Jaunary of 2004. "CityLife" magazine interviewed him while he was working the the capacity of a Royal Thai Tourist police volunteer in 2008. There seems to be a four year discrepancy here. Do you really expect people to believe that he was in the Kingdom illegally, but volunteering his time working for the Royal Thai Police?

Robert, your stupidity is showing.

His campaign appears to have worked very well. Johnson's business was boycotted by so many Chiang Mai residents that he was force to sell his business, machinery, and vehicles for less than the cost of single used car. I'd say his campaign worked very well indeed. Now all of those consumer purchase their hummas, yougurt, and cheese from Jerusalem Falafel, which has taken over the supermarket shelf space previously used by Johnson's goods. Yes... very well indeed!

It's been suggested that you send him an e-mail and invite him to respond to you. Your continued posts to him in Usenet aren't even being have a work permit. Even volunteer work in Thailand requires a work permit. And that's a fact jack!

Do you REALLY think that the Royal Thai Police would let people WORK FOR

Say Hey Stevie:

One of several reasons you quit the tourist police is you would not pay for a work permit amounting to 1,900 baht. Sea traveler you are tighter then a clams ass! The Farang In Blue (FIB) outfit of yours cost 3,000 baht. We are still waiting for you to auction that cute lil

One of my co-workers is part of the radio club, I will have to ask him about it, from what impressions I have had in the past, it’s very much of a "Ham good old boys" but I am sure they will help me set up something if I join. I just realized that while I live in a apartment, I have a six foot Attic area that I never used, I still have to figure out how I will get it into the main room without drilling, but its at about 40 foot long, so I am sure that if I get into the hobby, I know where I can set up some sort of antenna. (I know it’s not as good as an outside antenna, but you have to use what you have.)

As for the Hammerlund, I will be keeping it around as I have the space and it might be a converstation starter, even if so far I have only been able to pick up the local AM station. (Live out in a rural area) I will get the Grundig G8 later today and start fiddling around.

Acrylic Plastics at 4185 Highway 80 deserves the Stupid nobel prize.That place is about one mile West of doggy's couch.I just now got back home from there.Those sapsuckers are CLOSED on Fridays! Screw that!

What it is, I need to replace three broken/cracked one foot by nine and three eights inches wide glass window panes in a window on one side of my house and I want to use rigid plastic instead of glass.
I already have a long piece of one quarter inch by nine inches wide of rigid plastic but it is too narrow.

The Elecraft K3 is a conventional receiver with knobs, etc. The final
IF is 15 kHz, and all the modulation and demodulation is done with DSP.
Does that make it an SDR? No. Same goes for the RX320. It is not a true SDR; it is an old fashioned superhet with a DSP demodulator.

Use the shield on the co-ax as the + on your antenna. That usually

You can better buy the pl-380, and adapt it to add plugin antenna, go to the 380 has 1,2,3,4, 6 khz filter, the 360 is on 3 always ...

but you can build your own antenna too

The silabs37 is a good serie, for FM (sensitivity+selectivity), but LW/AM/SW as well (filter)

Not the most sensitive receiver but it had excellent digital filters for its time. Very low distortion and great audio quality.

Guess they gave up on the KWZ-50. Anyone heard anything?

Here is another new to the listening shortwave radio question, and sorry if it been asked a million times.

I was messing around learning my new radio (the G8, smaller then I expected, and very nice so far) and at 16-17h UTC/GMT at feq 13755, I came across a broadcast that was not English nor Spanish, how can I find out which station I picked up? was it VOA India?

Of all the headlines in all the news publications on the planet this week, there's one that struck me as the strangest. In today's (8/13) British newspaper The Independent, http://www.independent.co.uk/news/world/asia/why-is-the-world-unmoved-by-the-plight-of-pak istan-2051331.html
the headline blares out at you: Why Is The World Unmoved By The Plight Of Pakistan?

Just to make totally sure you get the guilt-trip, right at the top of the article is a close-up picture of an old woman's tear-filled eye.

The story is strange for two reasons. First, "The World" in the headline clearly means "The West." Why are we the world? Did all the oil-rich Moslem countries like Saudi Arabia (which spends billions on turning Pakistani boys into terrorists in their Wahhabi medressahs or Moslem indoctrination schools) just fall off the edge of the earth?

Here's the second reason. Instead of this guilt-trip headline, why isn't there a headline in any major news publication asking: Why Is Obama Unmoved By The Plight Of The Unemployed?

Far - far - more heartbreaking for Americans than Paks up to their butts in mud is the sight of their fellow Americans hungry, broke, and desperate for a job they can't find.

Yet Zero doesn't care - he really actually couldn't care less. He'd rather be playing golf. He has no intention whatever of increasing employment other than put more people on government handouts (or government jobs which is the same thing). Most folks intuit this to be true but don't understand the actual mechanism engineered to make it true.

Ha, grew up in NC and so I have a better chance then most understanding Mississippian.

As for the G8, I did a check, and scanned around, and picked up 26 stations on shortwave and it not even dark yet. Rather happy with it so far.

And thanks for the list, and I started a log book of each one I listen too with time and feq and my estimation of what was on. Heard everything from a few VOAs, lots of CRI, time band at 15000, to more local stuff like WBCQ2. plus dozens of more obscure stuff.

MCCAIN: Well, you know, I admire so much Senator Obama's eloquence.
And you really have to pay attention to words.
Now, on the subject of free trade agreements. I am a free trader.
[...]
But let me give you another example of a free trade agreement that Senator Obama opposes. Right now, because of previous agreements, some made by President Clinton, the goods and products that we send to [democratic] Colombia, which is OUR LARGEST AGRICULTURAL IMPORTER OF OUR PRODUCTS, is -- there's a billion dollars that we -- our businesses have paid so far in order to get our goods in there.

Because of previous agreements, their goods and products come into our country for free [Tax free - Americans save money]. So Senator Obama, who has never traveled south of our border, opposes the Colombia Free Trade Agreement. The same country that's helping us try to stop the flow of drugs into our country that's killing young Americans.

And also the country that just freed three Americans that will help us create jobs in America because they will be a market for our goods and products without having to pay -- without us having to pay the billions of dollars -- the billion dollars and more that we've already paid.

Free trade with [democratic] Colombia is something that's a no-brainer. But maybe you ought to travel down there and visit them and maybe you could understand it a lot better.

OBAMA: Let me respond. Actually, I UNDERSTAND IT PRETTY WELL. The history in Colombia right now is that [MARXIST] LABOR LEADERS have been targeted for assassination on a fairly consistent basis [see below] and there have not been prosecutions.

And what I have said, because the free trade -- the trade agreement itself DOES HAVE labor and environmental protections, but we have to stand for human rights [for marxists] and we have to make sure that violence isn't being perpetrated against [marxist] workers [What about marxist perpetrators?] who are just trying to organize for their [marxist] rights, which is why, for example, I supported the Peruvian Free Trade Agreement which was a well-structured agreement. [NOTE: The Peruvian FTA was based on the Andean Trade Preference Act. In 1991, under the George H. W. Bush administration, the United States enacted the Andean Trade Preference Act. The program was renewed in 2002 by the George W. Bush administration as the Andean Trade Promotion and Drug Eradication Act. OBAMA did nothing! He is an obfuscator!]

MCCAIN: Well, let me just [say] that... Senator Obama doesn't want a free trade agreement with our best ally in the region but wants to sit down across the table without precondition with [communist dictator] Hugo Chavez [a murderer], the guy who has been helping [marxist] FARC [drug cartell], the terrorist organization.

Free trade between ourselves and [democratic] Colombia, I just recited to you the benefits of concluding that agreement, a billion dollars of American dollars that could have gone to creating jobs and businesses in the United States, opening up those markets.

...I don't think there's any doubt that Senator OBAMA WANTS TO RESTRICT TRADE AND HE WANTS TO RAISE TAXES. And the last president of the United States that tried that was Herbert Hoover, and we went from a deep recession into a depression.

We're not going to follow that path when I'm president of the United States.

In 2003 Colombian President Alvaro Uribe accused Colombian NGOs of “politicking at the service of terrorism.” “Every time a security policy is carried out in Colombia to defeat terrorism, when terrorists start feeling weak, they immediately send their spokesmen to talk about human rights.”

In 2002 over 40 Democrat members of Congress signed a letter to Secretary of State Colin Powell alleging "human rights violations" by the Government of Colombia in its war against the drug-running, marxist guerrilla terrorist Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces, FARC, established as the military wing of the Colombian Communist Party. This letter, published worldwide and used as pro-FARC anti-Government of Colombia propaganda, made no mention of marxist FARC's thousands of murders, atrocities and support from Cuban Marxist dictator Fidel Castro and from Venezuela's Marxist caudillo Hugo Chavez. The letter urged Secretary Powell "to take our concerns into account when determining whether to approve additional military aid for Colombia this year."
http://www.ciponline.org/colombia/02072301.htm

The daring rescue this past summer of French-Colombian politician Ingrid Betancourt and 14 other hostages (including three Americans) by Colombian commandos is cause for rejoicing. As Colombian President Alvaro Uribe put it, the rescue mission was "an unbelievable military achievement." It marked yet another huge victory for Colombia in its war on terrorism and another embarrassing defeat for the country's main leftist guerrilla group--known by its Spanish acronym, FARC--which had been holding Betancourt since 2002.

During the six years of her captivity, Colombia was transformed. Murders, kidnappings, and terrorist attacks have all plunged dramatically. The FARC has been devastated by combat deaths and desertions; its remaining forces inhabit remote camps deep in the Colombian jungle, far away from the urban areas. As a result, foreign investment is pouring into the biggest cities. The World Bank has lauded Colombia for its economic reforms, which helped GDP grow by 6.8 percent in 2006 and by more than 7 percent in 2007.

When we consider the progress made under President Uribe (who was first elected in 2002), it is appalling that the U.S. Congress has refused to approve a free trade agreement (FTA) with Colombia, ostensibly due to concerns over violence. By any serious measure, Colombia is a far less violent place today than at any time in recent years. Democratic House leaders argue that Colombia has not done enough to stop attacks on trade unionists. That depends on the meaning of the word "enough": According to official Colombian statistics, murders of trade unionists declined from 196 in 2002 to 26 in 2007. Uribe established a special government-funded program to protect union members from violence, and there is no question that their safety has increased enormously.

Unfortunately, American labor unions--a bulwark of the Democratic party--are strongly opposed to the free trade pact. (Never mind that the Free Trade Agreement would mostly benefit U.S. farmers and exporters.) If the deal has any chance of winning congressional approval, it will happen after the 2008 election.

Like most Democrats, Barack Obama has come out against the Colombia Free Trade Agreement and has chastised the Uribe administration for not doing more to reduce violence. Though Obama speaks often of his desire to improve U.S. credibility abroad, the Democrats' treatment of Colombia is having precisely the opposite effect. Uribe is our closest ally in Latin America. If Congress is willing to humiliate him, what message does that send to other countries in the region?

If Obama saw the results on the ground in Colombia, he would be less inclined to denounce Uribe over human rights. John McCain was in Colombia last summer (the same week Betancourt was rescued).

Since 2000, the United States has spent billions of dollars on "Plan Colombia," an aid package designed to help Colombia stamp out narcotics trafficking. Though it was expanded by President Bush, Plan Colombia began as a Clinton administration initiative that enjoyed strong bipartisan backing in Congress. In other words, close cooperation with Bogotá is not a "Bush policy."

Colombia is located in a region where Communist Venezuelan leader Hugo Chávez is trying to spread radical populism. Americans should affirm their support for a robust U.S.-Colombia partnership--even if it angers some prominent socialist Democrats, Liberal Fascist Neo-Communists and the marxist AFL-CIO crowd.

In other words, ObaMao does not give a damn about working Americans. NO! The only thing he cares about are his marxist comrades in the Communist Party International:

Recovered Emails Detail the FARC's International Support

Email messages linking the Colombian Marxist guerilla insurgency (known by its Spanish acronym, FARC) to POLITICIANS, UNION ACTIVISTS AND LEFT-WING POLITICAL PARTIES IN NORTH AMERICA have revealed a network of supporters spanning several continents, and have kept tensions high between Colombia and some of its neighbors.

http://www.worldpoliticsreview.com/article.aspx?id=2742

ObaMao doesn't want to save no stinkin' white ass blue collar union workers. HELL NO! He wants to save the MARXIST MURDERERS who run the Communist Unions and who have ties with the drug cartel, the Columbian Marxist FARC, who are running cocaine into the noses of your sons and daughters.

In his own words ObaMao admits to being a CrAcKhEaD!

In the early days of the War on Terror, back when the United States was only fighting one war, in Afghanistan, Deputy Secretary of State Richard Armitage made a bold statement: “Hezbollah may be the ‘A-Team of terrorists,’” Armitage said, referring to the Lebanese-based,

Iranian-controlled organization, “and maybe al-Qaeda is actually the ‘B’-Team.”

http://www.cbsnews.com/stories/2003/04/18/60minutes/main550000.shtml

Hezbollah has certainly been killing Americans for longer than al-Qaeda has — beginning in 1983 with the truck bombing of the Marine barracks in Beirut which killed 241 Marines. As recently as June 2006, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State David Satterfield told reporters that Hezbollah teams were involved in attacking U.S.-led coalition forces in Iraq.

http://www.washingtoninstitute.org/templateC05.php?CID=2716

Now, in an alarming new development, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) has broken apart an international drug smuggling and money laundering ring which links Hezbollah to the Colombian cocaine cartels though a Lebanese operative named Shukri Mahmud Harb.

http://www.jamestown.org/terrorism/news/article.php?articleid=2374525

This is the first time the U.S. has tied a terrorist organization to a major cocaine cartel. “The profits from the sale of drugs went to finance Hezbollah,” says Gladys Sanchez, the chief investigator for the special prosecutor’s office in Bogotá. The DEA took the lead on the investigation, which went by the code name Operation Titan.

According to documents unsealed by a federal magistrate in Miami last week, Harb, who lived in Bogotá and went by the alias “Taliban,” acted as the money man between the cocaine cartels and the terror organization. Described as a “world-class money-launderer,” Harb’s illegal financial transactions have spanned the globe — from Latin America to Asia — with a cut being diverted to fund terror.

http://www.miamiherald.com/news/southflorida/story/762200.html

“Harb traveled frequently to Syria, Egypt, and Lebanon, and his arrest occurred when he was about to leave Bogotá for Syria,” the Miami Herald reported last weekend. Also arrested in Operation Titan were 21 individuals in Colombia and “90 others in Panama, Guatemala, Lebanon, Hong Kong, and the United States.” According to the Colombian special prosecutor’s office, investigators analyzed more than 700,000 intercepted phone conversations from 370 tapped cell phone lines. Two other Middle Eastern men were also charged — a Jordanian named Ali Mohamad Abdul Rahim and a second Lebanese national named Zacaria Hussein Harb.

http://www.miamiherald.com/news/southflorida/story/762200.html

This new partnership will no doubt raise complications for President-elect Barack Obama in his proposed plans to open diplomatic talks with Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad. “Hezbollah in Lebanon is a proxy of Iran,” says former Middle East CIA operative Robert Baer http://www.npr.org/templates/story/story.php?storyId=95285396 in his new book, The Devil We Know. “It follows to the letter Iranian orders.”

http://www.amazon.com/Devil-We-Know-Dealing-Superpower/dp/0307408647

This means that Iran is co-sponsoring Hezbollah along with the only global organization able to consistently smuggle tons of illegal goods into every single industrialized nation in the world including America – on a daily basis. Toss the Colombian cocaine cartels’ newest mode of transport into the mix – stealthy semi-submersible submarines, or “drug subs” – and the national security ramifications in the Iran-Hezbollah-Colombia cocaine cartel triumvirate grow exponentially.

...these drug subs are built in the “FARC-controlled jungles of Colombia” and have rapidly become a dangerous and “highly effective asymmetrical vehicle of conveyance.” As the war on drugs and the war on terror begin to increasingly overlap...

http://pajamasmedia.com/blog/drug-subs-david-and-goliath-on-the-high-seas/

Which is exactly what the terrorists – ‘A’-Team and ‘B’-Team members alike – already know.

Obama's Disturbing Muslim Outreach

Obama's Muslim Outreach Coordinator, Mazen Asbahi, resigned in August after only ten days in his position, when it was revealed that he had ties to groups associated with the Muslim Brotherhood.

http://online.wsj.com/public/article_print/SB121797906741214995.html
http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6386

The question is no longer about what kind of judgment was used in bringing Asbahi on a campaign that has been plague with questionable advisors and mentors, but whether Asbahi has actually left.

Asbahi's official stint on the Obama team ended when it came to light that he was one of six trustees of Allied Asset Advisors Funds, http://www.secinfo.com/dR972.59y.c.htm

a subsidiary the North American Islamic Trust (NAIT)

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=7423

and an advisor to the Dow Jones Islamic Fund. Both NAIT and Dow Jones Islamic Fund fall under the umbrella of Islamic Society of North America (ISNA).

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/groupProfile.asp?grpid=6178

NAIT, which owns nearly a third of all U.S. mosques and Muslim centers, http://www.religionnewsblog.com/news.php?p=4563&c=1

many funded by the Saudi government, advocates a radical form of Islam. In fact, a Chicago Tribune investigation revealed that NAIT played an important role in the takeover of a Chicago-area mosque by Islamic fundamentalists who replaced the more moderate leaders. (Struggle for the soul of Islam; Hard-liners won battle for Bridgeview mosque," Chicago Tribune, February 8, 2004)

http://www.chicagotribune.com/news/local/chi-0402080265feb08,0,6712137,full.story

In a report annotated by almost 500 sources, http://globalmbreport.com/wpcontent/uploads/2008/03/20080127_extremism_and_isna.pdf

the Global Muslim Brotherhood Daily Report concludes that ""ISNA was created in the matrix of early organizations design to propagate Saudi/ Muslim Brotherhood fundamentalism throughout the world... ISNA and its key leaders have a disturbing record of association with organizations and individuals that are accused and/or convicted of providing assistance to terrorist organizations as defined by the U.S State Department... The largest body of evidence concerning these associations relates to ISNA's support of the Palestinian terrorist groups Hamas and Palestinian Islamic Jihad."

As with his other radical associations (William Ayers, Samantha Power, Reverend Wright), Mazen Asbahi may be quietly waiting behind the scenes to resume his place when the election is over.

Investor's Business Daily reports

http://www.investors.com/editorial/IBDArticles.asp?artsec=16&issue=20080825 that Asbahi "has not stopped working on behalf of Obama." They quote the "former" coordinator as saying that, "despite his official exit he was still "110%" behind Obama and that he was participating in campaign conference calls on Muslim outreach." Leaving the campaign was a "strategic decision," according to Asbahi.

This "strategic" decision brings to mind other similar strategic decisions by Obama. In an article How Barack Obama learned to love Israel, (The Electronic Intifada, 4 March 2007)

his friend Ali Abunimah

http://www.discoverthenetworks.org/individualProfile.asp?indid=1426 criticizes Obama's suddenly positive public expressions about Israel. Abunimah comes to understand Obama's strategy when the two men run into each other. "As he [Obama] came in from the cold and took off his coat, I went up to greet him. He responded warmly, and volunteered, ‘Hey, I'm sorry I haven't said more about Palestine right now, but we are in a tough primary race. I'm hoping when things calm down I can be more up front.' He referred to my activism, including columns I was contributing to The Chicago Tribune critical of Israeli and US policy.

Associates who unnerve, if not terrify, most Americans may be temporarily put aside for "strategic" campaign purposes, but who will be influencing the course of the nation if there is an Obama Whitehouse and the President is finally up front?

1264. Davis's Research (lol) and Promise of SKYPE Calls to Trolls (archives)

Hey Dave, errrr, Steve...Herre's your FAILED Research...
(from the archives with promise to Skype Call the Trolls)

(David wrote)...
I decided to do an ISP search before I went any further.
Interestingly enough three of the troll IPs originate in the area of Belleview, Washington. That is the home area of Scott Koplin and K.Michael Young.

Again using the Advanced search function of Google, I began looking up the names of the people listed in another post, again removing posts made by these trolls from the search results.

Quite a few hits for David Leonard Arthur. Twice convicted of child sexual abuse in Australia, page one on Australia's Sex Offender's list.

Several hits about Scott Koplin. Besides being a drain on the state and chronically unemployed, he started his own business making some scuba related item but the business went belly up. I guess he got fired from his own business too.

Plenty of hits about Robert Johnson. It looks as if he was pretty much run out of business on a rail by the local business people in Chiang Mai, his business selling for next to nothing. He had to be physically removed from a meeting of the 'Chiang Mai Expats Club' when he threatened the lives of its members.

Not too much about Young, other than some comments made about him when he tried claiming knowledge of Micronesian cultural norms and got it completely wrong. I guess he was laughed out of the groups. There are 6 different listings for a Michael Young in the Belleview, Washington area, but this being a weekend, I figure I'd wait until Monday to try calling the Trolls.
Skype makes it just about free, so why not?

Very little on Timothy Willis. I can find one who is listed as a teacher in a Japanese University, which according to some Usenet posts is where he is, but...

Just like Steve ehhhh David, Born to Lose!
I think I can speak for all the Trolls in saying that we are all Kind of looks and sounds like an upgrade of the analog Grundig S350DL, making it a lot more like the RP2100. At least the Chinese seem to be interested in improving their portables. I'm now waiting on the Tecsun

PL660 and the RP3100 to see if their sync implementation improves over the Grundig G3.

Yes those military folks that is a handout. Paying those mililtary

Plus we pay for trips around the world for them.

Sheesh.

Why do you hate our military? Is it because the commander in chief is Yeah right! I can see it now!

Dear sister in law, go for a trip with my husband. Yes, you can sit on his knee, tolerate his wandering hands and put up with his strange desire to remain incognito. I trust you!

Only if you like the "Transgendered Isaan Look".

I prefer my women to look like "real women" with appropriate delicate features! For gods sake, look at "her" hands! They are larger than the hands of most males I know! What's the bet "her" feet are similarly gross? Looks like she might have had an op to get rid of the prominent adam's apple as well. Did they manage to get "her" voice a few octaves higher? I wonder if larbgai prefers his "partner" post nip and tuck or complete with cue stick and rack???

Check out the sunglasses and weird getup he's wearing! I suppose that figures though since his activities on newsgroups point to a definite weird quirk in his character.

Yes they certainly do make quite the lovely couple don't they. Lord only knows what the photographer thought when taking that picture - I'm surprised he was able to keep the shot in focus considering how difficult it must have been not to fall over with laughter looking at the way he was dressed.

Liberty Net: August 7, 2010

http://3950.net/2010/08/liberty-net-august-7-2010/

by Kevin Strom, WB4AIO

THERE WERE some propagation anomalies that affected the Liberty Net this week, but check-ins these days are from so many different areas that the conversation and debate is always vibrant ï¿½ whether the skip is short or long.

Here are just a few of the topics discussed on the Liberty Net this week:

ï¿½ A recent viral email presents the stark difference between thriving, civilized Detroit and A-bomb-devastated Hiroshima 65 years ago ï¿½ and todayï¿½s thriving, beautiful Hiroshima and African-devastated Detroit. See http://tinyurl.com/23vz8fd and particularly http://tinyurl.com/2zj6f (38 minutes)

ï¿½ In an under-reported environmental disaster, a bizarre extreme cold front has caused large numbers of wildlife deaths in Argentina and Bolivia. (1 hour 17 minutes)

ï¿½ Why hasnï¿½t Obama been held to account for failing to end the wars for Zionism in the Middle East? Why are Americans letting him get away with ï¿½reclassifyingï¿½ soldiers ï¿½ on paper only ï¿½ to make it look like troop levels are lower? (1 hour 39 minutes)

ï¿½ A courageous and decorated military flight surgeon is risking his career to expose the illegitimacy of the Obama presidency: He has refused deployment to the illegal war in the Middle East on the grounds that no order from Obama can be legal. He has been imprisoned without trial and is now prevented from speaking to anyone, including his lawyer. What is the regime in Washington so afraid of? (2 hours 5 minutes)

ï¿½ More evidence is emerging that Obamaï¿½s records have been ï¿½cleansedï¿½ of the evidence that he was, and possibly still is, a citizen of a foreign country. By the laws of biology and of the Founding Fathers, of course, he could never have been an American citizen, regardless of where he was born ï¿½ a nation is a biological entity, not a geographic one; and the Founding Fathers explicitly stated that only those of European descent could become Americans. (2 hours 8 minutes)

ï¿½ Is the government serious about the so-called ï¿½lawï¿½ that forbids us to collect our own rainwater? Or are they merely testing us to see how far they can push their tyranny? (2 hours 29 minutes)

ï¿½ Will another false flag terror event be engineered so that a new war (against yet another of Israelï¿½s enemies, this time Iran) can be started? Will this cause Obama to gain ï¿½bi-partisanï¿½ support since he would become even more of a ï¿½war presidentï¿½? (2 hours 39 minutes)

ï¿½ Should Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac be liquidated and abolished? (2 hours 40 minutes)

ï¿½ Will selective ï¿½credit forgivenessï¿½ for certain voting blocs and minority groups be used as a vote-getting tool in the next election? Why shouldnï¿½t most ï¿½creditï¿½ be forgiven anyway, since itï¿½s based on money created out of nothing? (2 hours 42 minutes)

Thanks to Marty, N2IRJ, youï¿½re able to listen to the Liberty Net right now on your computer ï¿½ or download the file and listen on your portable mp3 player. And N2SAG operates a live feed and chat during Net times that lets you make an end run around jammers and a fickle ionosphere.

Join in or listen to the most exciting net on the amateur bands every Saturday night ï¿½ within 10 kHz or so of 3950 SSB, starting at 10PM Eastern Time.

Our thanks go to W1WCR for his hard work and courage in keeping an important part of the amateur radio service alive since 1974!

Brewer's droop hit you quite a long time ago and all your prick gets

Well... in all fairness I read through what you posted three times, but didn't see a single sentence where David said he was going to 'call ALL the trolls.' In fact, I can't find the word ALL used with the trolls anywhere in the post.
Maybe 'Hooked on Phonics' will be of some value, Scott.

Steve Kremer shot the photo when they visited his studio. He posted it to the web when Larbgai began his attack. I don't know why he didn't just send it on to New Zealand back then, but we can make up for that deficit now. No problem. Google Map show about six houses around the target address at the 'T' intersection, so only six envelopes and stamps will be needed... and of course, six copies of the photo. Perhaps with the question, "Can you identify this man?" printed along the top.

LOL, oh you've made my day Anon! Especially thinking about the look on the poor neighbors faces when they open the letter and are faced with the question, "can you identify this man"?! I can just see it now; Larb will be out walking the dog one morning and wonder why all his usually friendly neighbors are suddenly smirking from ear to ear! The realization will suddenly hit him that his comeuppance has been served - well and truly smile.

If only Kremer was here now to see all this going on. I can imagine quite a look of satisfaction upon his face. Not that he needs anybody else to fight his battles though, as by all reports he has on many occasions put this lot of inbreds firmly in their places.

* ROTFLMAO. Really Steve you are getting all mixed working all those sock puppets, much easier to post under your own name eh?
No trying to remember who said what. grin

Let me help you here, please confirm which of the following is LarbGai?
Is it your friend and fellow paedophile David Arthur or is it Craig Sutton the poor fellow you are about to send a few pictures to or what about the Mayor of Tauranga you reckoned I was a couple of years ago.
Am I or am I not gay? Personally I could'nt care either way as in reality (remember that Steve) you haven't got a clue who I am but I know who you are.
That pisses you off eh??????
Now I know you are short of the shekels Steve so I am willing to chip in a donation to help with the postage, just let me know.
Incidently why are you continuing with the misspelling of your own name? Hoping it misses Google counters eh?

Did you write this little gem and try to pass it off as the fat slags post??

If only Kremer was here now to see all this going on. I can imagine

Which one of you is lying?

It will most likely be two questions;
'Can you identify this man?' and
'Can you identify the gender of the person on his knee?'

I can just see it now;

I'd imagine he doesn't give a damn. He stopped bothering with the trolls over a year ago. These days he only posts in moderated groups. In fact, he made some very interesting posts just today in one of the knife forums!

> Not that he needs anybody

That is pretty much the reason they hate him so badly. Just look what he did to Robert Johnson. He turned Scott Koplin into the laughing stock of the scuba newsgroup, and is about to fry Larbgai. It's just too bad that all of them are too afraid to contact him and invite him here. THAT would be interesting!

- Kind of looks and sounds like an upgrade
- of the analog Grundig S350DL,

S450DLX -v- S35DL

? Speaker Size ?
-per Universal-Radio.Com "Ron's remarks . . .
http://www.universal-radio.com/catalog/portable/5450.html
But more importantly; the S450DLX has that "great audio" you expect from Grundig.

What Grundig should consider in future Radios like this is twin (2) Speakers 4" Large & 2" Small -a-la- the GE SuperRadio III : Using Dual Mono for AM & SW -but- for FM Stereo use the Large for the Left & Small for the Right. Yeah it is un-balance but it still has a better and dynamic sound then just plain 'mono'. -or- An optional Accessory Matching {Same Size} Speaker feature for the Right Channel using the Radio's built-in Speaker for the Left Channel.

Some of the old Grundig Radios had this Accessory {Detached} Matching Speaker feature for FM Stereo.

- making it a lot more like the RP2100.

Yeah sort of a 'blend' of the RP2100 & S350DL

Hopefully it has a larger built-in Ferrite Rod Antenna for AM/MW.

- At least the Chinese seem to be interested
- in improving their portables.

There are really the only ones that are still in the Consumer Mass-Market Radio Manufacturing Business. And Eton [Grundig] is still into the Marketing of Shortwave Radios to the World outside of China.

More webpages about the Eton S450DLX -imhothey should have used the Model # S450"DX"L ;-}
